They had no children, and the husband being a stoker on a railway, they were above the reach of want. Under these circumstances it seemed to the visitor that they might have attended to their religious duties at least to the extent of going to church on Sundays, and she ventured to intimate as much to the young woman, who was standing rather idly at the door. "Will you please walk in till I show you something?" was the woman's answer; and she conducted her visitor to the little kitchen, where her husband sat by the fire. He had just come home for half an hour to have his tea, and was watching the kettle with absorbing interest. He was, of course, in his working clothes, and his face and hands were of a deep oily black, after the manner of stokers.

"Now, ma'am," said the woman, pointing to him, "you see that there man; that's my husband, and I'm bound to do a part by him ain't I?" "Surely" said the visitor, anxious to uphold the duties of matrimony. "Very well, then; would you like to know how I pass my Sundays? A washing of he! Never a blessed mean of his he to wash himself through the week; out early and late, and half of the night, too, and blacker nor any crow all the while. Well on Sundays it is fitting and proper that he should try to look like a Christian, if he can, so he sets me to it after we eat our breakfast, with a bucketful of soapsuds and a scrubbing brush, and I rubs at him off and on all day, till my arms ache and he ain't much better than he wor; and then after we have our tea he says to me, 'Come, Sally, have another try, there's a brave wench,' and I goes at him again, and sluices down till you'd think a born nigger would come out white; and, if you'd believe me, ma'am, when I polishes him off, with a dry towel afore he goes to bed, he's only a light brown after all." What was to be said to such stubborn facts; especially when the good woman finished with the unanswerable argument, "So you, see, ma'm, them as wants to live religious has best not marry a stoker!"

Adventures of a Burglar.

[Vallejo (Cal.) Independent.]

A man tried to burglarize the house of a Mr. Smith, residing in the neighborhood of the railroad track, Sunday night, but was successfully foiled in the attempt. It seems that the fellow forced an entrance through the back kitchen door, by prying off the hasp, soon after the occupants of the house had retired. The burglar, after getting into the kitchen, commenced walking around the room. Mr. Smith, who had not yet gone to sleep, heard the fellow, but kept quiet. In a few moments more the burglar entered the half which leads directly to the sleeping apartment. About this time Smith had gotten out of bed, and arming himself with a boot-jack and one of his heavy boots, he awaited the approach of the other. It was as dark as tar, and as soon as the man came within striking distance, he let fly at him with his boot-jack, hitting him over the head. The fellow beat a hasty retreat, but not fast enough to escape the heavy boot, which was thrown after him. When he got into the kitchen he didn't know which way to turn, as he had closed the door when he came. Before he knew where he was, he had fallen over the stove, knocking half a dozen teakettles and pots off with him. This created such a terrible din that Smith thought four or five burglars were in his kitchen, and was afraid to follow. Lucky for the other that he did, for he had become so demoralized by the fall that he wasn't worth a cent for fighting. Getting on his feet again, he struck for the door wildly and this time came in contact with a rocking-chair, and fell head over heels into a tub of water. His splashing and floundering around in the tub of water terrified Smith more than ever, and he began to think his house was possessed of devils. The man at last found the door, and jumping down the steps, he ran across the yard like lightning and this time rushed into a small hen coop, which he knocked over, and killed several of the small hens. What happened to him after this no one knows. Suffice it to say, he has not shown himself around those parts since.

Profits of the Presidency.

The St. Louis Globe speaking about the expenses of the Executive Mansion, a subject which is troubling a large number of our contemporaries, says:

"The New York Sun, arguing against the recent increase of the President's salary cites the fact that Andy Johnson saved $70,000 out of his four years' salary, as a proof that the old rate of compensation was sufficient. Andy Johnson did not save $70,000, nor one-tenth of that sum, out of his Presidential salary. The money he had on deposit with Jay Cooke was the proceeds of the sale of railroad and State bonds which he owned when the war broke out. He had not realized on them at the time of his impeachment, and in consequence, although he had been three years in office, his friends had to raise money to help him defray the costs of his defence. He lived very unostentatiously at the White House, and yet his $25,000 per annum disappeared very readily. Nor is it true that Mr. Lincoln saved any considerable part of his salary. His estate was worth less than $100,000 when he died, and less than quarter of that was the product of salary savings. We believe there is record of only one President who saved money out of his $25,000—John Tyler—and he did it at the expense of his reputation as a gentleman."

—An imaginative Irishman gave utterance to this lamentation: "I returned to the halls of my fathers by night, and found them in ruins! I cried out aloud, 'My fathers, where are they?' An echo responded—"Is that you, Patrick McCarthy?"

A Ghost Story.

The Troy (N. Y.) Times relates the following as a narrative of facts: "A fortnight ago Thomas Campbell, who was temporarily acting engineer on the train that left Troy at 4:45 P. M., when passing Stoney lane, near the Aqueduct, saw a man standing between the tracks waving his hat and gesticulating vehemently. Campbell whistled "down brakes," and keeping his eye on the man, and being fearful of running over him, whistled again. While the speed of the train was being slackened the man seemed to vanish from sight. Campbell and his fireman both express a willingness to swear to the statement. They affirm that the man did not walk away; he vanished into the air. After the train arrived at Schenectady they related the circumstance to the other men employed on the train. There are several hypotheses by which this circumstance if it stood alone, could be explained. But we can offer no explanation for what follows.

"On Monday of this week, William Mower, the regular engineer on the train, saw on the same spot two human arms. When the train reached the place the arms disappeared. Tuesday evening the roof of the cab of the locomotive was struck by a stone which the engineer says could have come from only one direction—the sky. Wednesday evening John Lawrence, the engineer of the gravel train, at precisely the same spot, saw the arms. The hands attached thereto were not clenched as before, but were open and held two balls of glowing fire. Last evening, at exactly the same time and place, Lawrence discovered the body of a man lying across the track. In vain he essayed to stop the train. His efforts were futile. The locomotive and all the cars passed over the prostrate form. As speedily as possible the train was stopped, and all proceeded to the place where the form had been seen, expecting to see a bloody and mutilated corpse. They found nothing: not even a drop of blood. Then the conclusion forced itself upon the mind of the engineer that he had run over a ghost. He is an ardent Spiritualist, and he is positive in the belief that something about the occurrence was supernatural."

Sold Again.

Secretary Richardson has been frustrated in his plan of specie resumption. He proposed to exchange silver for currency, but orders poured in from all sides so thick and fast upon him that it would have been impossible to meet them. He will, continue, however, in some of the large cities, to pay out silver for government indebtedness at the rate of five dollars on each draft presented. There is at present about half a million in silver on hand. This result shows the folly of the theory of the instantaneous return to specie payments. With gold at 108 1-8 to 108 5-8 silver dimes were at a premium of 104, silver quarters and halves at 103 1-2, and the new silver trade dollars at 110 1-2. In this state of affairs Mr. Richardson could no more keep away part of his little silver reserve in the Treasury than he could dam up the Niagara river just above the falls. The same cause will prevent the resumption of gold payments, until the Secretary holds in his vaults gold enough to glut the market and bring down the premium.

—"Often," says G. L. Stoute, "look I back to the days of my childhood, when us boys used to play theatre in Hen Winkel's hay loft. The paths of these here boys has been somewhat diverse—some went into the grocery business, some to the penitentiary, while most of 'em went on the stage as reg'lar actors, but none of us ever amounted to much in the stage line, except myself and Ned Booth."

—The man who made a foolish purchase on the strength of an assurance from the seller that it he should be dissatisfied he would "consider him something," the next time he came to town, subsequently ascertained on application that he "considered him a darned fool."

Business Notices.

"A Dose in Time," &c.

If "a stitch in time saves nine," it is equally certain that a dose of a healthy tonic like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken at this inclement season of the year may save many an unpleasant twinge. A dose, however, is not sufficient. The system should be thoroughly charged with this genial vegetable stimulant and invigorant. Commence taking it with the commencement of the atmospheric changes which distinguish the winter from the autumn. Thereby you will avoid those disturbances of the digestive and secretive organs, and those painful diseases of the muscles and the nerves of sensation, which often render the period of the year which should be the merriest, a season of penance and disquietude. The extraordinary vigor and regularity which this exhilarating restorative imparts to the most important functions of the body, render it an invaluable remedy for nervous debility, constipation, indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and intermittent fevers.

A TRIUMPH OF MEDICAL ART.

Yes, a triumph we call it, when medicine can be so "fixed up" as to be pleasant to take and yet accomplish the object intended. Such a medicine is Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets, samples of which the writer procured and tested in his own family. The Pellets (little pills) are about one-fifth the size of an ordinary pill, made of highly concentrated root and herbal extracts, and sugar-coated.—Frankfort. (Ind.) Weekly Crescent. 7o1.

Local Matters.

Last Night of the Fair.

We learn that the fair at St. Mary's Church has been well enough patronized to warrant the managers in holding it till to-morrow evening when it will be brought to a close. The concert on Monday evening gratuitously given by Harlow's Naval Band was well attended notwithstanding the storm. The interest of the public in the Fair seems to be centred in the drawings. On Wednesday evening Mrs. J. J. Pickering on Middle street drew the beautiful oil painting of "Our Lord in his agony," and Miss Jenness, a sister of Mrs. Pickering drew a very handsome counterpane or bedspread. Thomas Sheridan drew the pretty chair donated by the Sheldon Brothers. The exciting event of the evening, however, was the rival contest on the part of the friends of the popular brewers for the elegant silver ice pitcher. Josiah Morrison, head brewer for Jones, had held the lead in the number of votes during the whole week; but on the home stretch Robinson's (Eldridge's brewer) friends rallied and closed the gap, and gave their man the pitcher by 100 majority. It was formally presented to Mr. Robinson in a few well chosen remarks by Rev. Canon Walsh. The other silver pitcher is being sharply striven for by the friends of George Lane and George Scott, George Taylor having been withdrawn from the field in the early part of the race. Wednesday evening, one enthusiastic supposer of Lane deposited one hundred votes at one time, and by the latest report from the Fair, we learn that Lane still leads. The gold-headed cane, which was to be presented to the one of the two mayorality candidates—Martin and Miller—who received the most votes, is likely to be withdrawn, for the lack of voters. It is perhaps as well so; as the man who receives the popular vote for Mayor is indeed sufficiently rewarded without the accompaniment of a gold-headed cane.

The following item was handed us by a little boy, Henry Becker. It is his own: "In the gale on Monday a schooner loaded with coal for Portsmouth, while coming in our harbor, got on the flats at Gerrish's Island. The tug boat Clara Bateman went to her assistance but failed to get her off. She will have to discharge a part of her cargo before she can be got off." R.

Queer justice: Otis A. Cate, of Portsmouth, not possessed of average intellect, gets twelve years in the State prison for setting fire to a barn, accidentally as he affirms; Edward S. Stokes, of New York, a man of brains, who thought himself above the common herd, is to enjoy a residence of four years in State prison, for killing a man, in self-defence as he asserts!

A "right-whale porpoise" or dolphin—not the dolphin of sailors and poets, which changes color when dying and afterwards kills its killers by poisoning them if they devour it, but the naturalists' dolphin—is on exhibition at C. Sullivan & Co.'s fish market. The unlucky "porp" ran too near a trawl at the Shoals in its pursuit of smaller fish, and was hooked near the eye.

Capt. Isaac Fall, of South Berwick, on Wednesday moved the household goods of a patron from that town to Kittery, where he stabled his team for the night; the horses were apparently all right when they were put up, but one of them, an animal valued at about $400, died before morning. Capt. Fall led with credit companies in the 27th and 32d regiments of Maine volunteers, during the war of the rebellion, and is very popular with his former comrades and present acquaintances. Sorry he lost his horse.

Mr. J. Drew informs us that the statement we copied from the Dover Democrat that several barrels of beer were hauled ashore and put into Nancy Drew's barn at Newington, and that a "Sunday drunk" followed, is untrue. Several men brought the floating barrels of beer ashore and stowed them in a joiner shop not on the land of Miss Drew. A guard was put over the fluid and the beer was not disturbed—so Joshua must have depended considerably on his imagination for an opportunity to show his descriptive powers, and is requested to do justice in the premises.

At a meeting of the general school committee on Wednesday evening it was unanimously voted to substitute the Duntonian system of writing in our public schools for that of the Spencerian method. The superiority of the former over the latter consists of an easier gradation of the principles of penmanship and an important accompaniment of a writing primer, which is so ingeniously arranged as to enable the youngest scholar in the first division of our primary departments to undertake the task of learning to write, while hitherto it has commenced in the intermediate schools.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON

And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th,
High School Reunion, 5th,
The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at the Chronicle Office, J. H. Foster's Bookstore, and at Wm. R. Preston's.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-THREE (219,753) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids generally hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced For the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the principal name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

PREPARED BY

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,
are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. They effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

A Devil Fish in a Bottle.

The San Diego (Cal.) Union says: A miner from Arizona, whose name we were unable to ascertain, went fishing down off Culverwell's wharf between four and five o'clock last evening. He had been fishing but a short time when he drew up on the wharf an ordinary-sized black liquor-bottle. He was not frightened at the bottle, but he was wonderfully perplexed as to what had "bitten," and how and by whom the bottle had been attached to his line, about a foot above the hook. The miner called out, and several other persons who were fishing near him ran to see the wonderful catch. An examination showed that there was a devil-fish inside the bottle, and that one of its arms extended out of the neck, and was firmly entwined around the line. The devil-fish had probably crawled into the bottle when young, and finding it a nice, comfortable residence, he had committed the indiscretion of remaining there until he had grown so large he could not get out. He had grown to nearly the size of his glass house, and, in fact, was rather cramped for room. The miner was very much elated over his prize, and, in spite of the protestations of the crowd, he broke the bottle, to get a better view of the monster.

It is lamentable to see how the tide of popular opinion, in its ebb from monopolies sweeps along the judiciary in its current. Here is a very outrageous case of it. A New York man named Campbell was shovelling snow from his walk on Essex street last winter. The president of a horse-railroad company came along, and ordered the man to shovel also from the track in front of his house. The man declined on the ground that as he had not put the snow on the track he was not bound to remove it. The president of the monopoly became indignant, and ordered a policeman to arrest the man. The policeman obeyed, confiding to his prisoner on the way to the station house that if he refused the company would effect his removal. The next morning the man was discharged from custody, the police justice refusing to entertain the complaint. Campbell then sued the president for damages, and the suit has just been decided in favor of the plaintiff with an award of $520.

Those "Heathen Chinee."

The Springfield Republican says that there has been considerable ill-feeling among the Chinese workmen in Mr. Sampson's shoe factory at North Adams for some time. As they have become better acquainted with their surroundings, they have grown extremely jealous of Charlie Sing, their manager, from the start, and some of them have taken a notion that he was cheating them, that they could do better for themselves, etc. One of them, one Ah Coon accordingly tried the experiment of buying some supplies and peddling to the others; and he was promptly discharged. He declared, however, that he wouldn't go, and appeared at his post as usual Monday morning. When he was ordered out his partisans left their work, shoe knives in hand, and threatened violence to that extent that Superintendent Chase sent for State constable Hunter, who with another officer arrested Ah Coon, who was inciting a general riot. On the way to the lock-up the officers and their prisoner were followed by the enraged Chinamen, who demanded the prisoner. Their demand was accompanied with threats of vengeance if not complied with. They crowded into the lock-up in great numbers and could not be induced to go away and mind their business. They would not budge an inch when a pistol was presented to their heads, but began a fight for their comrade. They soon found out their mistake, for the bystanders were called upon to knock down and drag out, which they did till not a Celestial was in the lock-up save the one arrested, who was there at latest accounts, while his champions are at their quarters in the shops. It is feared that this is not the end of the trouble, and Charlie Sing, who tried to quiet them, was so alarmed for his safety that he kept an officer with him all day. Eight Chinamen were discharged for disorderly conduct and neglect of duty, two of whom came to Springfield on the evening train.

Explosion of a Fallacy.

The popular fallacy that house-plants poison the air of a room by the exhalation of carbonic acid during the night has been demonstrated by recent experiments of Prof. Kedzie, of the Michigan Agricultural College. To make as conclusive a test as possible, instead of taking the air from a room containing a few plants only, the Professor gathered it from the college green-house, where more than 6,000 plants were growing. The room had been closed for more than twelve hours; and, if the plants exhaled carbonic acid to an injurious extent, the analysis of the air from such a room would certainly disclose this fact. Three specimen of this imprisoned air were gathered shortly before sunrise, from different parts of the room, the analysis of which gave 4.11, 4.00, 4,00 parts of carbonic acid in 10,000 of air, or an average of 4.03 in 10,000, while the out door air contained 4 parts in 10,000, thus proving that the air in the greenhouse was better than "pure country air."

Readables.

The Stokes jury on the first ballot voted nine for acquittal, two for manslaughter in the second degree and one for murder.

Mr. Dos Passos says that though he had hoped for an acquittal of Stokes, yet both Mr. Tremaine and himself feel well satisfied with the verdict rendered, and adds that they shall make no effort to secure a new trial. It is believed that Stokes will yield to the sentence of the law without giving the courts further trouble, though at the time of his sentence he expressed great dissatisfaction.

It is reserved for frigid little Iceland to get ahead of every other part of this side of the planet in celebrations. This island celebrates, not her centenary, but her millenary, in 1874. The first settlement in the country was made in 874 near the present capital, Reykjavik, and the people propose to recognize the thousandth anniversary of the event by a grand jollification.

Rev. J. F. Walker, pastor of the Calvary Episcopal Church, Chicago, broke down, when about to preach his sermon on Sunday week, and explained that he had had nothing to eat that day or the day before but bread and butter and tea, and he was afraid that on going home he should not find even that. His congregation at once dispersed and have since decided not to let him starve.

Political discussions continue to be carried to great lengths in Mississippi. Gen. Ames spoke at Greenville last week, and the Jackson Pilot prints the following story in that connection: "Gov. Alcorn made his appearance there, arranged for an out-door speaking, secured a band, and drummed together quite an assemblage, but when it was known to the people that Gen. Ames was to be heard at the Court-house, so many left Bombastes' circus that he had to adjourn his meeting and go to the Court-house also. There Gen. Ames made a most masterly effort, commencing one o'clock and closing at night giving the opposition a thorough overhauling, which rendered it necessary for Alcorn to hold over until the next day, when a rain came up, throwing additional cold water upon his cause, and making his attempt entirely abortive and nugatory."

The campaign in Virginia continues to be waged with vigor on both sides, and numerous political meetings are being held, the speakers in nearly all cases being Virginians. The Richmond State Journal reports that all through the south-western portion of the State the republicans have made large gains in the registration just closed, many colored men being registered for the first time. In Smyth County alone the registration shows a gain of 280 colored and twenty odd whites, who will vote the Hughes ticket, against six whites added for the Kemper ticket. From the best informed sources the State Journal feels assured that the republican ticket will come out of the south-west with a majority which will make victory to the State sure.

When Congress amended the tariff act by relieving the workingman's beverages, tea and coffee, of the import duty, there was a prolonged and windy denunciation of that particular reduction of the tariff as one that was only a pretense, and that had in it nothing of a practical result in the shape of pecuniary advantage to the tax-payers of the country at large. But now the figures of the year since the tax was taken off have come to hand, and they show a reduction of receipts, as compared with the previous year, of over $7,000,000 from the admission of tea and coffee duty-free.

Too Much Credit.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette tells a very amusing anecdote about a former city editor of the Enquirer, named Bennett, which illustrates a phase of journalistic enterprise never known in New England, but which was common enough at the West when Artemus Ward was a "local" on a Cleveland newspaper, and Mark Twain a gatherer of river news on the Ohio. When news was scarce Bennett was in the habit of inventing extraordinary items for his department, a favorite resource being to make children fall from the landing of the Newport ferry-boat, into the river, and to have them rescued by his acquaintances. He had honored one Mr. Kellum (Celia Burleigh's first husband) several times in this way, when the fictitious savior of drowning innocents became tired of the joke and at last called at the Enquirer office and demanded that it should not be repeated. He was assured that his request would be complied with, and so it was in its letter, but hardly in its spirit, for the next day the Enquirer contained a paragraph to the effect that a beautiful little girl, the daughter of a prominent citizen of Newport, had fallen from the ferry-boat into the river, and that Mr. Kellum, who was standing by and could easily have saved the child from a watery grave, refused to render the least assistance. When Kellum, boiling with rage, went to the Enquirer to seek an explanation of what he had begun to regard in the light of a persecution, his threats of vengeance were suddenly stopped by Bennett's taking off his coat and coolly saying: "You're not a bad fellow in your way, Kellum, but I can't stand any interference with my department. If I make any statement in the Enquirer, you must not come round here contradicting it. That isn't journalism, you see, and it must be put a stop to at any price." Kellum's wrath instantly subsided, and the two men remained friends until Bennett's death.

—A bunch of shingles fell from a wagon on the Troy ferry boat, and struck fairly upon the head of a colored woman, who said: "Y' oughter' b' shame to muss a cullud womn's har dat way. I wish de shingles fell ovahboard!"

The Memorial Monument.

Col. A. H. Hoyt, editor of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, has a lengthy communication in the Dover Enquirer of last week, portions of which we copy:

"It is reported that, since the reunion in Portsmouth, a project has been started in that city for the erection of a monument to commemorate the settlement of the State, and that Odiorne's Point, on the coast in the northeastern part of the town of Rye, is named as the most suitable place for this memorial.

It is to be hoped that those who have undertaken this matter will be able to secure the erection of a suitable monument, but not in the locality indicated.

In the first place, Odiorne's Point has no special claims either from its situation or from its historical associations. The settlement there was temporary almost, while the settlements in Portsmouth, Dover, and other places in the neighborhood, were coeval, or followed so closely upon that at Odiorne's Point as to entitle them to be regarded as contemporaneous.

In any and every strictly historical sense the first settlement of New Hampshire took place in what was known in 1623 and for generations after, as "the country of the Piscataqua." This included the territory bordering on the river of that name from its mouth up to and including Dover, and probably all the region bordering on the Great Bay; so that it embraced Kittery and Eliot, in Maine, Dover, Durham, the Newmarkets, Exeter, Stratham, Greenland, Newington, Portsmouth, Newcastle, and a part of Rye, in New Hampshire.

In the second place, the proposed location is out of the line of travel, and out of sight of even the greater portion of the population of the region, as well as out of the range of convenient access by the general public. It would be seen, very likely, by such mariners as sail along that part of our coast, or enter the river; and it would also attract the few historical students and antiquaries who should take the trouble to travel miles enough to see it.

Of course the chief object to be secured by the monument is not to benefit the cod, bluefish, and mackerel that frequent the neighboring waters; or to excite the wondering gaze of innocent horses and unhistorical cows that may find a pasture in the unsocial grassplots about the Point; although if we could be sure that these were the descendants of the cattle that Capt. John Mason sent over from England, and which Norton, one of his unfaithful stewards, drove away and sold in Massachusetts, we might be more content with this location.

The true object of a visible monument of the character proposed is to impress the men, women and children now living, as well as those that will succeed them in after ages, with the most important and interesting event in the history of the State. It is the appeal of History to the best feelings and highest instincts of rational beings. For such it will have a deep significance and a perpetual discourse.

The monument, therefore, ought to be placed within the limits of the city of Portsmouth. There it will be daily seen by thousands, not only by the old but by the young; not only by residents, but by visitors; and there it will also be cherished and protected.

The citizens of Dover have no less interest in the early history of the State than those of Portsmouth. As you have correctly stated, the first settlers of both places came over in the same ship, or ships, and were of the same stock. They were pioneers together in the same great labor, and are entitled to equal honor."

Newspaper Blunders.

The Morning Star, published in Dover, is usually well arranged as to the kind of matter on each of its different pages, but in its last issue, the matter for the seventh page was put on the third and that for the third put on the seventh. Consequently, too, the paging figures were disarranged.

Some papers of this State have stated that the town history of Windham has been published, and that the late Governor Andrew of Massachusetts was a native of that town. It appears that the Windham meant is the town of that name in Rockingham County. But no history of that town has been published. Gov. Andrew was not a native of New Hampshire. He was born in Windham, Me. Probably a history of that town has been published.

A writer in one of the papers states that Rev. Mr. Chandler, appointed to the Methodist church in Londonderry at the last conference, has accepted a call to the Congregational church in Hampton Falls. It is not so, but in Hampton.

A writer in Zion's Herald, who lives in New Hampshire, says the South Parish in Portsmouth, (Unitarian,) has been by turns Episcopal, Orthodox, Puritan and Unitarian. We would like to ask him what he means by the denominational name Orthodox. We do not know of any denomination of that distinctive name. Secondly, was this society never sound in the faith only when it was what he calls "Orthodox?" Thirdly, when was this Society known as Episcopal, or Puritan? No further catechism till these questions are answered.

Then here comes the Free Baptist Register for 1874 containing the statistics of the denomination. No minister is put down for the Northwood church nor the church in Fremont. Both have pastors who have been there for years. J. F.

State News.

Exeter wants the Exeter river widened and otherwise improved, believing that thereby the old commercial prosperity of Newmarket, South Newmarket and Exeter can be restored. The river is so narrow that only vessels of the lightest raft can navigate it, although in the older days vessels of large tonnage were built and launched at Exeter and neighboring towns.

A Proclamation

FOR A DAY OF PUBLIC THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE.

In grateful acknowledgment of God's mercies the past year; in honored observance of a custom long endeared to us, and now becoming national; and in conformity to the recommendation of the President of the United States, I do, with the advice of the Executive Council, appoint Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, as a day of Public Thanksgiving and Praise to Almighty God to be observed throughout this State;—and I recommend that on that day the people of the State assemble in their houses of public worship, and in their quiet homes, with re-united families, acknowledge their obligations to God and render thanks for the good they have and prayer for the good they seek, recommending especially the duties we owe our fellow-men—charity, generosity, kindness and brotherly love.

E. A. STRAW.

France vs. Prussia.

[Paris cor. Providence Journal.]

I wish that the civil institutions of France were as sound, stable and reliable as her Bank. I wish I could hope that her wounded pride would be healed as soon as her financial embarrassments promise to be. The conditions of peace made and exacted by Prussia were mortifying and humiliating to the last degree. With her halls and palaces full of banners and trophies wrested in battle from surrounding nations, with the memory of but one defeat of note (Waterloo) in eighty years, and that when all these nations were allied against her, with such a prestige, such a history, how could it well be otherwise? To see the armies of a single nation crossing her lines, overcoming her best armies, making her Emperor a prisoner, and then marching hundreds of miles without obstruction, to the very gates of her capital, occupying the halls of her Assembly, the palaces of her kings, the barracks of her great armies, and dictating terms of peace to her half-starved rulers from the seat of her empire, was indeed mortifying to a nation, which had so long been proud of her prowess and her arms. I doubt very much if this foolish pride has been whipped out of her. Could she but learn wisdom by the things she has suffered, and a proper humility by the chastisement she had received, so that she would no more act the bully among the nations of the earth, it were well. Heretofore she has not been willing to endure for any length of time a wise and peaceful reign, like Louis Phillippe's, or a republican rule, as wise and peaceful, like that of Thiers. She ever wants a hero, and will accept him when he appears, without regard to dynastic claims, though he be a man.

"Content to wade through slaughter to a throne."

It is evident that she is now nursing her wrath against Prussia. The great Column Vendome, built by Napoleon I., from twelve hundred cannon taken from the Germans to commemorate the victories of his armies, which was overturned by the Commune, as is alleged through the influence of Prussian gold, is now being rebuilt after the original pattern, and largely of the old materials. Already she boasts 800,000 enrolled soldiers, with a hint that the number will soon be increased to 1,200,000; and should some other Napoleon I. appear, with power to marshal them for victorious battle, though she now seems quite republican, he might be President, King, Emperor—anything to his liking—if he be able to wrest her lost provinces from Prussia, and wipe out this great blot from the escutcheon of her fame.

The hatred of the Prussians is both general and intense. It is charged that the mob who burned the Tuileries were inspired, not by hatred of Napoleon, as was then alleged, but by Prussian gold; and that St. Cloud was burned by the Prussians themselves. These palaces, though beautified, adorned and much occupied by the Napoleons, ante-date them by hundreds of years. They were not Napoleonic, but French; and were so full of the records and monuments of her arts and her arms, that no party in France, seemingly no Frenchman, could desire their ruin.

The dynastic struggle continues now, only for lack of a man—I mean the man for the hour! In her secret heart, France does not now seek the man she needs. Each dynasty—Bourbon, Orleans, Bonaparte—presents its man, to be in turn declined; while the republicans seem inclined to accept the leadership of Theirs—one of the ablest, wisest and best leaders which France has known during this century; at least, until some younger, bolder, and more pronounced advocate of their cause shall show himself. But outside of all love for dynasties, parties or forms of government, the masses wait for some man of magnetic genius and power, to organize France! War! Victory! They feel that Germany cannot always have a Bismarck and Moltke in council and field; and looking for her leader, will bide that coming time. I speak of what I believe to be the underlying sentiment here. All is quiet now. The hotels are full of strangers, mostly from abroad, but order reigns among strangers and citizens, and this with a far smaller show of police force than is seen in London. Large numbers of men are engaged in repairing the ravages of fire and war, or rather the ravages of the mob, for the only war in the city was in subduing the mob which sacked and burned some of the fairest portions of it. As I passed by the Tuileries and the Hotel de Ville, and saw large bodies of men quietly at work pulling down its ruined walls, I wondered if they were any part of the excited throng who applied the match to the costly edifices, or were aiding and abetting those who did the deed?

So fickle and changable are the Parisians that it was easy to believe this. The same people who voted almost unanimously for Napolean III., within a few short months, were so enraged against him, that he felt safer in surrendering himself a prisoner to the Prussians, than returning to his own capital; and now that he is dead, multitudes of these men wish that he was back, because he did so much, not only to beautify the city, but to employ the poor.

A Squaw Takes a Scalp.

An incident of the fight between the Sioux and Ponca Indians, at Ponca Agency, is told in the Sioux City (Iowa) Journal, of the 18th ult.: "A Sioux brave had gained shelter of one of the buildings, from which position he was enabled to fire at his foes from short range. While he was standing just at the corner of the building loading his gun, a Ponca squaw rushed from the house, and, before the Sioux could defend himself, gave him a slashing cut across the abdomen with a huge knife. As she struck him, the Sioux involuntarily bent forward, clasping his abdomen with both hands, and just at that instant the squaw grabbed him by the hair, and, with a savage stroke of the knife, scalped him. Shaking her gory trophy aloft, and giving a shrill cry of defiance, she darted back into the building in safety, followed by a dozen rifle-balls from as many Sioux, who from a distance saw the result of the sortie. The effect was perfectly maddening upon the Sioux, for, to have one of their warriors scalped by a squaw, was a disgrace which could only be wiped out by the blood of the entire band of Poncas. They rushed for the buildings, but were met with a fire which laid many of them low, and the rest retired to a safe distance, without having injured their foes. The act of the squaw seemed to inspire the Poncas, and, flaunting from a window the scalp of the unfortunate Sioux, they uttered yells of derision and contempt which nearly drove the Sioux frantic."

Boston in a Bad Way.

[Cor. St. John Globe.]

According to one of our clergymen the city is in a bad way. The "city fathers" do not enforce its laws against light weights, short measures, adulterated milk and adulterated whiskey. Water is getting scarce. We must have the Mystic to furnish additional water supply, or else there will be a panic in the milk market. Babies are dying by the dozen, dying of hydrocephalus, water on the brain, and water on the chest. Planets and politics have their orbs to move in. Saturn and City Hall are surrounded by "rings." Solemn oaths are made to maintain and execute the laws, but "rings" reign supreme. A few days ago a petition was presented, signed by over 5,000 persons, for the enforcement of the liquor law, but it—the petition—was treated with almost silent contempt. The city itself keeps a rum shop, and no law can reach it. And the city, too, swarms with beggars and spongers and jugglers.

—A farmer, not accustomed to literary composition or letter writing, having lost a new hat at a country meeting, addressed the following note to its supposed possessor: "Mr. A. presents his compliments to Mr. C. I have got a hat which is not his; if he have got a hat which is not yours, no doubt they are the missing one."

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. Nothing ever presented to the public as a beautifier of the complexion ever gave such satisfaction for this purpose as this Discovery. The effects of all medicines which operate on the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula, is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by all druggists. 702

"A Dose in Time," &c.

If "a stitch in time saves nine," it is equally certain that a dose of a healthy tonic like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken at this inclement season of the year may save many an unpleasant twinge. A dose, however, is not sufficient. The system should be thoroughly charged with this genial vegetable stimulant and invigorant. Commence taking it with the commencement of the atmospheric changes which distinguish the winter from the autumn. Thereby you will avoid those disturbances of the digestive and secretive organs, and those painful diseases of the muscles and the nerves of sensation, which often render the period of the year which should be the merriest, a season of penance and disquietude. The extraordinary vigor and regularity which this exhilarating restorative imparts to the most important functions of the body, render it an invaluable remedy for nervous debility, constipation, indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and intermittent fevers.

Local Matters.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, petition of James W. Emery for removal of ledge and construction of sidewalk on North Street, was granted.

Petition of B. F. Thorndike and others for qualification of Ansel H. Harlow as Special Police without pay, was laid on the table.

Petition of Directors of P. & D. railroad that action may be had on their petition for a new highway, &c., was accepted.

The petition of P. & D. railroad for new highway, &c., at Freeman's Point was taken from the table.

Voted: That said petitioners have leave to withdraw their petition.

The committee on Streets to whom was referred the petition of H. J. Freeman for increased damages in consequence of the laying out of Albany Street, reported recommending that he be allowed $50 addition to former award. The report was adopted.

Petition of Agent of Est. L. Barnes for repair of sidewalk corner of Penhallow and Daniel Streets, was granted. Communication from the Mayor relative to the escape of David Marshall from the Station House and recommending an investigation, &c., was referred to Committee on Police.

The Mayor was requested to ascertain whether the city has any right in the land of the late Joseph M. Edmonds on Woodbury Street.

Cate, the Barn-Burner.

Persons who have conversed with Otis A. Cate since his sentence to the State prison say that he acknowledges setting fire to the barn of Hayes & Son, by which thirty-three horses and cows perished, last spring. Notwithstanding his simple appearance, it is said by those who best know him that Cate is sharp at a trade and has traded horses with considerable shrewdness. His confession shows that the sentence of twelve years in State prison was a righteous one. To one man he has asserted that he "burnt the —— —— old barn and meant to." To another he said he made two attempts to burn the barn. The first time, Mr. Joseph O. Ham, son-in-law of Mr. Charles Hayes, was in the barn, having just gone in from a drive to put up his horse. Cate went in suddenly and seeing Mr. Ham said he was after a coat he had left there. Both went out together and Mr. Ham noticed as they entered the house that Cate had nothing on his feet but stockings, and spoke of it. After entering the house, Cate went out again and entering the barn, lighted a match and threw it on the hay. When asked why he did not give an alarm, he said he had only time to get to the door as the barn was all on fire at once, and he was too frightened to shout, but wasn't so weak but that he could run into the house and go to his room.

Judge Foster, in giving the full sentence allowed by law, said that incendiarism is so general that it is high time proper examples were made to deter others from committing the same crime. No deed could be so easily done and so easily concealed as such an act as Cate was guilty of, and where convictions were so few, citizens should be protected in life and property and the laws of the land executed.

A Mean Trick.

We regret that there resides hereabouts any person so depraved as the one we are about to refer to. But history affords many confirmations of our belief that just as mean men have lived in the past. The one we refer to has committed forgery. For some reason he did not like Dr. Chas. A. Norton, a homeopathist who has obtained quite an extensive practice in Portsmouth. The cause of this dislike may have been the fact that Dr. Norton, as he had a right, signed a petition to the city authorities to have the liquor law enforced. Perhaps this was the cause—and perhaps, not. One day the Doctor took two or three notes from the post-office, purporting to come from patients that he had been attending, which informed him that his services were no longer required. The next and succeeding day, other and similar letters were received until the matter seemed getting monotonous and Dr. Norton began to fear he would soon be without practice. At last a note was received, apparently from a lady, (whom he had not attended) requesting him to discontinue his professional visits. The rascal who indited the notes had gone too far, and the worthy Doctor's suspicions being roused, he called on the parties from whom the notes had been sent as he had thought, and was surprised at finding his patients indignant at his non-appearance regularly. The whole scheme was an attempt to deprive him of practice, but its failure only brought him more.

To be Boarded For Nothing.

John Davis, (not John M., but a miserable tramp), recently engaged to work for Hayes & Son at their farm. He worked one day and then was missing; and so were boots and clothing of another farm hand. Straightway, Alderman Hayes departed in a team with the owner of the missing articles in search of the vagrant. At North Hampton, they overhauled him. He was brought to this city and Judge Page ordered his recognizance in the sum of $300 for trial at the April term of the S. J. Court. Failing to secure bail, John goes to the county House of Correction at Brentwood to await trial.

S. J. Court.

On Friday, the indictment against the New Castle Bridge Co., for not keeping snow on their bridges, was tried, the jury rendering a verdict of "guilty."

The complaint against Mr. James S. Peirce, of the Rockingham House, for keeping the billiard saloon open on Saturday nights after 10 o'clock was quashed. Mr. Peirce had been fined $10 and costs in the public court, and appealed. There was an error in the writ.

Laconics.

Commodore Guest, one of the Examining Board, arrived at the Navy yard, Friday.

The New York branch of the firm of A. & W. Sprague, Hoyt, Spragues & Co., suspended last Thursday.

With the lost books of Livy,—the records of the Boys' High School for the few years last past. To whom do such records belong? Are they public or private property?

Rev. A. C. Hardy will preach in the M. E. Church to-morrow morning a sermon for the times. Subject "National sins and their Retributions." All are cordially invited.

Four hundred workmen were discharged from the navy yard, Friday. The pay-roll amounted to $56,000 in October, and orders were received from Washington to reduce the monthly roll 50 per cent.

Harrington, the ventriloquist, is coming next Tuesday evening, with Watson and his mesmeric subject. All the children will wish to attend the Wednesday matinee. See advertisement.

City Marshal Johnson says a small gang of thieves came to this city the past week. He warns citizens to be prepared for attempts at burglary, similar to those made at Berwick, Great Falls and other places.

The Eastern Railroad Company are laying steel rails at various points on their road. The heavy trains so frequently passing over the Eastern use up the iron rail in about two years, and steel now is used in renewal of rails on the main road.

A gentleman informs us that some of his relatives in the northern part of Vermont visiting this city on Thursday stated that when they left the day previous, Wednesday, Oct. 29, there were five inches of snow on the ground in their locality, and that they rode to the depot in a sleigh.

Parties wishing to purchase a most desirable residence on the southerly side of Islington street are referred to the advertisement of John P. Hart, Esq. The house is one of the most convenient in Portsmouth, was built for the present owner and has a large garden attached. Mr. Hart has been constantly improving the property during his residence there.

Schooner Tennessee, which has been ashore near Fishing Island, after discharging part of her cargo of coal was pulled off by U. S. S. Mayflower and came up to this city. The authorities at the navy yard show a constant readiness to lend a hand when needed, which is most praiseworthy, not unfrequently gets some unlucky mariner out of a bad fix, and occasionally saves an owner of floating property from serious loss.

The corn and flour store of Charles Robinson & Son was broken open on Thursday night, and the money drawer cut out, but no money was taken, as there was nothing to take, the drawer having been emptied of its contents by the proprietors previous to leaving the store for the night. The work of getting into the building was evidently that of some boys, as it was done in the most bungling manner.

Mrs. Rachel Larkin, widow of the late Thomas O. Larkin, died in San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 21st. Mrs. Larkin had been in ill health for many years, suffering from neuralgia. She was born in Ipswich, Massachusetts, and was nearly sixty-seven years of age at the time of her death. She was the first American lady who went to California, arriving at Monterey in 1832, where her husband was then U. S. Consul. Her marriage with Thomas O. Larkin was celebrated on board the United States ship Savannah in that harbor. Mrs. Larkin was well known and highly esteemed for her noble character. She leaves four children surviving—Thomas Oliver, Francis Rogers and Alfred O. Larkin, and Mrs. Sampson Tams. She leaves a large estate and in her will appoints Frank Kennedy, Charles H. Sawyer, William Harney and F. R. Larkin, executors.

Temperance Proposition No. 4.

Concerning the communism of which we have spoken by the power of which drunkards and persons addicted to any vice are to be wrought over and made temperate and virtuous, in regard to its location—nowhere; its constitution, by-laws, organization, &c.—none. By attempting to fix, define, &c., on these points, failure has already ensued. Let every person in the wide world instead of carrying "a brick in the hat" or anything cumberous about the body keep a label with the inscription "as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." Keep a supply of the spirit of self sacrifice for use whenever necessary in order to accomplish good toward others or to correct and regulate ourselves. These are the signs, the world over, of a true communist—deficient of these let no one make much boast of manhood or womanhood. HARD PAN.

An Election Humor.

Telegraphic messages passed, last Tuesday, between John G. Thompson, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the State of Ohio, and T. E. Cunningham, the putative father of the People's Party there—who have got so badly squeezed out—as follows:

COLUMBUS, Oct. 21, 1873.

To Hon. T. E. Cunningham, Lima, O.:

Accept my compliments with Allen for next Governor, a Democratic Legislature, and Thurman the next United States Senator. This is good for "a dead party."

[Signed] JOHN G. THOMPSON.

LIMA, Ohio, October 21, 1873.

To Hon. John G. Thompson:

William Allen, rise up! "The sheeted dead do squeak and gibber in the streets of Rome." Receive my sword.

[Signed] CUNNINGHAM.

A "Local."

[Nashville Union.]

A raw-boned horse attached to a street-sprinkler laid down to think yesterday evening, at the corner of Church and Cherry. He was trying to remember the last time he had had a good feed of corn and decent treatment. By the time the driver got him unhitched from the cart, and had run that establishment back out of the way, the badlyskinned up equine was prepared to give up the conundrum, and rise to his feet. In the meantime two hundred and four public-spirited individuals had assembled to see what was wrong.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this Remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON.
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.]

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

'Dr. Wistar's Balsam' of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Jones Considers a Most Extraordinary Phenomenon.

It was on a moonlight night that Pennypacker, while walking by the riverside at Norristown, came across Jones standing on the bank, in a condition of intoxication, gazing stupidly into the water. When Jones saw Pennypacker he said to him:

"Mizzer Bennyback'r'm very glad you're come. I've been stan'in' here c'nsiderin' a moz extraordinary ph'nom'non."

"What is it, Jones?"

"Moz extr'ordinary ph'nom'non th't ever came unner my obzervation, Mr. Bennybacker—the moz extr'ordinary."

"What is the nature of the phenomenon, Mr. Jones?"

"I zay, Mizzer Bennybacker, id'nez very way extr'ordinary. D'you obzerve that?"

Then Jones gazed and pointed into the water, putting his head on one side and then on the other. Then he would draw back as if to get the phenomenon in a new light, and finally he doubled up both fists and attempted to look through them, and all the time he kept muttering to himself—

"Very 'stonishin' zircumstanze altogether. Moz remark'ble freak ov nature idz ever bin my lod t'bzerve. Can't round for id upon any theory whadever."

"Well, Mr. Jones, what is it that surprises you?"

"Mizzer Bennybacker cas' y'r eye down there. D' you 'bzerve anythin' of a 'straordinary nature?"

"No, Jones, nothing: there is nothing unusual there that I can see."

"Thadz moz extr'ordinary zirgumstanz ov all. Don' you berzeive the moon down there, Mizzer Bennybacker?" said Jones, pointing to the water.

"Certainly I do?"

"Well, Mizzer Bennybacker dozzen it strige you as moz incompre'ns'ble ph'nom'non, now?"

"Of course not."

"Well, Mizzer Bennybacker you may be drunk ur you may be zober, but in all my 'xperienze I never before found m'zelf vorty thousan' mile 'bove the moon. Id's an incompre'nsible zirgumstanz, Mizzer Bennybacker, how you an' I sh'd uv god up here an' the moon down there without our being 'ware of the fagd whed I'm perfectly certain I'm not stan'nin' on my head."

Then Pennypacker led Jones calmly home and put him to bed, and he slept off his surprise at the extraordinary phenomenon.

A Distressing Story.

[Springfield (Ill.) Journal.]

Our city yesterday was visited by a very respectable looking middle-aged lady, who told a sad tale of misery in connection with the yellow fever plague at Shreveport, and subsequent affliction. She stated that with her husband and children she was in Shreveport when the fever first broke out, and that she immediately removed her children from danger of the infection by sending them to eastern friends, she and her husband remaining in the afflicted city. About six weeks since her husband became a victim to the terrible plague, and she immediately left for her former home in the East. Upon her arrival at St. Louis she bought a through ticket for her destination in Massachusetts, and this, together with her pocket book, containing all the money she had except three dollars, she lost by having her pocket picked, she thinks, at St. Louis. The three dollars she used to pay her fare here, the conductor refusing to take her further. She arrived by the midnight train, and remained at the depot all night, and yesterday morning sought aid from the authorities to enable her to continue her journey. A sufficient sum was raised to enable her to reach her friends.

The Squirrel Pest.

[San Francisco Call.]

To an Eastern reader it will sound strange that squirrels should exist in sufficient numbers to become a pest. They will hardly be able to realize that there are certain localities in the valleys and on the side hills of California—in the grain fields and adjacent thereto—where there are colonies comprising thousands and tens of thousands of these pests. They have multiplied rather than diminished since the Americans occupied California, which may be attributed to the fact that, as farms are opened up, their supply is more certain and abundant. In sections where they are most numerous, it is calculated that they are capable of destroying from one-third to one-half a crop. These squirrels burrow in the ground, which renders their extermination all the more difficult.

The Right Kind of Talk.

The proposition for a national convention of journalists, to take action toward remonstrating with Congress against the bill forbidding the free passage of newspapers through the mails, meets with this sensible protest from the Minneapolis Tribune: "We think it is high time that journalism became a profession, rather than an asylum for paupers. It has been crawling long enough, and must stand upon its feet. There is no more reason why an editor should ride free on railroads than why he should board free at hotels. There is no more reason why his papers should go free within the country than why the United States Treasurer should give him postage stamps for his letters. It would be pleasant, perhaps, to have the Government or the town buy a new press for our office or a new suit of clothes for the editor, but we are unable to see why it should."

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1873.

Readables.

Tobacco contributed last year $34,386,363 to the internal revenue fund.

There is no question but that a revival of franking will be attempted by the next Congress.

At a republican caucus in one of the wards of Lynn, Friday, a resolution opposing the consolidation of the Eastern and Boston & Maine Railroads was unanimously passed.

Victoria Woodhull could not lecture in Salem in the public hall after she had hired it, as the mayor interfered, but when that honorable gentleman was shown the lecture, he said she might deliver it in as many places as she chose for aught he cared.

Stokes was taken to State prison, Saturday.

The public debt increased $3,039,000 during the past month.

The Lynn Reporter suggests that Ed. Stokes be employed writing a history of his persecutions and that Josie Mansfield canvass for subscribers. Good enough!

Theodore Tilton has been expelled from Plymouth church by a vote of 201 to 13. Previous to the vote Mr. Tilton addressed the assemblage, denying that he had been a member of the church for four years, and offered to answer the charge of slander to the man whom he had slandered.

A dispatch from Sicily reports the volcano Etna in a state of violent eruption. The outbreak is accompanied by fearful earthquakes. Portions of the crater have fallen in, and the mines of sulphur, which have been worked for years, and valued at £300,000, have been destroyed.

The Machias Republican says the jury in the blueberry case rendered a verdict in favor of Mr. Freeman, the plaintiff, for something over $1100, being the average price paid for a certain amount of berries proved to have been picked on his land, and sold to the defendants at their factory at Jonesport. The case is to be carried up to a law court on exceptions to the ruling of the judge and his instructions to the jury.

Donaldson, one of the Graphic aeronauts, made an ascension on Wednesday, from Newark. He descended against a farm house and received a serious wound on his jaws.

Newspapers in California unfriendly to Gov. Booth are making much of a charge of inconsistency, if nothing worse, which is brought against him, in that he, as alleged, approved an act of the last legislature increasing his own compensation $1,000 a year and drew the increased back salary. They say that already the State paid its Governor more than any State in the Union, and that for him to censure the Congressmen for taking back pay, in view of his own action, was in very bad taste, to say the least.

All the democratic Congressmen from Kentucky voted for and took their back pay with alacrity, and the democratic papers of the State have not been forward to condemn them for it. One of these journals, indeed, justifies one of them for his vote because he was a rebel soldier. It says: "If there is a man who is entitled to receive back pay, Crossland is that man. For four years—frail in constitution, when he should have been at home under medical care—we saw him gallantly enduring all the hardships of a soldier, contending for this section, and three times shot down on the battle-field; this, too, without pay and scant in clothing." That democratic journal requires only a democratic victory in New York to make its cup of joy full.

The condition of France in the present political crisis is vividly shown by a cartoon in a recent number of Punch, in which France clings to M. Thiers for protection against the White and the Red Terror that menace her on either side. The election held in Paris on Sunday resulted in the success of the republican candidates—a fact that confirms the view taken by Punch. It is plain that the majority of the people of France are in favor of the perpetuity of the Republic, although the real republicans are undoubtedly in a minority. The French have always shown a disposition to maintain the existing government whatever it may be, and always promptly accepted the results of the Paris revolutions. The reluctance to any change constitutes the strength of the republic to-day, and will, perhaps prove strong enough to baffle the intrigues of monarchist politicians.

The returns from Ohio confirm what we said of the election in that State at the time. Instead of showing a democratic revival, it proves a falling off of 37,177 in the democratic vote since last year, and a decrease of over 55,000 in the republican vote. Over 90,000 voters stayed at home, but more republicans than democrats availed themselves of this privilege. The election of Allen was purely accidental. It appears that over 20,000 votes were cast for the liberal and the temperance candidates, and these were largely drawn from republican sources.

Husbands will take note of the mournful fact that a Michigan firm has 18,000 broom-handles ready for shipment.

Bismarck goes back to the head of the Prussian Cabinet, vice General Von Roon, and stronger with court and people than ever before.

Theodore Tilton declines to testify in the Bowen-Beecher affair. He is writing a novel.

The Chicago Journal informs us, in its "Western News," that the lightning struck a house in Ludington, Wisconsin, in which were a woman and child, and spoiled its gable end. This uncertainty as to where our sympathy should be directed is harrowing the soul of "Fresh Currents," of the Cincinnati Times.

State News.

A young lady in Lancaster has the initials Y. M. C. A. engraved on one corner of her visiting cards, which she hands to certain gentlemen visitors. At first they suppose she belongs to the Young Men's Christian Association, but it is not long before they rightly construe the letters to mean "You may come again."

The town of Brentwood is one of a very few towns in the State which is out of debt and has money in the treasury. Robert Rowe, Esq., says that the town early adopted John Randolph's maxim, "Pay as you go," and he and others always advocated large appropriations to pay the debt, and the consequence is the happy results named above. The tax the present year is $11.1 3 on a $1000.

The State has now in its capital portraits of all Governors since 1700, with a single exception, and the portrait of General Henry Dearborn, soon to be added, will make the collection of its revolutionary gen rals entire.

Robert Carr of Laconia was found in his house, hanging by his neck dead. His wife, to whom he was recently married, had not lived with him. He was about sixty-five years old.

The Financial Trouble.

A New York dispatch to the Boston Journal, Saturday, says:

Still further decline in stocks increases depression, and the day thus far is gloomy as could be. It seems as if confidence was paralyzed, and that there is no bottom to monetary matters. Everybody is afraid to buy stocks or securities for investment lest they go lower. The banks are still making tremendous efforts to carry some of the weaker members of the Clearing House Association. Rumors of suspensions continue in commercial circles. Business appears to be approaching a stand still in all departments. A peculiarity of the present disorder is that no one appears to have made anything, while nearly everybody has lost. It is estimated that the loss to the country generally will be over one thousand millions. Not one of the Wall street speculators has been able to profit by the panic or its consequences. Oldest merchants say to-day that they have seen nothing like it, and have ceased to have opinions.

Political Notes.

The Sacramento Union declares that Gov. Booth will certainly be elected United States Senator from California, if there is such a thing as good faith among representatives, or strength in the popular will. The San Diego World, a democratic paper, takes the same view, and both papers agree in the opinion that the result of the party caucuses will not be binding upon all who take part in them. On this point the Union says: "We cannot name them, and would not if we could, but we are confident that many democrats and some republicans will vote for Gov. Booth, and that no member elected on tax-payers' or independent, or people's tickets, will, under any circumstances now to be foreseen, vote against him."

The Louisville (Ky.) Commercial recalls to mind a remark that the late Gen. Humphrey Marshall made in a half-jesting way one day, to the effect that he thought it wasn't worth while for the democrats to get into power yet awhile. He wanted the republicans to go ahead, pay the national debt, get the Treasury full, and then step out of the way, and let the democrats have full sweep. "The fact is," he said, "we democrats haven't had a chance at the public crib for years, and we are powerfully hungry. I don't want anything done to injure the credit of the Government, I don't want to be bothered with economy and the trouble of paying debts, and so I think it would be better to wait till we won't be bothered by considerations of that kind, and can take our swing at the Treasury with unembarrassed minds."

Miss Bettie E. Lewis, whom the anti-monopolists of Sangamon County, Ill., nominated for County Superintendent of Public Schools, declined the nomination, and the committee have selected Miss Mary Howard, daughter of a well-to-do farmer, to fill the vacancy in their ticket. Miss Howard, who is a graduate of Monmouth College and a teacher, says that she is "thoroughly enough opposed to the monopoly of effeminate employment by men" to accept the nomination, and she respectfully invites the voters of the county to "verify by actual experiment their time-worn, but as yet, undemonstrated assertions that women are incompetent to fill this office, and that the holding of it will be more demoralizing than teaching district schools."

The Depreciation of Silver.

In commenting on the depreciation of silver coin in the San Francisco market the Commercial Herald, of that city, takes rather strong grounds in favor of the withdrawal, by the Government, of the paper fractional currency in circulation, and the substitution in its place of silver coin. The Herald says:

"The downward tendency of silver is beginning to create some alarm, and means should be devised to check it. India and other Oriental countries have ceased to hoard and consume silver to anything like the extent of former times. Their methods of doing business have been largely assimilated to those in vogue among enlightened nations. Gold and bills of exchange are now employed to the proportionate exclusion of silver. Immense masses of the latter lie entirely inert in those countries. It has lost its charm, and the demand has ceased to equal the supply. Under such circumstances, a resort to artificial means must be had to maintain the value of silver. To this end we suggest the calling in of all fractional paper currency, and all legal-tenders below $5, and substituting silver coinage in their place. Furthermore, instead of limiting payment in silver to $5, as a legal tender, raise it to $50. The population of this country is now sufficiently numerous to employ not less than $200,000,000 in silver coin, if paper fractional currency and all below $5 in legal-tenders will be withdrawn by the Government. The sole value of paper money consists in the endorsement given it as merit, and left to its own responsibility would be universally repudiated. It is not so with silver, which has a specific value all over the globe, and is exchangeable for other commodities whenever offered."

Jack and Schonchin Decapitated.

[Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.]

Your correspondent, a short time before the execution, desirous of ascertaining the design of the wall-tent already alluded to, obtained a passing glance of the interior. He saw within a long table, similar to those used in the dissecting-room of a medical college. A black water-proof, India-rubber blanket was spread thereon. A barrel of water was in one corner. In another was a case of surgical instruments and apparatus necessary for some anatomical disintegration. He subsequently ascertained that the heads of Capt. Jack and Schonchin were removed from their trunks and placed in alcohol for transmittal to the medical museum in Washington. Language cannot be found severe enough to denounce this act. It certainly could not have been committed on the order of Gen. Wheaton or any officer at Fort Klamath. It is said to have emanated from headquarters at Washington, and could only have been issued to gratify the prurient curiosity of the Moguls at the nation's capital. The Modocs tortured our wounded and mutilated our dead. Where is our boasted civilization, when, after dealing out strict justice to the captives, we shamefully mutilated their remains? This is vengeance indeed, when the great government of the United States stoops down to cut off the head of a savage chief who had warred against it, and who had successfully battled against its power for months. As an American citizen, your correspondent would gladly suppress this hideous fact. Civilization throughout the globe will blush at the act. The warrior chief, in his dying speech, said that he would like to meet the great white chief in Washington face to face. The Government evidently intends that his dying wish shall be respected, The decapitation of Capt. Jack's head is a reproach to the nation and the foulest blot on the page which records the history of the Modoc war.

A Speculative Millionaire.

[New Orleans Times.]

There is a colored millionaire in this city who has dodged paying his taxes until they now amount to nearly $100,000, due to the city and the State. He is a character for a romance. He is so abstemious that he may be called a miser. He disdains rest, and with wonderful activity works on in a small and obscure one-story house, remote from the business portion of the city. This building is his office and his home. It is dingy and dilapidated on the outside. Within, a kind of lobby partitioned off from the main room is the miser's office. A desk full of pigeon holes crammed with papers, an iron safe, and a chair or two constitute the only furniture. Beyond are the rooms where he lives with his mother, a woman almost a hundred years old. Yet this man, so unpretentious in his business surroundings, has nearly a hundred tenements scattered all over the city, which bring him anywhere from twenty to three hundred dollars each per month.

He owns over 250 different properties, estimated to be worth at least $700,000, besides bonds and cash to a large amount This man, however, never pays any taxes except when he disposes of a piece of property, and then only on that property. In the Sheriff's office are tax writs against him dating back twelve years, and some of them are attached to as much as six yards of foolscap filled throughout with closely written descriptions of his properties. The reason for avoiding his annual taxes is a speculative one. The city charges him ten per cent. interest, and on his money, which he never loans except on mortgage, he can make from eighteen to twenty per cent. Every tenth year also the taxes of one year are wiped out by prescription.

Disappointed, But Persevering.

The Springfield Republican says: "A young man was reading the advertised letter list in the Post-Office rotunda, last night. He held a match aloft, like a beacon, while he shadowed his eyes with the other hand. Slowly he read and muttered, 'She'd orter writ,' but then the match was all consumed, and with cheerful willingness to accommodate itself to circumstances, the flame gently wreathed his fingers. Undoubtedly the heat suggested the place which he instantly mentioned; then there was darkness and then silence, out of which came, presently, the odor of brimstone and a sulphurous light—then suddenly gloom. The match had gone out. 'Darn it,' observed the youth, and tried another, while an immense shadow cast by the street lamp apparently tried to kick its own face and lift itself by the one hand, at the same time. 'Wonder if there don't nobody but women get letters in the town,' queried the match holder; in a minute or two we heard him again, 'Gosh! there's the men folks up there. What a durned fool! to stand here and read the wrong ones.' 'Bout out of matches, too,' he said, as he lighted the tenth. He held it too near and the unpasted edge of paper blazed up beautifully. A small boy thrust his head into the room, screeched 'Fire,' and disappeared; the hotel windows began to open, and a few belated travellers rushed in to find our hero dancing about and fanning the fire with his hat. Gently they reassured him, another match sputtered into light and six eager faces glowered on the burned list. It was the wrong one, dated four weeks ago. We came away then—anybody would that had any regard for personal safety; but, from the comparative security of the hotel stairs, we could hear that deceived young man scratch matches and give directions regarding the ultimate disposition of the whole human race."

Mistook His Meaning.

One of our retired merchants hired a newly imported servant girl from the "owld dart," who was necessarily somewhat ignorant of English phrases. One morning seeing her mistress in a loose wrapper, Biddy asked another servant what style of dress that was, and was informed that it was called a "half undress." On a subsequent morning, soon after, the merchant handed into the kitchen, fresh from the vines in his garden, some tomatoes, telling Biddy to serve them in an "undressed state"—meaning of course, raw. Dinner time came, and everything was on the table except the tomatoes. The bell was rung, and on Biddy's appearance, she was asked for them. She hastily retired, and soon presented herself with nothing on but a single under garment, saying: "Arra, sure, I'm now in an undressed state as much as I mane to be, and begorra I'll not strip off another rag even if I get my discharge." She was told to dress herself and expect higher wages.

—Different minds are swayed by different motives, and the average boy is gifted with a large allowance of human nature—so thought that Connecticut deacon who resolved to protect his melon patch by appealing at once to qualms of conscience and others. He posted this, "Boys do not steal these melons, for they are green and God sees you."

—An old chap, whose wife is as ugly as sin, was recently reading an elopement case which seemed to affect him. Said he: "I should be tempted to shoot a man if he was after my wife." "Well," said a hearer, "a man ought to be shot if he ran off with your wife." Verdict for the hearer.

—Lager and anti-lager define the political parties which divide Chicago to the exclusion of all other issues. The latter insist on trying a northwest passage through open water, whilst the former regard beering-straight as the true route to the poll.

Business Notices.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. Nothing ever presented to the public as a beautifier of the complexion ever gave such satisfaction for this purpose as this Discovery. The effects of all medicines which operate on the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula, is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by all druggists. 702

"A Dose in Time," &c.

If "a stitch in time saves nine," it is equally certain that a dose of a healthy tonic like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken at the inclement season of the year may save many an unpleasant twinge. A dose, however, is not sufficient. The system should be thoroughly charged with this genial vegetable stimulant and invigorant. Commence taking it with the commencement of the atmospheric changes which distinguish the winter from the autumn. Thereby you will avoid those disturbances of the digestive and secretive organs, and those painful diseases of the muscles and the nerves of sensation, which often render the period of the year which should be the merriest, a season of penance and disquietude. The extraordinary vigor and regularity which this exhilarating restorative imparts to the most important functions of the body, render it an invaluable remedy for nervous debility, constipation, indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and intermittent fevers.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if defective, it will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Laconics.

That the coming winter will be one of severe cold is indicated by the thinness of hair on new blacking brushes.

The friends of Mr. Daniel A. Drown will be interested to learn that he has removed to Massachusetts, and his P. O. address now is Hamilton.

Apples are rather scarce this season, and the fact has communicated itself to the schools. It takes a pretty good-sized slate-pencil to secure the core of an average apple, we are told.

The number of divorce cases in Maine is increasing every year. In York county, recently, twenty-two divorces were granted and there are now eighty cases pending in Cumberland county.

James T. Fields, Esq., opens the lyceum course to-morrow evening, and we hope will be greeted by a large audience. Let the Temple be filled. Tickets may be obtained at the usual places—$1.50 for the course.

We are patient under tribulation, e'en to a fault, but when a canvassing agent enters our sanctum, we long, oh! how we long, for a patent back-action masculine mule which can sneeze with its hind legs when we wink.

When will book agents and canvassers generally learn that editors have no time to waste in business hours, and that few words, fitly spoken, will better recommend their goods than a thousand-times-told tale whose tendency is to disgust the hearer?

Young Probabilities would do well to send for the "old man" to return. The former threatened this locality with south-east and north-east winds and rain for Saturday; but, instead, the day was a fine one and the wind blew from the north-west. Why this idiosyncracy?

At a meeting of the Portsmouth Dramatic Club, held at their hall on Market street on Friday evening, the following named officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, D. J. Vaughan; Vice-President, Wm. S. Norton; Secretary, M. T. Betton; Treasurer, Wm. O. Sides; Directors, Geo. H. Dame, Wm. Kennedy, John A. Durgin.

Parties wishing to purchase a most desirable residence on the southerly side of Islington street are referred to the advertisement of John P. Hart, Esq. The house is one of the most convenient in Portsmouth, was built for the present owner and has a large garden attached. Mr. Hart has been constantly improving the property during his residence there.

Schooner Roxana Burley, (of Yarmouth,) Merrill, from Portland for Isles of Shoals and Boston, with lumber, went ashore at 2:30 o'clock, Friday morning, on Wells Beach, near where steamer Clotilda was stranded. The crew took to the boat and landed in Wells River at daylight. The vessel will be a total loss. No insurance. The cargo, owned by J. R. Poor and L. Lovejoy & Co. of Boston, will be more or less saved.

The Dover Democrat, commenting on the drunkenness near Dover Point caused by the ale which was recently upset there, says: It is thought that a few barrels more would defeat the P. & D. Railroad for the season and lay it up for another year. The demonstrations of the last few days down at the lower end of the town seem to make it clear that we cannot have the beer and the road both. The question is, which will we take?

The special meeting of the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, this evening, at the Common Council room, is to be honored by the presence of that distinguished philanthropist and reformer, George T. Angel, Esq., of Boston. Mr. Angel has a world-wide fame for his efforts in behalf of humane education, and as a life-long friend of dumb animals. His great experience in Europe, England, and in this country as the President of the Massachusetts Society, cannot but tend to make his remarks interesting. All friends of the cause are cordially invited to be present at the meeting.

Intemperance Proposition No 2.

Concerning the incompatibility of the surroundings of the great human brotherhood to which we have heretofore alluded, that has created such a profound sensation in this rum-loving community of ours, so deficient in the knowledge of those communistic self-abnegations that form the true secret to a well-developed appetite for that virtuous drink commonly known as cold water, which, taken in limited doses by those specimens of the brotherhood who have no desire for anything stronger, produces such wonderful results upon the brothers aforesaid,—concerning all this—think, reflect, ponder, consider and then commune!

These are the signs, these are the indications, these the prognostications, not only here but in Rye, Greenland and other towns, by which a true lover of that which inebriates but does not intoxicate, may be discovered. O, mortal, stop in your mad career, take an old fashioned drink of that refining beverage (once so common among New Englanders, but now, alas! almost unknown) and then rush on to ruin and to happiness. HARD HAND.

An interesting case has recently been decided by the supreme court in session at Bangor, in which husband and wife were sued for an account against the wife only, who is in the millinery business. The court instructed the jury that the goods having been charged and billed to the wife, prima facie, she alone was liable. If the husband had a joint interest in the business, not merely an interest as a husband, but over and above that as a partner or so held himself out, then he was liable; otherwise not. The verdict was that the husband was not liable.

"Black Jack Bill," "Prairie Joe," "Slim Sam Shaw" and "Grizzly Graham" are among the euphonious names of members of the Wyoming Legislature. And yet the State stands up nobly for woman's rights! Truly, "What's in a name?"

The model housewife can now be seen skimming across the yard to the next house, with a bowl in her hand. Pretty soon she skims back again, with a very satisfied expression on her face. The woman in the next house wasn't able to see how it could have jelled so.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thin brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Spreading the National Fowl.

Mr. Burnell, delegate from the New Orleans Board of Trade at Chicago, spread the screaming American eagle when Canadian delegates were appointed on the Committee on Transportation. The report says:

Mr. Burnell said, coming as he did from a city repulsed Packenham, which he was surprised that gentlemen from the British Dominion should be placed on the Committee on Transportation.

A delegate from the city that repulsed Packenham could do no less than this. He might properly have done much more. Mr. Burnell should have fought that battle over again before these British delegates, and made the British lion howl with anguish. And then it would have been an appropriate finale if the convention had massacred the Canadian delegates on the floor of the hall.

We remember of but one instance of an American spirit which will compare with Burnell's in fitness. It was that of one of America's "remarkable men," who introduced the Duke of Newcastle, when he was escorting the Prince in this country, to his wife in this style: "Duke, permit me to introduce you to Mrs. Judge ——, cousin of the wife —— ——, and daughter of the late Gen. ——, of Kentucky, who was brutally murdered by the British while gallantly fighting for his country at the battle of the River Raisin."

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

Not immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the SINGER Machines, which meet the wants of the public in durability and simplicity of construction, and capacity for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

[THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

PREPARED BY

SETH W. FOWLE & SONS,

A Grizzly Prize Fight.

General James S. Brisbin gives the following sketch of the exploits of a noted frontiersman. The incidents were related to the General by Mr. Belden, the famous hunter, trapper and guide of the Plains:

I was one of the first men in 1858 to arrive at Pike's Peak. I came up from the Missouri with a friend of my father's, and we stopped at Denver, or rather, I should say, where Denver now is, for the city was then composed of a few grog-shops and shanties. In one of the mining camps I became acquainted with a queer fellow they called Bruiser Sam. He was a powerful man, and sometimes drank a good deal, but was always good-tempered and kind-hearted. The miners were a rough set in those days, and delighted in the most brutal of sports. Prize-fighting was one of their pastimes, and at this Bruiser Sam excelled, no man in all the camps being able to stand up long before him. His feats of strength were prodigious. Often he would take a barrel of liquor by the chimes and, knocking out the bung, lift it up and drink from the hole as easily as if it were a small keg. Then he would stand on a box twelve inches high and lift one hundred and eighty pounds with his teeth. He could pick up a three-bushel bag of flour with his mouth and carry it a rod. One day a saloon-keeper offended Sam, and to have revenge he went out into the street, and, shouldering a large work-horse, carried it into the saloon, leaving the enraged bar-keeper to get it out and down the steps as best he could. At another time he carried a rock into the store and dropped it through the floor.

A HERCULES.

Sam's skin was as white and smooth as a girl's; but all over his arms, shoulders and broad chest were bunches of knotty muscles as large as a man's fist. He was well-built and fine-looking man, his waist being remarkably small, his hips broad, the legs well set and feet small. Once his face was handsome, but whiskey had bleared the eyes, and the nose was pimpled and red; still Sam was a good-looking man, and when dressed up in a new buckskin suit with yellow fringe, and his long brown hair combed out in curls about his neck, he was a picture of a an athletic frontiersman.

However, Sam was fast degenerating into a loafer; he had left off work and gone to living by his strength, just as thousands of men live by their wits in the great cities. Any one would pay for Sam's liquor to see him lift a barrel by the ends and drink from the bung-hole; and occasionally, by way of variety, he would shoulder a horse or a mule for a glass of rum.

Dissipation told rapidly on "The Man of Steel," as he was called, and when I saw him in the spring, he had the delirium tremens, and it took five men to hold him. His frame was wasted away, the knots of sinews were gone, his chest drawn in, and the skin of his body soft.

A BOUT WITH A PRIZE-FIGHTER.

It was about this time that an old Englishman named Jones arrived at the mines, and hearing of Sam, expressed a desire to see him. Old Jones was a well-known prize-fighter, but of late years had given up the ring himself and turned trainer. Sam's fame excited the envy of old Jones, and he no sooner saw him than he offered to fight Sam. The miners were astonished, and tried to dissuade Jones from his purpose, but nothing would do but he must have a bout with Sam. So the day was set. Sam was sick on the morning of the fight, and looked badly enough, but bets ran two to one on "The Man of Steel" against the Englishman. Time was called, and the Englishman bounded into the ring, while Sam came up slowly, and looked languid and feeble; but at the very first pass he hit John Bull between the eyes, and no amount of sponging and bathing could induce him to stand upon his legs again that day. It was feared Sam had broken the Englishman's skull, but he got about in a day or two, and soon afterward both he and Sam disappeared from the saloons. The bar-keepers were astonished. Sam did not come around any more for his grog, and no one could imagine where he was gone, or what he was at. Foul play was beginning to be suspected, when it leaked out that Sam was in training, and that the Englishman was his trainer. After Jones got that awful lick from Sam's brawny fist, he gave him no peace until he agreed to go into training and accompany the Englishman to England, there to fight the giants of the prize-ring. Jones had no money, but at his instigation a man named Dunham came over with plenty of cash, and as soon as Dunham arrived old Jones quit, and the new Englishman became Sam's regular trainer.

A NICE MAN TO TRAIN.

I saw Sam once while he was in training, and he looked well, the knots were on his arms again and the great chest round and firm. He had been at his dumb-bells, sand-bags, and gum-balls about six weeks when, one morning he got mad about something, knocked both Dunham and Jones down and made his escape from his keepers into the street. Stopping at the saloons and taking several drinks, he did not forget it was his hour for training, and amused himself by knocking down every stout-looking fellow he met. Finally, after the Sheriff and half the town had been whipped, Sam was captured and put into jail; but here a new difficulty presented itself, for the jail was not a strong one, and Sam swore he would instantly tear it down if they did not let him out. On promising that he would go straight to his lodgings, the door was opened and Sam kept his word, for he went directly home and retired to bed. This outbreak was so unlike Sam's natural disposition that every one was at a loss to account for it; and soon afterward, another ebullition of passion occurring, the Man of Steel's trainers abandoned him in disgust, and took themselves off East, each carrying with him as a parting gift from Sam, a pair of black eyes and a swollen nose.

Sam, now left to himself, fell to drinking again, went about the saloons as of old, lifting barrels, pitching stones, and shouldering horses for liquor. It was soon observed he was growing weak; he lifted the barrels with difficulty, and preferred to drink from a glass instead of a bung-hole. He grew thin in flesh, his muscles disappeared, and he became the shadow of his former self.

GOING FOR A GRIZZLY BEAR.

At this time a number of shoulder-hitters and desperadoes arrived at the mines, and gave Sam some trouble; but he finally conquered them all, and as the last fellow got licked he exclaimed: "Well, if you can lick me, you can't lick a grizzly bear!" Sam swore he could lick a grizzly bear, and that single-handed, alone, he would fight one. There was a grizzly in the camp that had been caught by the miners when a cub, and raised by them. The bear was now nearly full grown, and though a great, powerful brute, was quite tame and harmless. It was not long before some wretches had arranged a fight between the dumb beast and Bruiser Sam, and the day was set. The bear was to be chained to a tree by the neck, and Sam was to fight him for one hour with his naked fists. Sam again went into training, with Jim Peyton for his trainer, and long before the day of the fight Peyton reported that his pupil was in splendid condition, and "would as soon fight as go a-fishing."

The day came and with it a great crowd. The bets were three to one on Sam, and many really believed he would whip the bear. Poor Bruin—a great shaggy-coated fellow—was tied to a stake by a chain twelve feet long, and was as good-natured as he could be, standing on his hind legs, and scampering about with delight at the sight of so many people. Perhaps there was as little of the real beast in Bruin as there was in many of the two-legged animals who came to see him fight. The keepers of the bear began teasing and poking him with sharp poles and irons, and although he took it quite coolly at first, he after a while growled fiercely and tugged at his chain. Sam now appeared with his keeper, Peyton, and was received with loud cheers by the human animals who wished to see a man and a beast fight.

THE FIGHT.

Stepping into the ring Sam prepared for battle, stripping off all his clothing, except his boots, pants and drawers. His broad chest contrasted strangely with the shaggy coat of the beast, as the two combatants stood glaring at each other. The intelligent animal seemed to understand the situation in a moment, and, rising on his legs, walked toward Sam, who tried to hit him between the eyes, hoping to break his skull; but, failing in this, he stepped to one side, and giving the bear a powerful blow, knocked him down. Cheer after cheer greeted Sam, as he stepped from the ring, and the men who had bet on the bear really began to fear they would lose their money. Five minutes were allowed between the rounds, and the baiters poked the beast vigorously all the time, so that when Sam came up again he was in a towering passion.

The moment Sam crossed the ring the bear recognized him, and bounded the full length of the chain. So great was the rage of the beast that the people drew back in horror, and even Sam grew pale. Again the bear leaped forward, and taking his chain in his paws attempted to break it. For a time it resisted all his efforts, but at length snapped in twain, and the affrighted people fled terror-stricken from the plain.

THE END.

The bear dashed upon Sam, who bravely stood his ground, and actually succeeded in felling the beast to the earth, but in doing so lost his balance, and before he could escape the bear caught him with one claw, and, hitting him on the face with the other, broke the poor fellow's jaw. Still Sam fought on with his jaw hanging upon his breast, and blood spurting from a dozen wounds. It was terrible; but, of course, the bear won, knocking Sam down finally and tearing open his chest with his sharp claws. By this time the people had got guns and returned to the field, where they fired volley after volley into poor bruin until he lay quite still; and Sam was dead too, and they took up his body and the carcass of the bear and buried them both. And thus ended Bruiser Sam and his grizzly-bear fight, which was, perhaps, the only prize bear fight ever fought in the world.

Halsworth To Stokes.

Warden Johnston has received a letter post-marked Sing Sing, and addressed to the keeper of the Tombs of New York. It was as follows, being dated at Sing Sing, Thursday:—

Dear Charley:—Please to inform Ned Stokes that we are going to get up a first-class reception for him in this glorious institution as soon as he puts on the uniform and has his hair cut to the fashion. We shall make him president of our squad and do what we can for him for the short time he is going to stay. I think he was lucky to get off so cheap, don't you? Why, we thought he would get twenty years at least! However, it's all for the best and he's saved his neck. You know if a man is not born to be hanged he will be saved for something else.

Yours,
FRANK WALWORTH.

Readables.

Elections will be held to-day in Massachusetts, Virginia, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Texas, Mississippi, New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Kansas, Michigan and Arkansas.

It is asserted in New York that over fifty thousand persons have been thrown out of employment there. One immense manufacturing establishment in New Jersey, which when running full employs six thousand men, has discharged all but three hundred.

It is among the rumors of the day that a certain clique of straight-out secession Democrats, including several prominent unreconstructed Southerners, have begun an intrigue to secure the nomination of Senator Thurman, of Ohio, to be the Democratic candidate for President in 1876, and that they have selected Senator Bayard, of Delaware, for the second place on the ticket.

The Eastern Railroad station at Boston was robbed by a gang of burglars, early Saturday morning. Four hundred packages of tickets, valued at $1275, were taken.

Three small colored children were burned to death, Saturday, at the end of Aqueduct Bridge, Washington, D. C. The father was at work at the coal wharves in Georgetown, and their mother, having made a fire in the stove, started with her husband's dinner, locking the children in the house, the oldest being about four years old and the youngest an infant in the cradle. The mother had scarcely reached the coal wharves when she saw the house in flames, and before any assistance could be rendered it was entirely destroyed with the children.

Here's an item of news from the Philadelphia Press: "Aurius Manlius Severinus Boethius, a celebrated Latin philosopher, was beheaded by King Theodoric thirteen hundred and forty-eight years ago yesterday."

State News.

A little village is springing up at Wolfeborough Junction, there being some three or four new houses in the course of erection, besides other buildings.

The financial panic has reached Nashua, and a general reduction of help is being made throughout the various cotton mills and different manufacturing interests in the city.

The Manchester Mirror favors the nomination of a farmer as the republican candidate for Governor. Name your man, John B.

The former residents of Dover are preparing for a reunion in that city in 1874.

A man named Isaac Randall was instantly killed on Saturday afternoon by the down passenger train on the Boston and Maine Railroad near Farmington while walking on the track. The deceased was a man of intemperate habits and was drunk at the time he was killed. He was about 50 years of age, resided at New Durham, and leaves two children.

Andy.

[Rochester (N. Y.) Express.]

With all his faults, we love him still. We mean Andy, the ex-President; Andy, the ex-tailor; Andy, the Constitution and whisky-lover; Andy, the man who bellowed at the traitors of Tennessee, during the early part of the war, until they shook in their boots; Andy, the "Cont-u-shon" lover and preserver; Andy, the father of the weeping Philadelphia Convention; Andy, who just escaped the distinction of being the first impeached President of the United States. For this Andy we have a lingering affection. Despite a worldly appearance the thunders and the sarcasm of the press, he is still so naive and simple, still so unconscious of his weakness and faults, still so gloriously egotistical, still so genuinely satisfied that he was providentially designed to be not only the black man's Moses, but the great American combination of Solon and Cicero, that we warm towards him in his harmless estate, sympathizing with him in his misfortunes, and endeavor to come in at the end of his speeches to "'rah" for him with Parson Nasby and Deacon Pogram.

Andy has just made a speech in Washington, and as we sketch it, we are delighted at the charming self-confidence of the man. Beginning with an audience of 2,000 it mattered not to him that when he closed he had but a few hundred left. Intending to speak regarding his connection with the Surratt affair, he could discover no incongruity in devoting his whole time to his personal and political experience, to specie payment, Cæsarism, and the Constitution.

We shall find no fault with Andy. It is not every ex-President who can afford such a fund of amusement to the country after the expiration of his official term, and we hope he may live long to uphold the Constitution and make speeches, even though but few can endure the ordeal of listening to him.

Western Compliments.

Western journalism is a source of preeminent pleasure. One Kansas editor stated that Kalloch was the "Hoary old hooked-nosed devil of the Lawrence Tribune," and the "Hoary old," &c., replied that his delamer was "the sorrel stallion of the raging Kaw." Prentiss, of the Junction Union, says: We notice that Kalloch, in the Lawrence Tribune, throws a shovel full of dirt at Lieutenant-Governor Stover. This is the spirit of a man who is going down toward a man who is going up. It is a half-suffocated cry from the basement story of a swill barrel.

—A photographer in Gloucester has been astonished by a young woman who came and asked, meekly and innocently: "How long does it take to get a photograph after you leave your measure?"

Old Time Chronicles, No. 92.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

It has been said by some newspapers occasionally within a few years that there is a spirit of jealousy between Portsmouth and Exeter. It was so long ago. Mention is made of it 84 years ago. President Washington in 1789 visited New Hampshire. In a diary he kept, speaking of leaving Portsmouth Nov. 4, he went to Exeter. He put down that a jealousy existed between this town and Portsmouth, which had he known in time, would have made it necessary to have accepted an invitation to a public dinner, but his arrangements having been made otherwise, he could not.

We are not sure this jealousy has lasted all through since the time and before, above noted, yet likely from generation to generation some of it has manifested itself. What have been the causes? We may not know them all. In this case as in others, there may have been jealousy without cause. We will state a few things, some of which may have had a bearing on the matter.

Portsmouth is older than Exeter by 15 years, and had a minister in charge two years before Exeter was settled. The first meeting however as regards the towns was in Exeter, and there the Congregationalists, the sect most numerous in the early history of the State, had a minister settled 33 years before Portsmouth. The Provincial Governors who presided in the Province, resided in Portsmouth, save one or two of them in Newcastle; and in P. the Provincial Assembly held its sessions, and there the Judges held the courts. In process of time Exeter felt that it had claims, and the Legislature held its sessions alternately in Portsmouth and Exeter. This matter of thus holding the sessions alternately in the two towns, we know was an early cause of jealousy between them. Neither town was willing that the other should become for any time the established capital.

Portsmouth has had from an early period the greatest population, but once Exeter, in proportion to its means, did the best in ship-building. It is not so now, however. Portsmouth has the best harbor, but Exeter the best water-power for driving machinery. Portsmouth had the first printing press and newspaper, Exeter the first factory; Portsmouth had good schools, but Exeter the first academy. It is the oldest and best endowed of any in the State. Portsmouth has had eminent public men, Exeter those not inferior. Portsmouth has had three of its citizens Governors of the State, Exeter two, and numbers more fit for it. Portsmouth has presented good men in antiquarian research and writers of history. Witness Adams' "Annals" and Brewster's "Rambles." Exeter has one from whom the world may yet hear, (Mr. Bell.) Portsmouth has produced respectable poets. Exeter in this has done well. Comparisons are said to be odious. They are not here, but need not be carried farther. Both towns have shown themselves capable of raising men. They have had means and enterprise. There is room for both, and there is a demand for all the good each can do.

A Wife's Strategy.

[Scranton (Pa.) Democrat.]

We have but little sympathy for a man who will barter away the affection he should feel for a wife for the fickle smiles and favors of other woman whose moral stamina is not strong enough to keep them afloat on the dark waters of sin.

Therefore, we could only smile when we, the other day, learned the details of the following little episode:

"W. L., of this city, is a young married man of more than ordinary attractions, and, of course he knows it. He is a regular lady-killer—in his estimation. A few years ago he won the heart and hand of an intelligent girl from a neighboring town; but he cannot resist the fascinations of his old ways among the opposite sex, and he never lets an opportunity slip of making himself agreeable to them, and ingratiating himself into their confidence as far as possible.

Last week his wife was visited by an acquaintance of her girlhood from the country—a smart, fresh-looking damsel, but not over-scrupulous about her conduct—rather loose in her ways, showing poor bringing-up. During her visit here, Mr. L., his wife, and their visitor took occasion to run up to Nicholson for a day of pleasure, which passed off to the apparent enjoyment of all concerned.

But it was on the return trip that the fun commenced—for the wife. The three passengers occupied two seats in the car, opened opposite to each other, the husband and a few articles of baggage on one seat, and the ladies facing him.

"Laughter, merriment and jokes, interspersed with comments on the events of the day, were freely indulged in, and everything was going on swimmingly, until at length Mrs. L. thought she caught a glimpse, in the dark corner of the car, of her husband's hand reaching that of her companion, which lay partly concealed under her shawl.

"It was the careful movement of a moment to place her own hand where his was likely to fall. The next instant she felt the real old-time pressure of her youthful lover's palm, which she returned with the ardor that she had done in the days long gone.

"Then followed a half hour of more than usually lively conversation on the part of her husband, and it was interpersed at every significant point, as thick as commas, with hearty grasps of his wife's little hand, which were oftentimes lengthened into a down-right squeeze; and every one was returned with equal fervor by his wife, who was delighted beyond measure at the success of her little game.

"Nothing interfered with the programme until at length the conductor suddenly burst open the door within a few feet of them, when the full glare of his lantern fell on the discomfitted wight and the laughing wife. She held stoutly to her husband's hand, and lifted it as high as her head, until there could no longer be a doubt in the mind of one of the three as to the situation of affairs.

"That man didn't talk worth a cent the rest of the trip, and as everything has appeared serene around their hearth ever since it is presumed that he has begged forgiveness—and is looking for another chance."

Spontaneous Combustion of a Lady.

Miss Lucy Ferguson, a wealthy lady of Fincastle, Virginia, was burned to death a few months since in a manner which strongly suggests spontaneous combustion. A report of the occurrence says: "It is known that she was subject to fits. She was about thirty years of age. Her house being seen open excited suspicion, when Mr. James McDowell and a colored man named Jemison instituted a search. They visited the kitchen, but saw nothing of her, but finally procuring a light, they made a further investigation, and were horror-stricken to find only left the head of the unfortunate lady, which was dressed as she appeared at church, but her entire body, bones, entrails, etc., had been reduced to ashes. She, or what remained of her, was lying across the old-fashioned hearth, but in the fire-place, some eight feet back, and of stone, there remained scarcely a handful of coals. How the catastrophe occurred, and how her remains could be so effectually destroyed without the burning of the kitchen, is a matter of conjecture."

—The Des Moines Quartette were somewhat startled by finding that the selection, "When wearied wretches sink to sleep," had been printed on their programmes, "When married wretches," &c.

Business Notices.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. Nothing ever presented to the public as a beautifier of the complexion ever gave such satisfaction for this purpose as this Discovery. The effects of all medicines which operate on the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula, is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by all druggists. 702

"A Dose in Time," &c.

If "a stitch in time saves nine," it is equally certain that a dose of a healthy tonic like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken at this inclement season of the year may save many an unpleasant twinge. A dose, however, is not sufficient. The system should be thoroughly charged with this genial vegetable stimulant and invigorant. Commence taking it with the commencement of the atmospheric changes which distinguish the winter from the autumn. Thereby you will avoid those disturbances of the digestive and secretive organs, and those painful diseases of the muscles and the nerves of sensation, which often render the period of the year which should be the merriest, a season of penance and disquietude. The extraordinary vigor and regularity which this exhilarating restorative imparts to the most important functions of the body, render it an invaluable remedy for nervous debility, constipation, indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and intermittent fevers.

TO THE MUSICAL PUBLIC.

MR. EDWARDO DE AÑGUERA, the well-known Piano-Forte Tuner, Regulator and Repairer from Boston would notify his old customers and the musical public generally, that he is now in Portsmouth, and will attend to all orders that may be left at Preston's Drug Store. Mr. A. has arranged his business so that he will make regular visits, as formerly, every three months, and respectfully solicits the patronage of all wishing their Pianos put in perfect tune and repair. Yours respectfully, oct25 E. DE AÑGUERA.

Piano-Forte & Organ TUNING.

MR. E. Q. NORTON, late of Boston, will remain permanently in Portsmouth for the purpose of carrying on the business of tuning and repairing Pianos and Organs. Correspondence solicited with churches out of town, having organs needing repairs. Organs rebuilt, voiced and tuned in the most thorough manner. Estimates given on jobs; also specifications for new organs. Churches about to buy will save money by consulting me, as I am under the control of no maker and work for the interest of the party buying.

PIANO & REED ORGAN WORK A SPECIALTY.

Black Pine Wool.

Our good friend, Mr. John Malsbenden, is introducing under-garments made from a new material, which affords comfort and freedom from "the pains that life is heir to." He has hosiery, drawers, knee-coverings, and under-shirts, made of vegetable wool and says that persons wearing these articles cannot catch cold that will bring neuralgia, rheumatism, pleurisy, or like diseases. The garments are imported direct from Germany by Mr. Malsbenden. The Berlin Post has a history of the discovery of the medicinal properties of the wool. Workmen employed in the manufactory who had been suffering from rheumatic complaints, being continually working amid dampness and wet, were entirely relieved of pain when handling this material. So notorious did this fact become that hundreds of sufferers sought relief at the mill, and found it. The material is made from the needles of the black pine and has a strong fibre. The garments made of it are as cheap as those made of cotton and wool. Mr. Malsbenden desires us to state that he does not warrant a cure of the diseases mentioned above, by persons wearing the garments, which are only a preventive. Persons having the neuralgia, tooth-ache, head-ache or ear-ache can be cured by wearing wadding made from the needles of the black pine and a vegetable oil he has for sale. We hear of some astonishing cures of rheumatism in this city, where persons have been speedily relieved after donning the under-garments advertised in another column.

Laconics.

Schooners D. K. Ham and Emily A. Staples are to be used in floating the large truss on the P. & D. R. R. bridge at Dover Point to its position.

Mr. J. S. Pfeiffer as will be seen by an advertisement in another column, is to commence an auction sale, Thursday afternoon, of linen goods—a nice chance to get the best quality of goods cheap.

The children, young and old, are expecting considerable amusement to-morrow afternoon and evening from the coming of Harrington, Watson and the juvenile subject of mesmerism. Feats of magic, ventriloquism and "lots of fun" are embraced in the programme.

Our present "devil" is the swiftest distributer in New England. He commenced the week by tumbling up the upper stairs and pi-ing a half galley of type, and followed it up by pi-ing a basket-full of wood on the lower stairs, reminding our quiet neighbors there below that "all earthly things are mist."

Schooner Jessie Williamson, Jr., Capt. Hoyt, has made several quick trips from this port to Port Johnson and return, the past summer, several being made in eight days. On Monday, the Williamson arrived here from Port Johnson, N. Y., in 42 hours, one of the quickest passages on record.

The fine new ship "Frank Jones" was visited by nearly 2000 people on Sunday. If the wind is favorable she will sail to-day for New York, where a cargo of grain will be taken for Liverpool. Capt. William A. Ross commands her, and two Portsmouth boys go with him as mates, Messrs. Horace Clark and Samuel Sides.

That distinguished Son of Portsmouth, James T. Fields, Esq., opens the lyceum course, this evening, with a lecture on "Masters of the Situation." Mr. Fields is well qualified to speak from experience and will without doubt deliver an enjoyable and instructive address. He has many claims on old Portsmouth for his generous donations to libraries and literature, and we all honor him as one whom it is a pleasure to meet, and more than a duty to respect.

Midnight Mistakes.

Abe Carter and Bill Wagner are neighbors in Sullivantown, a suburb of Evansville. Their houses join, and their backyards are like as two peas. Both have good comfortable wives, and until lately the two families have lived in great harmony, with a thin partition wall and a board fence between them. The other night, or rather very early morning, Carter could not sleep, so he left the side of the snoozing Mrs. Carter, arrayed himself in his boots and a plug hat, and retaining his fluttering white robe, went out for an air bath, in an open lot back of his house. While wandering around under the silent stars he saw another white robe gleaming, and his curiosity was excited. At length he concluded it must be his wife come to see why he was stalking around like a ghost so near the cock-crowing time. He ran toward the appearance, and the appearance ran screaming into the house, as he almost knew it would. Even the suggestion of a ghost is frightful to some women, though they may know there is no such thing. Abe Carter is fond of a joke even at his own expense, and he followed the shimmering white robe through the gate and into the kitchen. Here he was astonished to discover, by the position of the cooking-stove, that it was not his house. He had further proof of this fact when Bill Wagner appeared with a club, and did not wait to demand an explanation. Carter found that getting on his own side of the fence and into his own backyard was an arduous performance, and a very expensive joke. He has not been able to wear his pantaloons since, and has no use for his hat and boots. The explanations which followed were of no practical use. Carter's complaint was sleeplessness; his mistake the thought that an air-bath would do him good. Wagner's complaint was acute colic, and his wife had got up to kindle a fire for the purpose of heating water for his relief. The exercise he got completely cured him, but aggravated Carter's sleeplessness. The affair aroused a whole row of dwellings, and the back windows were filled with wondering faces, and a suggestion of general unrest and undress prevailed in the neighborhood.

The Happy Clam.

The moral and intellectual condition of the salt-water clam is of a kind that cannot be considered as particularly enviable; and yet there are many reasons why the clam may be regarded a particularly fortunate individual, and why its lowly lot should be long for by man. The clam never suffers from tight boots and corns; and it is never worried because its pantaloons do not fit. Its placid temper is never disturbed by the hired girl question; and it never endangers its life by learning to skate. No clam, we believe ever yet skated. It never lives next door to a girl who practices four times a day on the piano, and it never has any cats frolicking around under its window to keep it awake at night. It never has to blow its nose when it has a cold in its head, and it never suffers from baldness. Its nervous system is never unstrung by political excitement, and it retains its firmness when there is a financial panic. It never has to maintain its mother-in-law, and it may refrain entirely from dancing when it goes to a party. It does not wash on Saturday nights, and nobody ever asks it to sing. It is not persecuted by life-insurance agents, and it runs no risk of receiving dog bites. It is never annoyed by wilted shirt collars in hot weather, and it never has to give wedding presents to its wife's relations; it never has to pay when it rides on a railroad; it never has to carry an umbrella; and nobody ever sits on its coat tail. So, taking it all in all, the clam ought to be happy, no matter what the condition of the tide.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Without Breeches.

The obituary column of the Philadelphia Ledger, noted for unique poetical productions, was lately made more notable in that respect by the following contribution:

"Lay aside those little trousers,
That our darling used to wear,
He will never on earth want them,
He has climbed the golden stair."

The Washington Republican says: The stern aspect of the boy without trousers, climbing up stairs, presents a picture which is calculated to make the most stony-hearted sinner weep. But the suggestion that the unmentionables should be laid aside because the infant no longer required their use, proves a suspicion that the fond parents forsaw a possibility that they might be made available in the future. Such forethought as this is worthy of their poetic inspiration.

An old lady named Myers, living on Croghan street, saw two boys fighting in the street, Saturday, and she went to the door and shouted "fire!" to get a crowd and have the young rascals separated. The crowd came, and after she had screamed two or three times, they jumped into her house and dragged bureaus and drawers out, and pulled her best bed to pieces, ripped up carpets, and flung chairs around for five minutes before she could make them believe that her house wasn't burning.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in variety and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures a thousand ills, simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

[THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

The Postal Card.

"What have you there, Kittie?" asked merry little Nellie Andrews, holding out her hand to receive the parcel toward her.

"Oh, a lot of postal cards," Kittie answered, with a twinkle in her black eyes. "Guess for what."

"I know. You are on fun intent. I must hunt up a Latin, French, German, and Spanish dictionary, I suppose."

"Yes, Nellie, darling, presently. First, though, I want to tell you something. You know Charley Blaine, and what exquisite teeth he has?"

"Yes, many folks declare he has a receipt from Dr. Le Blanc, for the payment of seventy-five dollars, for a set of teeth for somebody—"

"Oh, nonsense! I know his teeth the good Lord gave him. Well, last week he was absent from his office five days, with a billious attack. Saturday, when he came back, there on his desk, he found a postal card. Of course, all the gentlemen just round had peeped at it, for they were nearly convulsed with laughter when Charley walked up to his desk and took up the card.

Uncle says they just shouted out when he laid it down and turned to look at them. Oh, with such a comical expression he read out:—

"Dear Charlie; Your teeth are not lost. John found them in the bath tub after the water was let off. The stupid fellow forgot to mention it until just now. How sorry we are that you had to be kept a prisoner so long, and still more regret the great and unnecessary expense you had to incur. Yours, A. B."

"Oh, I declare that was too bad. His absence from the office made it all the more funny. It must have been from some one of the clerks."

"No, Kittie. Uncle says Charley thinks it either from Will Lawson, or his cousin Howard Marcy. So I'm just going to set those young gents' brains to puzzling. It would be of no use to send Howard a love missive, for he cares for his cousin Annie more than everybody else in the world. He would know well enough she would not send him one, and he would not care to find out about any one else. So what will we do?

"I know Annie's folks are awfully opposed to her having him, only just because he is poor. Indeed, he is a splendid fellow, and if Mr. Lawson thought there was any chance of his ever becoming rich he would like him well enough, I'm sure, Kittie. I will get a pen. Now how will this do?" Nellie asked, a few moments after, passing a slip of paper to her friend, on which was written:

Howard Marcy, Esq.; We have been daily expecting to hear from you relative to the funds in our hands. We have now eighteen thousand dollars invested. Please let us know by return mail, what disposition to make of it.

Respectfully yours,
ROAD & MEANS, Counsellors at Law.

"Oh, Nellie, if I was not fearful it might raise hopes in the poor fellow, I would say it was just the thing. But don't you think it would be a pity?"

"Oh, I think he won't be likely to build much on it. Now I'll write a little verse of purer sentiment. You may send either you choose."

"No, I will send the one you have written to Howard. I've an idea it will do no harm, and who knows but it may help him? I will tell you how—"

Just then a bevy of young girls came fluttering in, Kitty hid away the cards, slipping one, with the note she intended to copy on it, into her pocket.

That night the card was mailed to Howard Marcy, just about the time the poor fellow was sitting in his room, bluer than ever in his life. Mr. Andrew's manner toward him had grown very cold, indeed; he scarcely ever addressed him at all now. And Howard knew well enough why it was, and said:

"Just because I can't help loving Annie, he treats me thus. Who could live in the same house with her and not love her? Dear girl! Oh, if I was only rich! If I can only get over the coming two years, with God's blessing I do not fear the future. I know I can make my way. But what a struggle it will, it must be! How can I do it on fifty dollars a month? Board twenty-five now! And if cousin Andrew continues to give me the cold shoulder, I must find some other home; and of course strangers will charge me higher—thirty dollars, likely. Then washing, four more, books and tuition, fifteen, and I have six dollars left for clothing, and possibly, in a few days, it will be reduced to just one. I cannot, with the respect due to myself, remain much longer, if things do not improve. I think Annie loves me a little more than girls are apt to love their cousins. I'm glad we are distantly related, or the old gentleman might add that for another objection. Indeed, if I had only the means to buy that exquisite little pearl ring, I would find out if she loves me as I hope. Oh, it just a slight streak of good fortune would come to me now, I think never could any man appreciate it so truly as I. Well, it is no use to sit up in this warm room, groaning over what is inevitable. I will go down, and be happy while I may."

Sweet Annie Lawson was sitting just where Howard Marcy expected to find her, on the shaded porch, looking very lovely, but a little sad, he thought. However she managed to call up a smile to welcome Howard.

"What is it, Annie, that is troubling you?" he asked, seating himself beside her, and endeavoring to take her hand.

Annie drew it quickly away, at the same time glancing anxiously into the library window, where her father sat writing.

Howard understood the meaning of her glance, and the cause of her sadness.

"Will you come for a short walk, Annie?" he asked.

Poor girl! she could no longer disguise her sorrow. The tears filled her eyes as she whispered:

"I don't dare. I wish I might—"

Another look into the library window, another little sigh—almost a sob—and Howard felt that a crisis in his love-making was about approaching. Would it be life or death to him? Sure that evening was the gloomiest of his life. Miserable enough, he went back to his room.

"It is no use for me to struggle against fate. I wish now I had been content to stay at home, with no higher thoughts than working the farm. No doubt I should be happier far. Poor dear mother encouraged me to do this. She thinks I shall succeed, 'and make a famous lawyer,' she writes. Well, well, for her sake, I will struggle on."

Just then Howard saw Annie's father going down the street. Determining to have some understanding with Annie, he hurried down stairs to meet her in the hall.

"I was just coming to call you, Howard," she said.

"And I was coming to try and cast the shadow from your brow, Annie," Howard answered, holding out his hand.

She placed hers in it, saying:—

"It would be too cruel to give you no explanation of my changed manner, Howard. Papa—well, you know, papa—thinks—"

Here Annie faltered and stopped, her face crimsoning as she turned it away to hide her confusion and tears.

"Yes, darling, I know. Your father thinks I love his child; and does Annie think so too?"

Gently he turned her face towards his, and looked earnestly into her beautiful eyes. "Tell me, Annie?"

"I know you do, Howard," she answered low.

"Yes, more than all the world, Annie."

"I know it, Howard, and can't help being so glad of it."

"You darling girl! Now I shall not care how dark everything looks, for with Annie's love to bless and guide me, I shall be sure to succeed. You do love me, Annie?"

"I cannot help it. But I ought not to listen to you, or tell you that I do love you, because papa said such dreadful things—that I must not allow you to love me—that, he never, never would listen for an instant to such a thing; he would just as soon see me dead—but here he is, coming back. Oh, I'm so sorry, and so glad, too! Mamma loves you. Maybe all will come right, we will hope and pray."

"God bless you, darling!" Howard said, as she hurried away.

About noon next day, to Annie Lawson's amazement, when her father came home to lunch, he said to Mrs. Lawson:

"You have not spoken to Howard about leaving, have you?"

"No, not yet. I hate so to do it, I wish you would reconsider it," Mrs. Lawson was saying, when her husband exclaimed:

"Reconsider it! I'm sure I don't wish him to leave. Can't imagine why you should. And now I think of it, I do not see why on earth you put him in that back room. The front chamber in the third story is far pleasanter. You seem to forget, wife, that Howard is my relative; very distant, to be sure, but near enough to be entitled to some love and consideration. I've not been feeling well for a week past, or I should have looked more to his comfort. By the by, Annie, I think you treated Howard very strangely this morning. As our guest if nothing more you should at least be polite."

Annie's eyes, and her mother's grew larger every moment, as they listened, yet scarcely believing their ears.

"What are you staring at, I would like to know?" Mr. Lawson snapped out, looking from his wife to Annie; "I do suppose if my eyes had not been opened at last, before twenty-four hours you would have driven my cousin from the house!"

All the time, during his talking, he had been pulling over the papers in first one pocket and then another, until the contents of six were emptied on the table.

"Lost, as sure as fate," he said.

And when his wife and daughter started up to help in the search, inquiring if it was of much importance, Mr. Lawson answered:

"No, only a business notice. I suppose another will come."

The missing article was the veritable postal card, sent by little Nellie the evening before. Meeting the letter carrier, Mr. Lawson had received, with his own mail, the card directed to Howard. Instead of sending it immediately to him, Mr. Lawson retained it to read over and over again, and speculate upon its meaning.

In vain the search ended.

"Perhaps it is just as well. If he had received it from me he might have thought that it had something to do with my—ah, well, the change in my feelings. In a few days he will receive another from his agents, and in the meantime I will manage to let it come gradually."

An hour after, when Mr. Lawson was returning to his place of business, he me

Howard. The day was very hot, and the poor fellow was really suffering, dressed in his heavy winter clothing.

"I say, Howard," called Mr. Lawson, "you had better follow my example and drop into Smith's and let him put you into a cooler suit. I was there two hours ago. Hey! Not prepared just now? Oh, that makes no difference. Use my name if necessary. I want to have everybody look and feel as cool as myself."

Howard could hardly speak his thanks for his astonishment.

"What on earth has come over him? Well, really, I was just wondering how I should manage to raise a more suitable coat."

To Howard's greater astonishment still, when he entered Smith's, that gentleman came forward, and when Howard made known his want—"Just a plain, cheap coat"—Smith laughed quietly, but pulled down a very nice and desirable suit, insisting on his trying the coat on. And then, when Howard put his hand in his pocket, only for the purpose of getting his memorandum book and pencil, to figure on it, Mr. Smith said quickly:—

"Oh, no matter about the pay now—any time, six months hence at your pleasure. We will always be glad to serve you."

"What has come over everybody, I'd like to know?" thought Howard.

When Howard passed out of the store, Smith drew from his pocket the postal card, murmuring:

"It's lucky for me that Mr. Lawson dropped this. I've secured a very desirable customer. But who would have thought it? Well, this is of no further account. I'll destroy it."

And so saying, Smith proceeded to tear in small pieces the card, and scatter its fragments to the wind. But its work was done.

Although Howard, the first day, almost doubted his own identity, he soon got accustomed to the wonderful change.

And how it really came about Howard could scarcely understand himself; but so it really was, that before the end of that week he was engaged to Annie with the sanction of both parents. The dear girl thought her father had only come to his better senses, and appreciated Howard's worth, and so was very happy in the happy change.

There was something, however, to mar Howard's perfect bliss. How was he to get Annie's ring?

He had written to his mother such a happy, hopeful letter, immediately after winning Annie's promise to be his; for his previous letters had been very desponding, "and mother's heart must be relieved," he said. She—dear, thoughtful woman,—began to think that her darling ought to have a little extra money just then, particularly as the commencement was near at hand. He would surely need a new suit when he received his diploma. So she set to work to devise means to secure what she thought Howard must have. The result was the receipt of one hundred dollars in a letter from his mother, in which she said:

"Dear Son; I have been thinking you must need more money than you can make just now, so I sold Uncle Harry's gun. The money you need more than anything else. So don't worry about my disposing of it."

"I declare," exclaimed Howard, "this seems like a fairy's doing! I hardly wish for a thing before it comes."

So on Annie's finger was the prettiest little pearl ring, and Mr. Lawson chuckled to himself at the success of his wishes. When, a few days later, Smith was paid for his light suit, and received an order for another, he congratulated himself on his good luck. Neither he nor Mr. Lawson could keep their secret, each whispered it to his friend, and so it reached the ear of a shrewd and well known legal gentleman of W——, who, immediately after Howard graduated and won the prize for the best essay, astonished him by coming and offering him a partnership. Two months had passed when Howard found himself just where he hoped to be in two years. And better still, an old miser uncle, who never before would help him, when he heard of his nephew's success, concluded there was "something in the boy," and sent him a nice little present in the shape of a five thousand dollar bond.

A few days ago, Nellie's little friend Kittie came in and whispered: "I am going to be bridesmaid for Annie Lawson. She is to be married early in the fall." And then she added, laughing merrily:

"I truly believe this marriage will be the work of my postal card. I know only a few days before, Mr. Lawson did not treat Howard with common politeness. Just see how slight a thing may turn the current of our lives."

"We should be very cautious, then, how we drop these pebbles in the stream, Nellie. But I am glad, if our little piece of fun has done such good work. And I am confident Howard Marcy is worth all, and more, than Mr. Lawson thinks he is. And we have only made him anticipate what the future is sure to bring."

What Had He Taken?

[Cin. Times.]

We are pretty good at matrimonial mathematics, but we confess that a head-line in the Indianapolis Sentinel, "Four weddings in a single night—ten hearts made happy," gets away with us—so to speak.

—A Hillsboro', Ill., philosopher, named Jeff. Yokum, after listening to various exploits of early days narrated by a party of gentlemen, broke in with: "Well, fellers, I tell you it seems to me that as men get older fun gets skeerser!" Jeff. was profoundly right.

—The power of love receives a striking illustration in the case of the Milwaukee girl who knocked her lover heels over head down a flight of stairs because he wantedto stop kissing long enough to get a good long breath.

U. S. District Attorney Rolfe is engaged in prosecuting liquor dealers in this district for violating the internal revenue law in selling without having the license which the law demands. These prosecutions cost the dealers nearly $100 each. John Grant, of Great Falls, who sold without license at the Strafford county Fair, was taken before U. S. Commissioner Woodman, of Dover, last Saturday, and allowed to settle by paying the tax, penalty and costs, amounting to $67. The tax which would have been required had he applied for a U. S. license would have been $12, which covers six months' sales.

New London's scythe factory has all it can do.

Charles R. Hardy has got a verdict from Keene, for being hit on the head by a breaking guy rope of a derrick, of $3750. He was badly hurt and reason endangered, he alleged.

A slander case, attended by half the citizens of Monroe, has been tried at Haverhill this term. Robert W. Laird was plaintiff and Daniel F. Blodgett defendant. The libel was in the form of hand-bills and charged Laird with all sorts of bad conduct. The jury gave him $285 damages.

On Saturday last Mr. and Mrs. Slocksi of Wilton left their home to be gone a short time, leaving their babe less than a year old on the bed and locked in the room with two other children. The larger one got some matches and set a fire in the closet, and when the parents returned home the house was so far destroyed that it was impossible to save the child. The others escaped from the building. The barn was also burned.

Western Bohemians.

[Chicago cor. Globe.]

The quantity of people coming from the East in search of newspaper work is surprisingly large. Naturally they find nothing to do and drift further West, lucky if they can settle down at last as man-of-all-work on some country sheet, doing local, reading proof, helping on the editorial, and receiving pay in orders which pass current at the country store for hall of their face, and which are paid for in advertising. If it happens to be an Iowa democratic paper, that most unprofitable of all productions, the orders are interesting only on account of the autographs. There is one young man who has nearly a complete collection of the signatures of the democratic editors of that State, which he acquired by dint of several months of hard labor, but which he would exchange for a day's supply of liquor. There are many of these nomadic reporters who are acquainted with every town in the West, and whose trunks have been held for board in a hundred hotels and lodging houses.

Railroad passes are easily secured, and when their credit is gone in one place they get a letter of recommendation from their employers and prominent citizens of the town, and start off for another, which is exploited in its turn. The newspaper which does not pay in money is made to contribute to their support in another fashion. A friendly notice and pressing solicitations secure a hat; an intimation of an unfriendly mention is the equivalent of a shirt; the insertion of the little paragraph, "Last Friday, we noticed our friend Jones, who keeps the dry goods store, asleep on the sidewalk near the court-house. Jones has a charming wife, and we cannot admire his taste in selecting a bedroom," lacerates the feeling of Jones to such a degree that he either thrashes the writer or propitiates him with a scarf in order to prevent a repetition. This is the plain, direct way in which newspaper men clothe themselves, without going through the ordinary circumlocution of being paid by their employer, and then handing over the money for the articles they want. Another middle man done away with.

More Complete Weather Reports.

[M. Quad in Detroit Free Press.]

There is a certain stiffness and formality about Old Probabilities' reports which common people would like to see changed for something more frank and open-hearted. The whole thing could be made more cheerful reading and more interesting to the young if some newspaper man had the weather to take care of. For instance, where the report now reads: "for the northwest rising barometer, with cold northerly winds" a right-minded journalist would say: "Folks in Wisconsin and Minnesota will get up and git to-morrow; it will be cold enough to freeze the hair on a hitching-post. Just a year ago to-morrow the 'Dublin Boy' and the 'San Francisco babe' had a set-to near New Orleans, and Dublin won; it is also the second anniversary of the Watertown Bank robbery, where the thieves carried off $2,000,000 and were allowed to keep $50,000 for their honesty in restoring the balance. Honesty is the best policy; look out for cold winds. An honest man's the noblest work of God, and a snow-storm is probable."

The present weather-man says: "For Saturday in the Gulf States, south and east winds, rising temperature, threatening weather and occasional rains." Now that should read: "Don't count on going to circuses and picnics Saturday; the umbrella market will be firm and buoyant, and the mud knee deep. Better stay at home and sew carpet-rags and get the buttons on your husband's Sunday shirt. Occasional rains may be expected to-morrow, and the New York detectives will probably catch another Nathan murderer."

Where the weather man says: "For the South Atlantic States increasing southeasterly winds, with cloudy weather, clearing away, by Saturday," it should read: "Splendid weather for going after persimmons down South; don't draw your shot-gun toward you by the muzzle; weather a little cloudy, but dad's rich, and so who cares; good day for setting out grave-stones. Use Fargo's Liver Pills for sick headache; no respectable family should be without it. A year ago or thereabout Senator Pomeroy gave Senator York $8,000, and never jump on to the front platform of a street car. Weather will clear up by Saturday night, and it will be a good night for going to the lodge. If your wife doesn't believe you went there tell her to smell of your breath."

Then where Probabilities says: "For the Middle and Eastern States southwest winds, with partly cloudy weather," it ought to read: "Not a good day for taking photographs east of Michigan. Some clouds loafing around, and good weather for stealing overcoats. About time to get boots for your boys; leave the pegs in, and the boys will prefer to go barefoot for awhile yet. Nothing like economy, and don't wear white pants when you go huckleberrying. Good day for New England sewing-women to make shirts at fifty cents per dozen. Southwest winds to be expected; don't fly your kites too high. About this time last year a New York County Treasurer acknowledged himself a defaulter to the amount of $60,000 but the tears of his aged father effected a compromise for $28,000, and the Treasurer commenced building a fine house. Don't lend money to strangers, and do unto others as you get a chance. May rain to-morrow night, and spelling-schools and candy-pulls are only a month distant. Be kind to your sister, and look out for a sharp frost."

Unfortunate Duck-Hunters.

[Peoria Review.]

The duck season may be considered about over. It closes earlier this year on account of the supply becoming exhausted. The reason of this is evident when we state that the editor of this excellent journal and Charlie Burdette, "gentlemanly and efficient" Registry Clerk at the post office, and "Judge," the black-and-tan that run off with the turtle, have gone up the lake to gather in all the ducks now extant. We are in constant receipt of telegrams from the party, and their progress is marked by great slaughter among the ducks and duckesses. The following is the bulletin:

Off Turtle Point, 7:30 A. M.—One of the guns has just fallen overboard; have tied a large stone to the "Judge's" tail and sent him down after the gun.

Later—The sagacious animal has just returned with it. He took it by the "muzzle" and put it on, to keep himself from being poisoned.

Second Dispatch—The editor has just shot a decoy duck, tearing it to pieces. He is now settling with a man for the same. The man is very ill-natured.

9:15 A. M.—Off Mossville. A dreadful storm has arisen, and the light shallop is dashing madly from billow to billow. We have just cast the dog overboard to lighten ship.

Later.—He has just climbed back again, bringing with him enough water to support a temperance meeting, and looking very much disgusted with the whole business.

On shore, above Mossville, 10 A. M.—The "Judge" has treed something in the top of a tree 280 feet high. It may be a bear. Charley has gone to the nearest house for an axe.

Later.—The tree is nearly down. We now think it is only a coon.

11:30.—The tree is swaying to its fall. We are certain it is a squirrel.

11:35.—The tree is down. It wasn't anything. But the tree fell on the dog and killed him.

12:15.—Charley has just shot a granger, in a red shirt, mistaking him for a turkey. We are fleeing before the indignant inhabitants.

12:30.—The dog has just caught up with us; he is not dead, but flattened out to the size of an army blanket—a ghastly spectacle.

—"Poor Jim Wayne!" remarks an Indiana paper, "he has gone where bartenders don't scowl when a man fills the glasses up."

New Publications.

"THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD;" By Charles Dickens. We have received a copy of the above named work from T. B. James, Brattleboro', Vt. Clark W. Bryan & Co., of Springfield, Mass., are the general agents. It will be remembered that when Dickens departed this life, he left this work unfinished and the "Mystery" was a mystery indeed. A year ago, so Mr. James declares, he was persuaded by the spirit of Mr. Dickens to become the amanuensis of the great novelist, and finish the work. The work as published has 408 pages. It will no doubt have a great run, as the public, who became interested in the "Mystery," will desire some end to the continued tale. Spiritualists will read it, because they believe it was actually dictated by Charles Dickens; skeptics will read it to convince themselves that spiritualism is a humbug; and others will read it from mere curiosity. The Sandusky Telegraph has given Mr. James a first-class "setting-up" and the editor says he is not a reliable man. If the work is an imitation of Dickens it is certainly cleverly done. It isn't at all likely that the ink wasted in denunciation of Mr. James will decrease the popularity of the work. Everything said pro and con brings it more into public notice, and James' Dickens' "Mystery of Edwin Drood" will be the best advertised book in this country. In this connection, we make public the statement vouched for by one of the most reliable citizens of Portsmouth, that more than a year ago, a lady of respectable connections and good character, living here, while on a visit to Boston, visited a medium, and was told that Charles Dickens desired her to act as his amanuensis in writing the conclusion of the same work on which Mr. James has since been engaged. Of course she is and was a believer in spiritualism, but her statements can be believed implicitly. We do not know the reasons given for her visit to Boston.

The publishers of the INTERNATIONAL REVIEW announce a change hitherto deemed only a possibility of the future. Articles in hand, arrangements with the most eminent European and American writers, with the promise of the Magazine, fully warrant them in issuing it six times a year. It is thus removed from the old type of quarterlies, and from its beginning adapted to the vigor and spirit of the times.

Gushing Hospitality.

After the breaking out of the yellow fever here, says a Memphis paper, a doctor, who lived within the corporation, but in a supposed healthy locality, insisted upon a brother disciple of Esculapius up town, where the pestilence stalked at noon-day, to come and take refuge at his house. The brother accepted the spontaneous invitation with pleasure, and took up quarters with his suburban host. It was not long before the guest was stricken with yellow fever, when, instead of receiving a brother's kind care from the ostentatious host, he was peremptorily ordered to leave on the shortest notice. The sick man was shocked at such inhuman treatment, but made his arrangements to get away, sick as he was. A carriage came for him; he was lifted into it, and conveyed to a place where he was and is receiving unselfish attention, although at the hands in part of strangers. He is very sick, and his recovery is regarded as doubtful. If the discharged guest dies it can be charged to the hypocritical host who invited him to his home under promise of protection, and then turned him out of doors at the first sign of danger. Such a heartless wretch deserves universal execration, and if the victim of his treachery dies, we propose to give his name to the public that he may read contempt in every passing face, and feel the stinging frowns of an incensed public.

—A Bennington daughter, whose domestic nature is equal to her natural simplicity, was invited by an Advent exhorter to join his sect, get her white robe ready and prepare to ascend. "I can't," the maiden replied: "father and mother are going up, and somebody must stay to see to the cattle."

—A Cleveland boy crawled under a lounge to avoid a thrashing, went to sleep, and two hundred persons searched for hours to find him.

Business Notices.

The VEGETINE has cured many cases of Scrofula of five, ten and twenty years' standing.

The Happiest Discovery of the Age.—ANAKESIS, an infallible cure for PILES, a scientific combination of positive, instructive and medicinal, endorsed by physicians of all schools, discovered by DR. SILSBEE, a regular physician, and used successfully in thousands of cases. Sufferers who have tried everything else in vain will find instant relief and permanent cure. It is regarded by medical men as the greatest of modern discoveries, and pronounced infallible. Price $1.00. Sent free by mail on receipt of price, depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Help the Torpid Organs.

When the body is in a state of health, the food taken into the stomach acts on the bowels as a stimulant, causing in them that worm-like motion by which their contents are expelled. The liver being in a natural condition, the flow of bile (which is a mild cathartic) into the intestines is ample and regular, and hence the discharges are easy and sufficiently frequent. The reverse of all this constitutes costiveness, and the only true method of cure is to restore the functional activity of the two important organs which use the bowels as a sewer for the egress of waste matter. For this purpose Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can be confidentially recommended as the most effective of all medicines. It is not too much to say that chronic constipation would be unknown if the Bitters were in universal use as a remedy in the earlier stages of the complaint. At this period of the year, when dyspepsia with all its kindred ills, orders are so apt to be engendered and aggravated by the dampness of the atmosphere, this unequaled stimulant, tonic and alterative should be taken daily.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. Nothing ever presented to the public as a beautifier of the complexion ever gave such satisfaction to this purpose as this Discovery. The effects of all medicines which operate on the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula, is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by all druggists. 703

Why Men Must do the "Popping."

Let us consider briefly the reason why men take the initiative. True, it has been one of our unwritten social laws that women may propose in leap year, that is, in every fourth year. But we have entirely failed to establish a case in point, or to name a woman who has availed herself of such prerogative. True also, we hear of certain women who "set their caps" to certain gentlemen. But this is not proposing or popping. A woman may lawfully and sexually use all her arts and wiles, and she may employ all the coquetry that is in her to bring about the "popping," but she may not "pop" herself. Now, whatever may be said to the contrary, marriage is of pecuniary value to women. To most of the sex it is a positive livelihood, and the main object of attainment in life. This paramount feeling, and the money question involved with it, would be indelicate were it openly announced; it is therefore quietly kept in the background, though none the less lost sight of. Etiquette requires it should not be openly put forward, and a woman is not supposed to offer herself in marriage, but rather to be sought after, by reason of the vast expense she brings upon the man for her support. Therefore, if the man pops the question, the right to do so falls to him by reason of the pecuniary responsibility to which he subjects himself by taking unto himself a wife. Royalty stands on a different footing; a queen may propose, and yet lose none of her sexual dignity. It will also have been observed that, in the case of the Princess Louise, that illustrious young lady was made by royal etiquette to take up quite a different position than that assumed by ladies without the pale of royal blood. In these cases the balance of material benefit is on the side of the woman, and the invitation to the place of high rank and power is clearly her prerogative. A lover suing for her hand would inevitably subject himself to suspicions of mercenary motives.

Again, the woman is not supposed to be the first to fall in love. Practice, we know, would upset this theory; it is as much human nature for a woman to fall in love with a man as it is for a man to fall in love with a woman. But there is just this difference, that the woman may not declare her passion, and therefore it is unborn—is not called into life—and by fiction does not exist till the man has first proposed and called her love into life, into responsive love with his own.

Men, moreover, on such matters, like to take the initiative; women must therefore wait until they are asked, and if they do love, must conceal it until they in return are loved. Sometimes, indeed, we do see women overstepping the bounds of delicacy, and so thrusting their passion before a man as virtually to amount to a declaration of their preference. Such overturning as an established rule is, however, fraught with danger to the practicer, for when about grasping the prize, she will most likely see it elude her too eager clutch. Men will too often give up the game entirely when they find themselves turned from the pursuer into the pursued. On paper it is difficult to draw a line where the allurement and the coquetry end, and the decided advance of woman to the unconcealed attack begins; such a line, however, does exist, and the well-regulated instinct of the sex points to just so far as may be gone with propriety and modesty, and no farther. A woman must just leave that suspicion of uncertainty in the mind of the swain as to the final result which will induce him to continue the pursuit and land him in a final popping of the question. Words are not spoken, but the mystical influence that surrounds two lovers interprets what the outside world cannot fathom. The eyes play a wonderful part, and these organs pop the question as much as the lips. In fact, we might set it down as an axiom that no man should pop the question with his mouth till the eyes of the woman have given him a virtual commission to do so. If this were more studied, and men did not take such encouragement from their own wishes, there would be far less chance of refusals.

Olive Logan says that the sight of of a woman's ankle in Wall street would put a quietus on any gold panic by drawing all the crowd away. How does Olive know?

—A farmer lost a gimlet in the woods near Monticello, Minn., three years ago, and the other day cut down an iron-wood tree; fast in the forks of which he found—not a gimlet, but a three-quarter inch auger! He is sorry he didn't wait a year or two longer, as a two inch auger was just what he wanted.

—The following tender missive was picked up in the ladies' sitting-room of a railroad depot: "Dear Chas., do you love me as much as you did at quarter to 12 last night? Say you do, dearest, and it will give me spirit to go down and tackle them cold beans left from yesterday." Charles' answer will undoubtedly run somewhat in this wise: "Dear Susan, I do. Tackle them beans!"

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND OLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

A Sea Spider with Oyster Barnacles.

In New Haven there is on exhibition a live sea spider, that has evidently been oppressed for a year or two past by a burden too great for one of its kind to bear. Firmly fixed upon its head and the forward portion of its back is a cluster of five oysters, evidently of two years' growth. One of the spider's eyes is entirely covered, while the other is fast disappearing under the remorseless growth of the bivalves. Barnacles appear, not only on the oysters, but upon the back of the spider, which has certainly had misfortune enough to render it morose and misanthropic.

—Four hundred artificial eyes per week is the ordinary production of a Paris manufactory. You can buy a good new eye from the concern for about £2. This won't wear more than two years unless you are extremely careful about winking, but then you can have it taken out and polished so that it will look as well and wear as well as new for some time longer. The Parisian eye-makers send a good many second-hand eyes to the poor heathen of India and the Sandwich Islands.

—A Frenchman has invented a boot with wheels, which, he says will enable the wearer to go considerably faster than a horse.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The earliest and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

(THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "H. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Dissecting A Doctor's Bill.

About three months ago, Jacob Milchman's wife, in Detroit, was somewhat ill, and thought a Doctor ought to be sent to her; so he called at a Detroit street office, and requested the physician to go to his house. The call was made, a prescription left with Mrs. H., and either the medicine was very effectual or Mrs. H. was not very sick, for when he called next time, she informed him that she was all cured, and he need not come any more. Last Monday, Jacob received by mail a bill from Dr. Z., "Due for medical services, $13 75."

Jacob studied a long time over that bill, and showed it to his wife, and studied over it with her; but the more he looked at it, the more it seemed to him that there must be a mistake. The next morning he called at the doctor's office, bill in hand, and found the proprietor sitting there, waiting to hear of some one suffering from green corn, or one of the other prevalent diseases.

Mr. Milchman laid his hat down carefully, and handed the bill to Dr. Z., saying: "You are Dr. Z., I suppose?"

"Yes, yes, certainly, Mr. Milchman; sit down. How is your wife?"

"Oh, my wife is all right. You doctored her, eh?"

"I gave her some medicine that seemed to work like magic."

"Yes, so it did, so it did. That was your bill, eh?"

"Yes, but no hurry about it, Mr. Milchman; take a little time on it, if you want to no hurry."

"That was right, was it—$13.75?"

"Let me see; yes that is the amount, Mr. Milchman; but no hurry about paying it you know."

"Thirteen dollars and seventy-five cents for one visit! That was pretty tam dear, don't you think so?"

Here the doctor smiled all over in the most forgiving way, saying: "My dear Mr. Milchman, you are far out of the way For one visit? My dear sir, that is the way with the unprofessional mind assure you when you see the items you will agree with me that the amount is low, sir, very low."

"Oh!" said Jacob, "there was items, was there? Well where are those items?"

"In my memorandum book, sir. You shall have them, certainly, if you wish. You want the items do you?"

"That is just what I want," said Jacob, and apparently much to the doctor's annoyance. He hesitated a moment and then drew a small memorandum book from his breast-pocket, opened it, looked at Jacob, and began:

"May—Use of horse and buggy to call on Mrs. Milchman, one dollar and a half."

"Stop a little," said Jacob, "till I write him down," and he proceeded to write the item down. "Don't you got no horse?" he asked when he had finished his writing.

"Ye-es," said the doctor, unwillingly, but of course I have to charge for use, the same as if he was a hired horse: don't you see?"

"Oh, yes, he was your horse but you charge yourself for him?"

"Yes, that's it. Now item No. 2. To looking at the tongue of Mrs. M., fifty cents"

"Oh! You look at my wife's tongue, eh."

"Certainly; I had to, you know. Item No 3. To feeling pulse of Mrs. M., sixty cents."

"Dat was cheap enough!"

"I knew you would think so," exclaimed the doctor, now satisfied that he was all right. "Item No. 4. To hearing Mrs. M.'s report of her case, one dollar."

"Mine Gott! You charge me for my wife's talking?"

"Only what she said in a professional way, I assure you. That item you will find correct; take the next. To writing prescription for Mrs. M., $3. That was where the heavy work came in, you know."

"Pretty tam heavy! I think so!"

Very reasonable for the amount of care I gave the subject, as you will see when you think it over. Item again—to calling the next day, with copy of prescription book with me, $3."

"Well, dat was all you got, ain't it? You was told my wife was all right, and that was only $9 60. Where you make your $13.65?"

"You are mistaken about that being all Mr. Milchman. No, sir. I could not let the matter drop there. Pray allow me to proceed. To studying over the case in my office, $2."

"Oh! you studied over him there?"

"Certainly I did. Next To riding around by your house, on my way home, and looking attentively about the premises, $1; to meeting child and asking how her mother was, $1; to making bill, postage, &c., fifteen cents. There, sir, are all the items, and very reasonable, too, upon my honor."

A Drunken Rochester.

[Omaha Bee, 24th ult.]

Quite a sensation—amusing to some and mortifying to others—was created at the Academy of Music last evening by the appearance upon the stage of R. S. Meldrum, in a state of intoxication, as Rochester, in the play of "Jane Eyre." This is the gentleman who made such a favorable impression as Julian Gray, the clergyman, in the "New Magdalen," the evening before. He then got golden opinions, as every one thought him a talented actor, as he certainly is, when sober. But last night he was unfortunately considerably "off." Previous to the rising of the curtain he had evidently played "Ten Bar-Rooms in a Very Short Time."

The audience was not long in discovering that Meldrum was not himself. He mouthed his words, hesitated in his recitations, mixed up his sentences terribly, and confused the remainder of the company.

"You smile, Miss Eyre," said the drunken Lord; "you should smile often." This created a general smile among the audience, who had by this time become too well convinced that his Lordship had "smiled" many times too often. His recommendation to Jane Eyre to indulge in "smiles" was therefore highly appreciated.

Miss Price finally could stand the insult no longer, and while Meldrum retired to get a breath of fresh air, she with indignant tears in her eyes and evident sorrow in her heart, stepped forward to the footlights and apologized to the audience in trembling tones:

"I beg your indulgence for a few moments. I deeply regret that you should be so insulted."

By her sincere manner she gained the heartfelt sympathy of every person in the house, and she was loudly applauded for the course she had taken.

Meldrum returned and played through the act, at the close of which Manager Hauchett appeared before the curtain and stated that no one could be more mortified than himself at the insult given by Meldrum. He had promptly discharged him, and he should never appear in his company again. Another gentleman, Mr. Murray, would read the remainder of the part. To-morrow evening (to-night) he himself would appear in "Nodoby's Daughter" in the part assigned to Meldrum.

This evening Miss Price will take her benefit. "Nobody's Daughter" will be presented. Miss Price, who has shown herself to be a talented actress and a lady, has the sympathy of the entire theatre-going public, and we predict for her this evening a crowded house.

Breaking a Horse's Heart.

[San Francisco Alta California.]

A term which has been taken with a great deal of allowance when applied to any disaster in the human family, has now an accepted place in the vocabulary of those who indulge in "horse talk." King Richard says: "They say women's hearts are easily broken; I find them tough enough." On the turf, a horse's heart is said to be broken when he is excelled by another horse while doing his level best, if that horse, so excelled, does not make a powerful and continued effort to turn the scale again. For instance, they say, if Occident has a leading race, he does well enough, and therefore Brown Dick was not allowed to pass him in his great trial; but if Brown Dick or any other horse should pass the California champion while extending himself to his utmost, it would "break his heart," and he would cease to make the necessary exertion to keep up the same rate of speed. To this knowledge of the weakness of other horses the little Goldsmith Maid owed the most of her triumphs, for it is now generally understood that she drives herself with as much intelligence as any human who can sit behind her. Mr. Collins, a thorough admirer of good horses, followed the little Maid through one campaign in the Eastern cities, and there discovered that the mare allowed her competitors to have a leading race until after passing the three-quarter pole, and then she went forward with her tremendous burst of speed, held in reserve for this emergency, and by so easily excelling that competitor produced that sensation which turfmen call "breaking the heart." She herself had to undergo these trials till she learned the trick, and now she plays it on the others.

A Red-Hot Lamp Post.

[Washington Republican.]

Officer Dyson reported yesterday morning, at the Sixth precinct, that the lamp-post corner of Seventh and I streets was on fire, which statement took his fellow-officers somewhat by surprise, as they knew the post was composed of iron, and that it was burning in the manner related was a story almost too strong to believe. Lieutenant Eckloff inquired what he meant by making such an assertion, when Dyson very promptly turned his back to him and presented his overcoat badly singed from top to bottom, and at the same time by signs indicated that the flesh had escaped with a slight warming. Lieut. Eckloff, with others, proceeded to the place indicated, and found the iron lamp-post nearly red hot. On further investigation it was discovered that a hole had been drilled through one side to the interior and looking through this a blaze was seen rushing up through the hollow part of the post with a buzzing sound. Attached to the lamp-post was a letter-box, which was also quite hot. It appears that the underground joint at the foot of the post had sprung a leak from the carelessness of the laborers in digging up the street improvement, and that the gas escaping through the post had, by some means, become ignited, possibly by some lounger lighting his pipe by striking a match on the post. The policeman, after undergoing the heating process, moved off at a respectful distance, and watched others who approached the post, to see how they would enjoy a warm lean, and had the satisfaction of witnessing them move away in a hurry, he says as if struck by lightning. The gas company was notified to extinguish the light and stop the leak.

The remains of an Indian have been dug up in Gilford.

The Elections.

On Tuesday, elections were held in Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Returns from all but 24 towns in Massachusetts give Washburn, republican, 70,775; Gaston, democrat, 57,912; scattering 426. Washburn's majority will be about 12,000. Boston gave Gaston 1187 plurality; Newburyport 137; Lawrence 287; Lowell 566, and Worcester 1618. Washburn had 23 plurality in Gloucester; 233 in Lynn; 114 in Haverhill; 189 in Salem; 122 in Fall River; and 939 in New Bedford. Gen. Guiney is re-elected register of probate in Boston by 223 plurality. Gen. Banks is chosen to the State Senate in the 2d Middlesex district by 1091 majority over Geo. W. Copeland. Hon. Jonathan A. Lane, independent republican, is chosen to the Senate from one of the Boston districts over the regular republican nominee by 1094 plurality. The 1st Worcester district elects Hon. Geo. F. Verry, independent Butlerite, to the Senate, over the regular republican nominee. The legislature will consist of 27 republican Senators,; 11 democratic Senators, and two independent republicans;—173 republican Representatives; 64 democrats and 24 undecided. Mayor Peirce, of Boston, republican, is elected to Congress to fill a vacancy, by a majority of 5819, there being but 1029 votes cast against him.

New York city and State have again reverted to the control of the democracy. Brooklyn elects Hunter, democrat, for Mayor by a majority of 7000. The republicans elected six of the nine assemblymen. Hon. S. S. Cox, democrat, is chosen to Congress. The Tammany democratic majority in New York city is 39,000. The State is democratic by about 5000 majority. No Governor was elected this year. Both branches of the legislature are republican.

Virginia elects Kemper, democrat, for Governor by 15,000 to 20,000 majority. Richmond, Petersburg, Staunton, Norfolk and Lynchburg give large democratic majorities.

The returns from seven townships and assembly districts in New Jersey show large republican majorities and gains. The election is for members of the legislature, and the result will undoubtedly show quite a gain. Both branches are republican.

The returns from New Jersey indicate a Republican victory and that the Republicans will elect a successor to Stockton, Democratic U. S. Senator.

The entire republican ticket, headed by Davis for Governor, is elected in Minnesota.

Wisconsin has chosen Taylor, democrat, to the gubernatorial chair, by about 5000 majority. Milwaukee gives him 6300 majority.

Returns from Illinois indicate large gains for the farmers' ticket. Chicago has chosen H. D. Colvin, Mayor, by 7000 majority. Twelve of the twenty aldermen were on the people's ticket with him. The result will be the repeal of the Sunday liquor law. The defeated ticket was called the citizens' law and order ticket.

A dispatch from Little Rock, Arkansas, says the republican ticket is elected.

Kansas elects a republican legislature.

A Detroit, Michigan, dispatch says Moffat, republican, has 1000 majority for Mayor.

Readables.

Eight persons were killed and several injured by an explosion of fireworks at Lambeth, London.

The type setting upon The Christian a weekly religious newspaper in Boston, is done by a machine invented by O. L. Brown of Boston, a machine "so simple that a child can learn to run it in a day." It sets from ten to fifteen thousand ems per day, and the distributing is automatic.

The Sacramento Union, the chief republican supporter of the new party in California, thinks that the movement is the foundation of one of the national parties of 1876. "There will be two parties," it says, "most certainly; but the second one, three or four years hence, will not be the republican nor the democratic, in fact, whatever it may be in name. It will be composed of the odds and ends of all the old parties."

The New York Herald says: "There have been various 'feelers' put out of late relating to the franking privilege, evidently meant to test public feeling, and to bring forth some expression of public opinion. Our special dispatch from Washington assures us that the project has assumed definite shape, and that the restoration of that privilege will be attempted at the coming session of Congress. If this shall prove true, we look for uncommonly lively times during the winter. We can hardly imagine anything that would arouse more amazed indignation throughout the country than a serious attempt on the part of Congress to assume to itself again that old form of robbing the Tresury of the United States."

The Printers' Union of New York has adopted a plan, in view of the general depression of business, which is in gratifying contrast to the course pursued by many other trades-unions. It has resolved to use its influence to persuade all employers throughout the city not to discharge their operatives but rather to reduce the wages of all, or put them on short time. This plan, they think, would prevent much suffering, which can in no other way be avoided. The same men will advise all their conferees to assist the employers by willingly working a little longer for the old wages or accept a reduction of pay. This is no time, they think, for employers and employed to be at war. The panic is a calamity to all, the rich as well as the poor, and they contend that all ought to help one another to weather it through.

State News.

There is a hint that the prohibition folks of Hillsborough county will soon inaugurate a war to the knife on the liquor interests, by seizing, selling, &c., liquors, measures and all.

An old gentleman in Franklin has received from two sons who honor his gray head, a house worth $4,500, and furniture, &c., in addition.

The Significance of Dinner.

[Christian Union.]

"Much wisdom in olives," said Sancho Panza, and, he might have added, a whole system of domestic and social economy, a whole history of civilization in the institution of dinner. What hopes and charities are born of a good one! "Not reason on a full stomach!" Why, then we reason best of all, and it will be a good sign when nations and individuals settle their differences over the dinner-table, instead of over councilboards and lawyer's desks. Indeed, every one knows that, in some way or other, Anglo-Saxon politics have a fundamental dependence on dinners; they are the national sacrificial solemnities, where amiable understandings are arrived at, and feasting, instead of fighting, learnt. Even theologically we are beginning to perceive that the spirit of fasting is an evil spirit, full of all unreasonableness and uncharitableness. A good dinner is a temporary conversion; even a bad man is the better for it, and when it is the universal "use and wont" the millenium will not be far off, and men will learn war no more. Dinner is the festal sacrifice to household loves, and sacred friendship, and intellectual recreation. Let us not disgrace it into an orgie or a necessity. It must be when the business hours are over, and the holiday-part of the day begins. We must prepare ourselves for it by throwing the garments of our toil off the body, and its cares off our minds. It must be ready just when we are ready, it must be sat down to in a good temper, and the indulgence of appetite must be associated with social intercourse, and easy displays of intellectual vivacities and felicities; for a silent dinner-table is almost indecent.

Freifal Babies.

[Hearth and Home.]

Babies often cry without any apparent reason; but a mother can usually discover a reason if she stops to think about it. And it is worth stopping to think about, no matter if the housework or sewing be delayed a while in consequence. Perhaps it has eaten something which disagrees with its stomach; perhaps it is thirsty, for little babies are often thirsty and will drink a tea spoonful of cold water with the greatest eagerness, and be quiet and satisfied after it. Perhaps its little sock is tied too tightly, as my baby's was the other day. I found a deep red mark around her little ankle, which at once explained her fretfulness. More likely than anything else the flannel band around its bowels, if happily one is there, or its skirt band is pinned too tightly. I know a baby who has cried a great deal since his birth. I think the chief cause of it is because he has always been dressed too tightly. The mother said to me one afternoon, when the child was so cross she hardly knew what to do: "I've a great mind to undress him and put on his night gown; he is always real good then. So she did, and he commenced to be good at once. Mothers should search for all possible causes when their babies get fretful. They should not be too ready to attribute their crying to nervous temperament or to hunger, for it is more likely to be caused by the prick of a pin or an overfed stomach than either.

Indian Superstition.

A letter writer at Fort Sill, in the Indian Territory, relates the following incident:

While walking around with others, looking at the fantastic dress and equipment of the Indians sitting on their horses, we noticed a young woman who had a cradle, apparently empty, hanging from the horn of the saddle. One of the party lifted the flap of calico that ordinarily shields the head of the child in a cradle from the sun, and then to our surprise we saw that in the cradle was a rosy-cheeked, flaxen-haired American doll. One of the party was so inconsiderate as to ask through an interpreter why she carried with her the cradle and doll. The poor creature replied in a sweet-toned voice and in an abashed and mortified manner, that it was her misfortune to be a childless wife, and that she carried the cradle and doll because she believed they would aid her in becoming a mother. I learned from one of the interpreters that the small Comanche-made dolls, fabricated of buckskin, beads and silver, so as to resemble a Comanche warrior, one of which I gave the Smithsonian Institution in 1862 or 1863, are given by young wives to their husbands, and are worn on their breast by the husbands with the same object that led the young woman to carry the cradle and doll.

John Brown's Widow.

A letter from Red Bluff, Cal., says: "As she is called, the wife of the great John Brown still resides here, pleasantly situated, and surrounded with pleasant, comfortable influences. She has won the esteem and confidence of the people and commands the admiration of all parties, irrespective of political opinion. Her home has been freed from debt and under her own vine and fig tree she lives, with none to molest and make her afraid. She has three daughters, who have been engaged in teaching school. They are said to be very intelligent ladies. The eldest has received many calls to go back South and help to educate the race her father died to benefit. She feels it somewhat her duty, and will probably go. Since living here, Mrs. Brown has received aid from England, and many letters expressing high regard for her husband's memory. She has made this place her permanent home, and intends to spend her days among this people."

Marriageable Girls from Lowell.

[Truckee (Nev.) Republican.]

The report was circulated yesterday that about fifty marriageable girls from Lowell were on the emigrant train on their way to Los Angelos, and would be in Truckee about midnight last night. The report was true, so far as the number of the girls and their coming were concerned. The excitement among the bachelors in that place, in consequence of the news that such a precious invoice of freight was near at hand, was most intense. Some of the most susceptible young men, who had been boasting of the superiority of Eastern girls over California daughters, went down on the eleven o'clock P. M. passenger train to Boca, in order to come up on the emigrant train, and thus to have a fair view, and make the acquaintance of some of the fascinating Lowell damsels. The train with its feminine cargo, arrived here shortly after midnight. The bachelors who went down to Boca are mum over their trip. They got awfully sold. There was scarcely a pretty girl in the crowd. One had lost her teeth, and appeared to be gumming her way across the continent; another was deaf, and several had glass eyes; one had a hair lip, while the most promising looking one in the crowd was tongue-tied. One of the bachelors undertook to pay his "distresses" to this, the most likely one of all, and actually offered her his hand, name and a home in Truckee. She puckered up her mouth for half an hour in the vain endeavor to answer him, and probably would have succeeded had not the remorseless conductor cried out, "All aboard!" and started up the train

Curious Electrical Phenomenon.

A party of surveyors belonging to the United States geological survey expedition of 1872 had a novel experience of the summit of a peak near Cinnabar Mountain. When they were within 500 feet of the top, a storm came up and they were enveloped in clouds. The ascent was very difficult, as the fragments of rock were sharp, and most of them loose, sliding from beneath the feet of the party as they clambered onward. One of the company, however, succeeded in reaching the highest point and depositing his instruments, when he discovered that he was in the midst of an electrical cloud, and his feelings not being of the most agreeable sort, he retreated. As he neared the remainder of the party they observed that his hair was standing on end, as though he were on an electrical stool, and they could hear a series of snapping sounds as if he were receiving the charges of a number of fractional electrical machines. Another member who attempted the ascent received a shock which deterred him. The peak was appropriately called Electric Peak. Its altitude, as measured the following day, is 10,992 feet above the sea.

Foreign Trade.

A New York despatch says that the trade between Havana and that city has been almost killed by the existing monetary stringency. People in Havana are buying nothing from New York except the merest necessities of life. The price of sugar in Havana is ridiculously low, lower than its actual value, and owners naturally refuse to sell. The steamers cannot get sugar as ballast. Formerly when they carried sugar as freight they received $2 50 per box, now they can obtain only fifty or perhaps twenty-five cents. Sailing freights in Cuba practically have ceased to exist, and vessels are offered to take sugar for nothing in order to get away from the place.

At all the offices of the European steamships the complaint is general that the import trade has fallen off seriously, while the exports from this country continue to the full capacity of all the steamers. Four steamships, Saturday, took an aggregate of 87,000 bales of cotton, besides great quantities of wheat, corn, oats, bacon, cheese, lard, beef, pork, flour and tobacco.

—We have societies for the protection of everything worth protecting, with the one important exception of human life. As a mere suggestion, we would ask whether some philantropist might not institute a society to prevent:

1. Silly children playing in a public road thronged with vehicles.

2. Stupid donkeys looking with lighted candles for leakage in gas-pipes.

3. Foolish acrobats dancing on tight ropes or swinging on trapezes at giddy heights.

4. Reckless men travelling by railway unaccompanied by one director or two directors or two bishops as guarantees against accident.

5. Hard-working ballet-girls pursuing their vocations in dresses which a single spark will wreath in flames in a single moment.

We offer this suggestion without the faintest hope of it being carried into effect, yet legislation and philanthropy have been wasted on more insignificant matters.

—"Pray, sir, of what profession are you?" asked Mr. Edwin James of a witness who had come prepared to prove a fact and who was deemed not very respectable. "Sir, I am a shoemaker and wine merchant." "A what, sir?" said the learned counsel. "A wine merchant and shoemaker." "Then," said Mr. James, I may describe you as a sherry cobbler!"

—A patient who called upon a spiritual medium in an Illinois town for advice about the rheumatism, was somewhat startled on being told that the disease would soon leave his left leg—startled because that happened to be a fine patent army leg presented to him by a grateful country.

—To save our readers the trouble of referring to the scales, we would state that one million dollars gold coin weighs 3685.8 pounds avoirdupois; one million dollars silver coin weighs 58,929.9 pounds avoirdupois.

Business Notices.

Help the Torpid Organs.

When the body is in a state of health, the food taken into the stomach acts on the bowels as a stimulant, causing in them that worm-like motion by which their contents are expelled. The liver being in a natural condition, the flow of bile (which is a mild cathartic) into the intestines is ample and regular, and hence the discharges are easy and sufficiently frequent. The reverse of all this constitutes costiveness, and the only true method of cure is to restore the functional activity of the two important organs which use the bowels as a sewer for the egress of waste matter. For this purpose Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can be confidently recommended as the most effective of all medicines. It is not too much to say that chronic constipation would be unknown if the Bitters were in universal use as a remedy in the earlier stages of the complaint. At this period of the year, when dyspepsia with all its kindred disorders are so apt to be engendered and aggravated by the dampness of the atmosphere, this unequaled stimulant, tonic and alterative should be taken daily.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. Nothing ever presented to the public as a beautifier of the complexion ever gave such satisfaction for this purpose as this Discovery. The effects of all medicines which operate on the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula, is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by all druggists. 702

SOMETHING NEW FROM GERMANY.

UNDERCLOTHING

Made from Needles of the German Black Pine, called VEGETABLE WOOL.

A Sure Preventive of Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Gout.

JOHN MALSBENDEN,

MERCHANT TAILOR, NO. 1 BRIDGE ST.,

has just imported from the manufactory of Messrs. Laritz, of Ronda, in Thuringen, a quantity of Underclothing, Drawers, Socks, Bandages, Wadding Knee Warmers and Insoles, made from the newly discovered Vegetable Wool.

This Wool is manufactured from the fibre of the needles of the Black Pine. Garments made from it are a sure preventive of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout and diseases of a similar nature. The Garments are soft and warm, and are sold at reasonable prices.

Persons suffering from either of the above Diseases may be speedily cured by the Wadding and an Oil prepared from the Black Pine Needles. For sale by Mr. MALSBENDEN, who has testimonials from the highest medical authorities of Europe, proving the value and efficacy of this discovery as a preventive and cure of rheumatic pain.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Shocking Death.

Shortly after noon of Tuesday, the family of Mr. Charles F. McLaughlin, living on the Haven L. Scott farm at Newington, were horrified at seeing a horse belonging there gallop home with the body of a man dragging by the heels to the harness. Mrs. McLaughlin ran to the rescue and found her husband dead from the wounds he had received from the heels of the horse and from being dragged over the ground. No explanation is given of the accident, except that Mr. McLaughlin, who drove a milk wagon, after delivering milk to his customers, was seen driving homeward sitting unsteadily on his wagon. Some person as yet unknown was seen to get on the wagon and steady him, afterward leaving Mr. McLaughlin to drive on alone. The supposition is that the unfortunate man fell from the wagon and was caught in some manner by the reins or harness, the horse became frightened and ran away. The deceased was 31 years of age, was a genial companion and had a large circle of friends.

His funeral services will be held at the Newington meeting-house this (Thursday) afternoon at half-past two o'clock, with Masonic honors. A large delegation of Masons will attend from this city.

Metamorphosed--Water Street.

The improvement and change made in the large building on Water Street, owned by our enterprising fellow-townsman, Hon. Frank Jones, gives an air of respectability to the whole of the street from the corner to Liberty Bridge. Three splendid stores have been finished and rented and the occupants are doing a flourishing business in the line of meat, groceries and provisions. Situated above the stores alluded to are eligible tenements conveniently arranged, and if not already let, as rents are at present, they will not be long in the market, as the thorough transformation and remodeling of the building, together with its nearness to the wharves, where a large fishing business is done in the winter, makes them very desirable residences.

Water street, by the way, has very much improved within the past few years, and instead of the old dilapidated dwellings with their tobacco-stained and bloated occupants and the score of dirty gin-mills and houses of ill-repute with their sin-cursed inmates, there are a goodly number of tidy stores and comfortable and respectable houses on the street. It is true that there is yet a chance for improvement in the inhabitants of the locality referred to as well as in their habitations. It is true that there exist in that region dens of infamy into which we would not allow a child of ours to enter any more than we would permit it to cross the threshold of the best-house when filled with small-pox patients. It is also true that liquors of abominable quality are there dealt out, but there are other localities of equal size in the city where a much greater amount of sin lurks in the form of dram shops and tenements filled with frail women and were it not for the fact that comparisons are odious, we would name them. Ten years ago, it was considered hardly safe for a lady to pass through Water street for fear of an insult, and a man would have preferred to be armed before venturing through the street in the evening. Now ladies walk that thoroughfare during the day without any fears in the direction alluded to, and, ordinarily a man is as safe in Water street in the night as he is in the day-time.

We are filled with hope concerning the future of this noted locality, formerly stigmatized as the Five Points or the North street of Portsmouth, when we observe the marked improvement in its buildings, indicating as it does a degree of pride that will not long tolerate for neighbors those whose moral character is such that contiguous property is depreciated by contact. We are greatly surprised, however, to note the wretched condition of the road-bed of Water street. From State street corner to the South-mill Bridge the thoroughfare is in such a condition as to justify any one with a loaded team in avoiding it, even if double the distance must be travelled to reach the place of destination. In some portions of it teaming is even dangerous, and our opinion is corroborated by a respected citizen doing business on the street, who stated to us a day or two since that in his judgment, he thought any Grand Jury would unhesitatingly find a bill of indictment against the city for such gross neglect of the public highway should the matter be properly complained of. We trust that nothing of this kind will be done, although we are at a loss to conceive why the Street Commissioner or the Aldermanic committee on street's have neglected their duty in this matter so long. By graveling it up, and properly repairing it, its respectability is still further enhanced, and it should be done forth with. G.

Seabrook.

The South Seabrook parish, of which Mr. William A. Rand is teacher and pastor, flourishes even in hard times, and in spite of disaster. With the assistance of friends abroad they are getting a bell for their church, to weigh 1000 pounds. This season many of the fishermen, including one whole crew, at Labrador and in the Bay of St. Lawrence, have been shipwrecked, but it has so happened that not a Seabrook life has been lost.

In thankfulness for this providence they propose to hang and for the first time ring the bell on Thanksgiving day, the 27th instant, and to call it a Thanksgiving bell. Mr. Rand is now in the seminary at Andover on his second year's study, but returns Saturdays, usually accompanied by other students, giving special interest to the temperance and social meetings on Saturday evenings and to their services on Sunday.

Lyceum.

The first lecture of the Lyceum course was given on Tuesday evening by James T. Fields, Esq., of Boston. The audience was respectable, of course, and of sufficient size to dispel the fears previously entertained by the committee that they would hardly be able to realize their expenses. The Society under whose auspices these lectures are given is to be congratulated upon the favor which a carping public has seen fit to bestow upon this lecture enterprise, and altho' thus far the receipts are not greatly in excess of the expenditures we hope that a generous sum may be obtained in this manner for the worthy cause which the S. P. C. A. represents. Mr. Fields with a generosity keeping with his nature, contributed his lecture fee to the exchequer of the Society, and while, we presume, such conduct is not expected of future entertainers in the Course above referred to, still we do not think the injunction of "go and do thou likewise" inappropriate considering the merits of the cause.

Mr. Fields' lecture was a pleasant ramble among men and women of note and eminence to find those who were as he termed it, "masters of the situation." And well did he portray those instances wherein men have shown themselves to be equal to the emergency before them. The audience testified their approval of his effort by frequent applause which though not especially hearty was as generous as is usually accorded a lecturer by a Portsmouth audience. Mr. Fields is suffering from inflammation of the knee joint, which incapacitates him from moving about upon the stage; thus he is prevented from giving that force to his silvery utterance, that is required to give the full effect that is capable of being produced by his glowing words.

Divorces decreed: Belle Louisa Gaines (of Portsmouth) from George Gaines; Mary A. Gould (of North Hampton) from Charles S. Gould.

Laconics.

Col. Daniel Hall of Dover, the next member of Congress from this district, was in town, Wednesday.

Mr. Rufus Emery of York, who recently broke his leg on the Navy Yard, has been the recipient of a purse containing $185, the contribution of carpenters and friends on the Yard. It characterizes their ready generosity when one in need requires their aid.

We are requested to warn our citizens not to give old clothing to strangers who may call for aid. One woman has been collecting clothing here and sending it to Boston for sale. A movement for the protection of the poor is on foot, and when fairly organized, all the old clothes that can be collected here will be needed.

The night trains will be taken off the Eastern and North American Railway on the 10th inst., and after that date no Pullman cars will be run on that road. The St. John people are disappointed at this announcement, and a petition containing the names of over 200 leading citizens and business men has been prepared for the retention of the cars.

Major Alexander Rice, who has been connected with the Eastern and the P. S. & P. Railroads for 29 years past, has retired from the service of the companies. Major Rice has been faithful to the Railroads and courteous to the public, being one of those men of integrity on whom could rest no suspicion of embezzlement even in these fast times. May his successor leave as excellent a record.

If a stranger visiting Portsmouth on the first five days of this month did not desire to be "away down upon the Swanee river," it certainly was not the fault of the gamins. Pope night is as regularly celebrated in Portsmouth as is the Fourth of July—and such hideous tones as are evolved from tin horns in the stillness of early morn and eventide, by the chaps who practice that they may become perfect, would tend to disarrange the brain of George Francis Train, even. The wind-wasters were all over town on the night of the 5th, there being about one hundred horns to each square mile Pumpkin lanterns blazed and were smashed—but there were none of the high old times of a score of years ago when every other boy in town went home on Pope night with a nose resembling a "bruised reed."

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

—The latest invention calculated to do away with human skill is a patent piano player, by which an aspirant for musical distinction can perform the most difficult pieces without the preliminary torture known as practicing of those terrors to the infant mind called scales. This wonderful machine owes its birth to Paris. It occupies a position in front of the keyboard of the piano, and extends from above the keyboard to the floor. Over the keys of the piano are keys corresponding to the keys beneath them. These are the fingers of the machine, and they have this advantage over the human hand, that they have a finger for every note. The top of the machine is about one foot in width. It has in the centre two rollers, which are moved by a crank. These carry the music through, and as it passes the piano plays it. The music is on paper, and the notes are made by cutting holes in squares. As these holes pass a certain point they allow a hammer to pass through, and the stroke of that hammer is communicated to its own key on the piano. Each key has its hammer. It only requires that these holes be cut at proper intervals to strike any number of keys in any given series. The machine can be adapted to any instrument with keys.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the SINGER Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Sheep Washing.

[N. Y. Observer.]

Some years ago the good people of the town of L——, Mass., assembled for the purpose of forming a temperance society. After the usual preliminaries, the pledge was submitted to the audience for signatures. At that, Deacon Smith arose and addressed them thus:—"My friends, I should have no objections to signing your pledge but for one thing. I have been accustomed to have my plum pudding at Christmas. Now, you all know that plum pudding is good for nothing without sauce, and sauce is insipid without a little good brandy in it. Now, it you can fix your pledge so that I can have my brandy sauce, and plum pudding at Christmas, I will sign it with great pleasure." After a little arguing pro and con, a clause was added allowing Deacon S. his brandy sauce at Christmas, but at no other time; and Deacon S. signed the pledge.

Soon after farmer Jones arose and said:

"My friends, I have no objections to signing your pledge if you allow me one thing. I always want liquor in the harvest-field to counteract the bad effects of so much cold water as is usually drank at that time. If you can fix it so that I can have my liquor in the harvest-field, I will sign your pledge."

Again, after considerable arguing, there was a clause added allowing farmer Jones his liquor in the harvest-field, but at no other time.

After farmer Jones had taken his seat, his neighbor Bent arose.

"My friends," said he, "I will sign your pledge if you add one thing to it, that is, fix it so that I can have my liquor at sheep-washing. I think it very necessary for men to have some good strong liquor to drink when coming out of the water after washing sheep, to prevent the bad effects that arise from standing in it so long.

After a good deal of talk, a clause was added allowing farmer Bent his liquor at sheep-washing, but at no other time. When all had signed the pledge, the meeting was adjourned one week.

The next morning one of farmer B.'s neighbors was passing his house, and the old gentleman stepped out just then gloriously drunk.

"Why, Uncle John, how's this?" said the neighbor, a good deal surprised. "I thought you signed the pledge last night."

"So I did," replied Uncle John, "but (hic) I am wash-ish-ing sheep."

He led the way to the barn, the neighbor following. On arriving there he saw, standing in the middle of the barn-floor, a big wash-tub about half full of water, and the old ram tied to it, wet as he could be and shivering with cold. Close by stood a two-gallon jug. Uncle John, pointing to the ram with an air of triumph, said:

"I (hic) washed that (hic) sheep twelve times this morning."

The Sierra Nevada Observatory.

Mr. James Lick, a wealthy citizen of San Francisco and a warm friend of science, has for some time contemplated the erection of an observatory, with a very powerful telescope, at some high point on the Sierra Nevadas—the celebrated mountain range of California. He has now fully decided to carry out the project, and as his means are very ample, there is now little doubt of its consummation. On this subject, in an address before the California Academy of Science on the 20th ultimo, President Davidson said: "With a telescope of the largest size and most consummate workmanship that American skill can devise, properly located ten thousand feet above the sea in the clear skies of the Sierra Nevada; with every variety of apparatus commensurate therewith; with masters of observation and ingenuity in research; with ample funds reserved to devise other instruments that the highest genius must suggest, we hope at no distant day to see solved the mighty problems of creation that are yet beyond our grasp. Such an outfit and such provision have been the lifelong objects of James Lick, and, after much earnest solicitation, I have overcome his shrinking from what he considers vain-glory, and obtained his permission to announce to the Academy his intentions, which I have faintly sketched in the preceding sentence. There will be no let or hindrance in carrying out his views; the amplest means are provided, the rarest skill has been invoked, and the plans are taking definite and practical shape." In regard to Mr. Lick's wealth, the San Francisco Bulletin of recent date, says: "The exact value of his property is unknown; probably he does not know it himself; but the books of the county assessor show that he is taxed on property located in this city valued for purposes of taxation at $1,715,554. This is not only a low valuation, but it does not by any means comprise the entire property owned by Mr. Lick, he being a large owner of land in other parts of the State. His property at its present valuation would probably amount to between three and four millions, while its prospective value is beyond computation. So far from being crippled by his great gifts, his estate in a very few years will be sufficient to enable him to greatly extend his benefactions."

—"Anna, dear, if I should attempt to spell Cupid, why could I not get beyond the first syllable?" Anna gave it up, whereupon William said: "Because I come to c u, of course, and I cannot go any further."

A Remarkable Operation.

[Whitehall Times.]

B. Franklin made his name famous when he flew his kite and brought down lightning from the clouds which had been flying around without paying its way. Now we not only flash through on wires, but science has crippled electricity and used it to perform miracles. The Times readers will remember when General Kilpatrick returned from Chili, three years since, of his having a remarkable operation performed upon him by a physician in New York, who removed a large fleshy formation from the General's neck by filling it full of needles and then attaching a galvanic battery to it. Ten minutes after the current of electricity was let on, the bunch had entirely disappeared. A remarkable operation was performed by a Whitehall physician a few days ago. A gentleman who had been suffering from a superabundance of adipose tissue consulted a physician, asking for relief from its burden. The doctor told him he could relieve him if he would consent to a painful operation. The gentleman consented, and with the medical practitioner entered the telegraph office at this place The fat man was requested to remove his coat and vest, after which the physician surrounded him with wires, attaching the ends to a powerful galvanic battery. At a signal from the doctor, Manager W. B. Eddy let on the current. The patient writhed and twisted when he felt the current passing around him, still he stood like a martyr. Presently he began to shrink; he grew smaller and smaller; his clothing hung in bags about his fast-diminishing form. The doctor felt much pleased at the result of his experiment, while the formerly fat man's joy was very great, although he seemed to be suffering most acute pain.

All of a sudden there was heard a loud clicking at the instruments, as if Pandemonium's great hall had been let loose. The operator sprang quickly to answer the call. He ascertained it was from the New York office. He quickly asked, "What's up?" An answer came back as if some infuriated demon was at the other end of the wire, "What in thunder are you about? Cut off your wires, quick! You are filling the New York office with soap-grease!"

A Witness Who Goes to Funerals.

We clip from the Manchester Eng., Times the following testimony of a witness in the Tichborne case, who seemed to have a dismal line of duty to follow:

George Hickman, an undertaker, living in Mile End Road, said: I formerly lived at Wapping, and knew Arthur Orton. He had lighter hair than the defendant. During the last trial I was brought here to see the defendant, who I was told was Orton, but I found that he was not Orton. Arthur's upper lip protruded much.

Dr. Kenealy. Were there any marks upon his face? It was marked with the smallpox.

Looking at the defendant's hands—do they remind you of Arthur's? No, they are much smaller.

What kind of a walk had Arthur? A "sobering" kind of walk.

What kind of a voice? Gruff; quite different to the defendant's.

Is the defendant at all like your old friend? No, sir.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hawkins: I last saw my old friend in 1852 or 1853. The defendant's voice is unlike that of any of the Ortons. Arthur and Edmund were very much the same size. I don't know if Edmund wore ear-rings or was pock-marked.

Where were you when you last saw Arthur? On the pier-head at Wapping. I was waiting for a funeral at the time; I sometimes attend the same funeral a dozen times. [Laughter.]

Do you; how is that? [Laughter.] Do you want to know?

Yes. Very well then. [Laughter.] I go to measure, don't I? [Laughter.]

Well? Next I go with the coffin, don't I? [Increased laughter.]

Well? Next I go with the pall, don't I? [Great laughter.]

Well? Next I go to bury, don't I? [Greater laughter.]

Well? And sometimes I have got to go for the money, haven't I? [Roars of laughter.]

Mr. Hawkins. Very well. You may go, Mr. Hickman. [Laughter.]

The Tri-Color in Alsace-Lorraine.

A young French officer, M. Saint-Genest, relates in one of the Paris papers what he has recently seen in Alsace-Lorraine. The Germans are waging a bitter war in the severed provinces against the three colors. The other day a Prussian officer pinned a tri-color cockade to his horse's tail, and dragged in the dust. "Bah!" said the peasants, "even the animals wear French colors." Tri-colored flags wave from the tree-tops, and the German troops are constantly engaged in felling timber to get rid of the obnoxious red, white, and blue. When the enemy has gone to sleep the patriarch of the family rouses up the children and teaches them French, and the good wife pulls out the flag, which she has kept hidden since Froschwiller, and unfolds it in the silence of the night.

—Says the Rutland, Vt., Herald: "At the time of the late fire here, a lady whose house was supposed to be in danger hurriedly dressed herself, ran out, and inquired of some lady friends who were standing on the sidewalk in front of the house: 'Is my back hair on straight?' The ruling passion strong in fright."

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1873.

After the Elections.

In view of recent events in Ohio, New York, Wisconsin and elsewhere, hadn't the scheme to revive the franking abuse better be dropped?

The great democratic victories will not alter the political complexion of congress one whit. The democrats gain a Senator in Virginia and lose one in New Jersey. The Times of this city cackles over a "gain" of a Senator in Maryland. As both the present Senators are democrats, we can't see the gain.

We dont think, now, that Roscoe Conkling will succeed Chief Justice Chase. Roscoe is very good-looking, but the way things look, Reuben E. Fenton is going to give him employment at home.

It is curious how the same events will strike different people. Take Tuesday's elections for example. They have sent the old hunker stripe of democrats into the seventh heaven of ecstacy; they are extravagantly "enthused" over the results, and are busily engaged in erecting no end of air castles out of the figures. On the contrary, the sickest lot of men the country has seen since the Presidential election are our liberal friends; many of these are earnestly for reform, as they understand it, but this ephemeral resurrection of Bourbon democracy postpones indefinitely the realization of their scheme for a new party. Lastly, the most serenely confident people we have met since Tuesday are the long-headed republicans, who look upon the elections simply as a warning to the party to get out of the rut into which long-continued success and overweening confidence have placed it, and who, if the warning is heeded, want no softer thing than a square fight with the old foe.

"Giving away another pawn" is what the independent Springfield Republican calls the republican default on Tuesday.

The foes of prohibition, it is thought, will control the Massachusetts legislature, and important changes in the liquor law may be expected.

All the banks haven't suspended—witness the election of Gen. N. P. to the Massachusetts Senate by a rousing majority.

The Cincinnati Commercial asks: "Will the accomplished and (we may say) intellectual editor of the New York World read, mark and inwardly digest the fact that Allen did not receive as many votes by 3570, when elected a fortnight since, as were cast for the Democratic candidate, McCook, two years ago?"

The opposition in the next Massachusetts House of Representatives will have some strong men, among others, John Quincy Adams and Gen. N. P. Banks. Of the former the Globe says: "By strangers throughout the State has been badly treated, but his townsmen of Quincy still cling to him, even after the odium which his political course in 1872 brought down upon him.

Readables.

Sallie Fay, of Elmira, Ohio, is learning the carpenter's trade; and it is said that every young man in that locality is anxious to become a carpenter and join her.

A seaman named Lynch was arrested in Newburyport last spring for attempting to murder a shipmate on board a vessel to which he belonged. He was held for trial, and, failing to give bonds, was committed. His trial should have come on at the present term of the court in Lawrence, but in the meantime the vessel and all on board of her have been lost, and hence the witnesses have gone, while he has saved his life. As he is known to be guilty there is no hurry to let him out of jail, but at the next term of the court he must be discharged.

Mr. Joseph Arch, a man who has risen from the undignified position of a farm laborer in Warwickshire, England, to the post of President of the English National Agricultural Laborers' Union, whose coming has been proclaimed by the daily press for several weeks, arrived in Boston on Monday evening. The object of Mr. Arch in visiting this country is to ascertain personally the advantages it affords to emigrants of the farm-laborer class, and if satisfied he will, according to his statements made at a public meeting in New York on the 30th of July—make arrangements to send out over 200,000 men.

A New York dispatch says that Louis Gaylord Clark died at his residence at Piermont, on the Hudson, on Monday night, after a sickness of a few hours, resulting from a paralytic stroke. Mr. Clark was editor of the Knickerbocker Magazine from 1832 till it ceased to exist, and subsequently was engaged in the New York Custom House, frequently contributing, however, to literary periodicals. Mr. Clark's home at Piermont was the gift of his associates on the Knickerbocker.

The French Assembly met Tuesday, and the message of President MacMahon was read. The president says that the government lacks two essentials to efficiency, vitality and authority. At the close of the reading of the message the right moved to extend Mac Mahon's term ten years and obtained a vote of "urgency" upon the motion. A Bonapartist made a motion for a plebiscite on the 4th of January next, but failed to get a vote of urgency upon it.

Henry R. Tracy, one of the oldest and best known of Boston journalists, died Tuesday evening at half past six o'clock.

Singerley's printing house in Harrisburg, Pa., comprising the State Journal office, was burned down on Tuesday. The loss is upward of $100,000. Murdock & Co.'s tub factory in Winchendon, Mass., was destroyed Tuesday morning; loss $10,000.

The Shanks habeas corpus case in New York was decided Tuesday in favor of Mr. Shanks, who was accordingly discharged.

State News.

Francis Murphy addressed a large temperance meeting at Orford, last recently, at the close of which one hundred and ten persons signed the pledge.

Fremont has had its hunting match. The party led by W. A. Gibson counted 5,045, and that by Jonathan Tilton, 3,875, and had the supper to pay for.

H. B. Edgerly of Farmington realized 4800 lbs. of cabbage from eight square rods and pockets $96 therefrom.

John Meikle of Milton Mills has commenced laying the foundation for a new woolen mill, 40x70, two stories, near the new dam, across the river at Union Village.

A settlement of French woodchoppers numbering 44 persons lately moved into one old farm-house near Enfield. There are nine families, and more are expected.

The Nashua Gazette says the snuff-dipping epidemic has reached the female operatives in the factories in that city.

New Hampshire has seven Granges and a number more are said to be in organization. Deputy Thompson has set his heart on 50 before he quits work.

How to Reach the North Pole.

The New York Journal of Commerce contains the following: "They insist on going toward the Pole by Smith's Sound, because all the American failures have been made in that direction; hoping that by some piece of inconceivable luck they may get through where the intrepid Kane and Hayes and Hall broke down. One lesson has been taught, so that the meanest comprehension would remember it, we should think; that there is no feasible route to the Pole eastward of North America. The Pole must now be sought, if at all, via the Kuro-Siwo current and Behring Strait. Captain Bent and his friend, Mr. Maury, have adduced theoretical proofs ten to one in favor of that route. So far as whalers have gone through Behring Strait toward the Pole, the theory is abundantly confirmed. Beyond that limit all is conjecture precisely as it is in the case of the explorations via Smith's Sound or Spitzbergen, when we get to the places where the last explorers left off. The theory which points out a passage to the Pole by the warm Kuro-Siwo current, and the agency of the thermometrical sounding, is the only really philosophical theory ever put forth for a Polar expedition. The Smith's Sound champions have no theory. And they have no facts except the discouraging ones that everybody who has tried their route has failed of their great object. These men, of all men, have no business to ask this Government for another outlay for Pole-hunting. We oppose any more national appropriations for this kind of research; but if Congress shall think best to start another expedition some day, we shall renew our arguments for the Pacific route through Behring Strait, and ask that Captain Bent and his friend Maury may be put in command. Prior to the departure of the Hall expedition we confidently predicted its failure, and reiterated for the third or fourth time the claims of the western route as the only one offering a reasonable chance of getting through to the Pole. But it was useless to protest against the din of the theorists, American and European. They have had their way, and we read the thrice-told tale of the most heroic courage and endurance wasted in a work known to be vain from the beginning. We object to Government aid for Arctic researches; but there is no objection to the undertaking of such work for individuals. Perhaps, some day, the inhabitants of the Pacific slops may take up this question, and make it a matter of local pride to equip an expedition and send it by the strictly American route, on the errand which has been bootless to all others. If they ever do that, we shall expect to hear news at last from the North Pole."

The Navy Yard Employes.

Secretary Robeson was in Baltimore on Saturday, and was asked by a reporter of the American whether there was any truth in a rumor current on the street that the United States Government is about to discharge some 600 employes there. Mr. Robeson said he was not aware of any such purpose, and that he did not believe there was a word of truth in the statement. He said also that the rumor that he had discharged 1,500 persons from the United States Navy-yard at Washington grew out of the fact that when the work of painting a ship was finished some thirty painters, who had been temporarily employed at that work, were discharged. He said that his policy had been, so far as consistent with public interests, to keep all the work going on that he can, and to pay all that is owed for such labor. There might be some complaints, he added, that he is using the appropriations for his department rapidly, but he believed that the duty of the Government in such a crisis as the present is to give all the aid it can to the material interests of the country.

An Irish Vocalist.

At St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, there was an old vicar choral who loved his dinner, "not wisely, but too well." He had bought a fine quarter of mutton, and intended to have it for his Sunday's repast, after the fatigue of chanting the morning service, but forgot to tell his wife in what manner he wished it to be cooked. The good lady, however, was equal to the emergency. In the middle of the Te Deum a small boy was observed to creep up the aisle till he came near the choir, where his father was singing, and in a piping treble mingled with the chorus thus:

"My mother's got a quarter of mutton, and she don't know what to do-o-oo wi' it."

The father responded:

"Let her boil the leg, and roast the loin, and make a dumpling of the su-u-u-et." Omnes. "Amen."

How Nice It Is to Be a Horse.

[Baltimore Sun, October 28.]

True Blue, the winner of the four-mile heat race, Saturday, left Baltimore for San Francisco last night in a special stock palace car by the Northern Central Railroad. True Blue's rider, Barbee, Chamberlin's agent and his colored man Jim, accompanied the horse in his sumptuous car. The outside of the car was painted a bright red. Upon either side of the car a brilliantly displayed placard was posted, reading as follows: "Please do not detain me. Business of importance with my friends, Thad. Stevens and Joe Daniels, requires me. Yours, True Blue." Upon expressing a desire to inspect the interior of the car and to interview the champion, permission was cheerfully accorded by Mr. Chamberlin. The rear of the car, which has been set apart for the valuable steed, was lined all around with thick mattressess, as was also the roof. Glass windows were placed in the side to secure proper ventilation. The fore part of the car was divided into five seperate compartments for two of True Blue's stable companions, who are to accompany him. The middle of the car was arranged for the accommodation of attendants, and for the storage of temporary supplies of provender. It is expected that the horses will reach San Francisco in about eight days. This will allow True Blue only about a week in which to recover from the effect of his long trip, by rail before contending against Thad. Stevens and Joe Daniels in the $20,000 race which will take place November 15. The result of this enterprise is watched with considerable interest by turf men in all parts of the country. Should True Blue win the race, he will undoubtedly never start again.

The extremest phase of the fashionable scant effect was reached, Sunday, by a lady who walked up Fifth avenue in a navy-blue camel's hair dress. Not a pucker or a visible seam, or a particle of trimming, broke up the beautiful surface of that woman. She was one unbending level, and how she got into that straight-jacket of a dress I couldn't imagine till I took a rear view of her, and found she was buttomed up behind from neck to hem. Two unobtrusive box-plaits lurked in a shy way each side the opening; otherwise the garment looked like a bloated pantaloon-leg. And walk—well, she couldn't walk very well, and in case of fire that woman would be tried in her own fat.

The Devon as a Dairy Cow.

[American Stock Journal.]

The Devon may be called a medium in the quantity of milk she yields, and in its quality superior. The older or unimproved race were somewhat noted for the quantities of milk they produced, as well as its good quality. A gallon of Devon milk yielded more butter than that of almost any breed, as it does now, except the Alderney. But the improvers, in the attainment of a finer form and heavier substance in their animals, perhaps sacrificed somewhat of the quantity of milk for the more liberal development of flesh, well knowing that both flesh and milk could not thrive equally together in the same animal; although, when the milk ceased, the flesh came on with due rapidity, under generous feed. Yet with an eye to breeding her solely for milk, she is well fitted for a dairy cow. Docile in temper, easy to keep, placable in disposition, she is readily managed. Her udder is soft, tidy in shape, with thin silky hair upon it, clean, taper teats, easily drawn, and every way satisfactory to her keeper. We have kept thorough-bred Devons 34 years—sometimes as high as 25 or 30 (not all milch cows) in number. Many of them have been excellent milkers, and some of them extraordinary for their size. We once had 2 three-year-old heifers, with their first calves, which gave for some 3 months after calving on pasture only, with steady milking, an average of eighteen quarts per day; and from cows which have at different times been sold to go to other States, the accounts of their milk have been equally good. It is but fair to say, however, that after we commenced crossing our cows with bulls of later importations, some fifteen years after the commencement of the herd, the large milkers were not so numerous, although the cattle from these crosses were somewhat finer. The bulls we used were apparently bred from stocks highly improved, with an effort more to develop their feeding properties than for the dairy. After all our Devons yielded, on an average, quite as much as any common cows we ever kept, with much less consumption of forage.

With all her alleged deficiencies, the Devon possesses the inherent qualities of a good milker. Her dairy faculties may be bred out of her by neglect of that important item, and with a view to give her an earlier maturity, and more weight of flesh; but even under that system, she will occasionally persist, as we have known in various instances, in giving a large flow of milk exceeding many common cows of equal size. On the whole, from the accumulated accounts we have received from time to time, coupled with our own experience, we pronounce Devons, as a race, when bred with an eye to the development of the dairy quality, considering the size and consumption of food, good dairy cows, both in the quantity of milk they give and the butter they yield.

Her Right to be Sued.

Laws allowing married women to trade upon their own account, and making them and their separate estate liable for the debts of the business, are, and must continue to be, the source of a good deal of litigation. In Bangor, Me., the wife being in the millinery business, she and her husband were sued for goods charged and billed to the wife alone. The court charged that prima facie she alone was liable. But if the husband had a joint interest in the business, not merely an interest as a husband, but over and above that as a partner, or so held himself out, then he was liable; otherwise not. The jury found that the husband "never promised."

Anecdote of Stokes.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

Last summer Stokes was permitted to take a great deal of out-door exercise in the yard of the Tombs. He wore white pantaloons, a velvet coat, and a fancy necktie. His hair was carefully dressed, and his moustache exquisitely curled at the ends, and on the top of his head a stylish hat was jauntily set. He smoked a fine Havana, and flourished a fancy cane in his right hand. There are always a great many lady visitors at the Tombs, and as they passed through the yard they were naturally attracted by the elegant promenader. The ladies would stand and admire the interesting prisoner, who continued his promenade utterly unaffected by the presence of the fair gazers.

As only a limited number of visitors are permitted in the Tombs at a time, the time occupied by the ladies in admiring Stokes had the effect of keeping a large number of persons outside waiting for admission. The entry to the prison became unpleasantly crowded, and Warden Johnson, divining the cause, spoke to Stokes and suggested that he should shorten his promenades or indulge in them at a time when visitors would not be impeded by them. Stokes was highly indignant, and said he would discontinue his exercise for no such paltry reason. Warden Johnson endured it for some time longer, but as the thing became a positive nuisance, he spoke to Sheriff Brennan, in whose express charge Stokes at the time was. The result was that Stokes was formally handed over to the keeping of the Warden, who speedily made such arrangements for further promenading as forever after shut out the elegant prisoner from the gaze of admiring visitors.

President Grant and the Wine List.

"Howard," the lively lady correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, tells the following of President Grant:

You will remember that during his last trip to the White Mountains, the patriots of the Profile House were moved to give him a big dinner. They feared the wine demonstration would not be long and strong enough, and therefore sent for several new brands. They made an inposing appearance upon the bill of fare, which the waiter offered to Grant, with an engaging flourish, and then awaited the result with the serenely solemn aspect of his class. The President read it attentively and laid it down. "What will you take?" inquired the attendant. "You may bring me," returned Grant, "a plate of roast beef, with potatoes and tomato sauce, and a cup of strong coffee." After this was disposed of, the guardian angel of the table approached, and calling the President's attention to the wines, said: "What can I bring you?" "I have a touch of dyspepsia, and I will take a glass of lemonade, a little tart," was the second astounding reply of his Excellency. Whether the lemonade was "tart" enough for the President or not, it was so "tart" that the very sight of it puckered both waiter and diners to such a degree that the word wine was not heard at that table again. If you don't believe me, ask Henry Ward Beecher, who was at the table.

Political Economy.

Madge—"What are you looking so sorry about, Arthur?"

Arthur—"Multiplication."

Madge—"Oh, I know all about multiplication!"

Arthur—"Do you? What's twice ten, then?"

Madge—"Oh, twenty-one, of course!"

Arthur—"No, it's not. It's only twenty."

Madge—"Ah, but everything's riz, you know!"

In the Dominion Parliament Sir John A. Macdonald announced that the government, having been convined that it had not a working majority, had resigned and that Mr. Mackenzie had been called to form a new ministry. Parliament thereupon adjourned.

The Cincinnati Times is of the opinion that a man who owns a million dollars is a "public nuisance," and that one who owns ten millions is "an enemy to the country." The editor of the Times evidently never expects to be a millionaire.

Help the Torpid Organs.

When the body is in a state of health, the food takes into the stomach acts on the bowels as a stimulant, causing in them that worm-like motion by which their contents are expelled. The liver being in a natural condition, the flow of bile (which is a mild cathartic) into the intestines is ample and regular, and hence the discharges are easy and sufficiently frequent. The reverse of all this constitutes costiveness, and the only true method of cure is to restore the functional activity of the two important organs which use the bowels as a sewer for the egress of waste matter. For this purpose Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can be confidentialy recommended as the most effective of all medicines. It is not too much to say that chronic constipation would be unknown if the Bitters were in universal use as a remedy in the earlier stages of the complaint. At this period of the year, when dyspepsia with all its kindred disorders are so apt to be engendered and aggravated by the dampness of the atmosphere, this unequaled stimulant, tonic and alterative should be taken daily.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. Nothing ever presented to the public as a beautifier of the complexion ever gave such satisfaction for this purpose as this Discovery. The effects of all medicines which operate on the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula, is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by all druggists. 792

Gardner's History.

We have already alluded to the volume recently issued by Mr. C. W. Gardner of this city entitled "A History of the Reunion of the Sons and Daughters of Portsmouth in 1873," but the following complimentary notice of it from the Boston Transcript is so thorough in the description of this little work (that should interest every son and daughter of Portsmouth,) that we copy it entire:

"The recollection of those personally interested by participation will be pleasantly refreshed as to one of the noted "occasions" of the past summer by the perusal of the volume recently published containing the authorized historical version of the proceedings connected with the Return of the Sons and Daughters of Portsmouth, N. H., on July 4, 1873, with appended accounts of the episodic High School Reunion and Great Praise Meeting held in that city on July 5 and 6. All the speeches made at the reunions are given in full, and considerable pleasing versification is furnished by the appropriate poems of Laighton, Shillaber, and Fields. Besides the record of the occurrences of the three days of the celebration there is given in the volume a history of the inception of and proceedings attending the carrying out of the first celebration in 1853, and matter relating incidentally to the recent festival of this year, in the form of accounts of preliminary meetings held in this city and in New York by natives of "Strawberry Bank." Mr. Charles W. Gardner, the appointed historian of the occasion, by whom the volume has been compiled and published, appears to have performed his duties with the thoroughness of a perfect love for the service, and the thanks due him for furnishing this record of "one of the most successful celebrations ever held anywhere" will come not only from those concerned in its contents by the ties of nativity, but also from those who will desire to refer to the book as a manual in modeling and carrying out the narratives of like celebrations."

A New Railroad Device.

Mr. F. H. Whitman, of Harrison, Me., has patented a new railway tie, which is made by a combination of hard and soft woods, and also the machinery for manufacturing them. All our readers have noticed road-beds full of cedar ties all sound as to the matter of decay, but torn and gashed so that they were useless in track, where the rails rested and the spikes were driven. By this device the cedar has oak blocks inserted under the rails, bored for the spikes, and securely driven, the grain of the block running the same way as the grain of the tie, thereby providing against shrinkage and working loose. This not only makes a more perfect bearing than can be obtained by use of the rough-hewn tie, but secures a bearing of the rail which resists wear as long as the life of the tie itself, doubling, in ordinary calculation, the value of the cedar at an alleged small cost. Messrs. Jessop, Easton & Co., of Boston, have purchased the right for New England, and desire to call the attention of railway men to the manufactured article. We have seen the testimonials of civil engineers, who all agree that the showing of the plan in the few years it has been tried promises the results claimed for it by the inventor; and if it shall come into general use and prove what these trials are alleged to have proved, it will certainly rank among the few really valuable improvements of the age; for the problem of this line of railway supplies is assuredly getting to be a very serious one.

Nathaniel Wiggin in Reply to the Journal.

Messrs. Editors: On two occasions the Portsmouth Journal has referred to me in such a manner as to give the public an unfavorable impression. The first was concerning the houses I own on Islington street. I have expended from four to five thousand dollars on those houses and more than one-half of it for labor. I have finished them well inside, and made them comfortable. And I have added something to the valuation of the taxable property and and expect the assessors will not forget it next spring, though the houses are "outre," as the Portsmouth Journal ironically has it. If those who have capital, and are prone to find fault, would put out some of their money, and less slang, Portsmouth would look better, and poor people would obtain houses at reasonable rates.

The last favorable notice is concerning the moving of the barn at Newcastle. I have this to state: that on Saturday night we were obliged to leave the barn on the brow of the hill in an unsafe condition, for it was such a position that a high wind would have been very certain to have blown it down, and I should have lost my labor and Mr. Lamprey his barn; therefore I thought it right to work on the Sabbath day. As there are no houses within a quarter of a mile we did not suppose we were disturbing any one, and I am not sure that either of those men who worked for me on that day will not have as high a seat in heaven as that pious croker who reported me to the Portsmouth Journal.

NATHANIEL WIGGIN.

The Navy Yard Ferry.

The U. S. ferry steamer "Emerald," which has plied so long, so constantly and so swiftly between the navy yard and this city, has recently received a thorough overhauling and all needed repairs, and is again on the route, to the great satisfaction of those for whose accommodation she is run. The new ferry house at the foot of Daniel street is well advanced towards completion; it is a great improvement upon the old one in appearance and accommodations, and the navy yard boat landing is also much improved. The public boat-landing close by, with its floating stage and brow, is more convenient than the steep and slippery steps which formerly stood there, as well as much safer.

An Appeal to the Benevolent.

In the houses of many well-to-do families there are discarded and out-grown garments of no value to their owners, who would be glad of an opportunity of giving them away if they knew they would go to persons actually in want.

Much food is wasted at the hotels and the tables of our wealthy men which would keep the wolf from the doors of many poor houses if it could be saved for that purpose. Many aged people are making a brave fight with poverty and sickness, who will accept aid from a friendly hand, but are too sensitive to ask help from the city, or seek a home at Brentwood on the farm.

There are also widows, reduced by misfortune from comfortable circumstances to poverty; with infants in their helpless arms; who might be made comfortable by those who have enough and can spare.

Many emergencies occur in the families of the poor where the delicate ministrations of true hearted women only can bless. Thinking that there are willing hearts and ready hands to co-operate with us we invite all who are disposed to help in this work, to leave their names with the city clerk or with either of the overseers of the poor.

The city makes generous appropriations of money to maintain those who go to the "Home." The overseers know many cases of suffering, to the relief of which the public money can not be legally applied, and they are often pained by witnessing scenes of suffering which they can not adequately relieve. Persons willing to give may send their contributions to the city rooms, or they will be sent for and distributed, on notice being given.

T. E. O. MARVIN,
A. A. PAYNE,
JOHN STOKELL,
JAMES W. NUTTER, Overseers.

Laconics.

Auctioneer Morse sells a bankrupt lot of clothes this afternoon at 75 State street.

Wednesday afternoon, Arthur Gorham accidentally shot himself while on a gunning excursion at Hampton Beach. The wound was almost instantly fatal.

The dust was as lively in our streets on Thursday as at any time during the past season, and the appearance of the street sprinkler would have been greeted with joy. But nothing of the sort appeared.

Ten laborers, four joiners, three blacksmiths and two painters in the bureau of yards and docks at the navy yard were suspended on Thursday until December first. When Jay Cooke & Co. were "busted" by the Northern Pacific Railroad the laboring men all over the country little imagined the shock of the collision would extend to them.

The dedication of the School House at Spruce Creek on Wednesday evening was the occasion of a disgraceful melee, the recollection of which will be of no benefit to the young minds which will be sent there for instruction. Mr. Green Moulton was shot in the wrist and has issued warrants for the arrest of William Adams and Parker Manson for assault and battery and Daniel Pierce for shooting. Contrary rumor says that Moulton was the only one present who had a pistol and in the affray shot himself. Too much quaffing of the ardent beverage is supposed to have brought about the trouble.

The funeral of Mr. Charles F. McLaughlin who was killed by falling from his wagon, Tuesday, took place in Newington on Thursday afternoon from the church in that town. A large assembly of neighbors and friends gathered at the meeting house and quite a delegation of Masons from St. John's and St. Andrew's Lodges of this city were in attendance, the deceased being buried with the honors of Masonry. The services were unusually solemn, because of the peculiar circumstances that surrounded the sad death, and many a cheek unused to weeping was moistened by a silent tear stealing forth at the remembrance of the genial manner and the generous nature of him whose life was so early and so suddenly closed. Mr. McLaughlin was a kind-hearted, whole-souled man, whose chief fault consisted in an occasional habit of indulging in alcoholic stimulants, and his frank, social nature, as is generally the case, only served to increase rather than diminish this practice. The accident should prove a warning to others similarly inclined.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brassy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

The Gloves Keep the Hands Clean.
[New York Herald.]

Nixon was executed. He shot a stranger in the frenzy of ungoverrable fury. Gaffney suffered death on the gallows. He killed a man under the passion of losses at gambling, and while temporarily insane through drink. They were poor devils, and if they had escaped the gallows by luck and gone to Sing Sing would have been put to hard labor and treated to shower-baths, blows, and the solitary cell. Stokes deliberately and daintily picked off his enemy while the latter was in a trap, and genteelly fired off his deadly Derringer with a gloved hand. He escapes hanging, and will live like an imprisoned lord, or like the young murderer Walworth at Sing Sing. But his friends are highly respectable—and they have plenty of money.

Stokes at Sing Sing.

Stokes was removed to Sing Sing on Saturday, his companion in misery being a young man named Conse, who is sentenced to two and a half years for forgery. The party reached Sing Sing without incident, but while eating lunch at the hotel a rough crowd gathered and followed them to the prison with cries of "Kill him." "Where are the eggs?" While changing his suit for the prison garb Stokes put his hands behind and remarked, "Well, there ain't any pistol pocket in them." He will be placed in the cigar manufactory as clerk.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded, to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (216,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in variety and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scavenging out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

"TAKES" on sight. LAST AND BEST combination for Canvassers, Agents and Salesmen! Henry Ward Beecher's family newspaper starts its fall campaign, giving subscribers a PAIR of the largest and finest OLEOGRAPHS,—two most attractive subjects that "take" on sight,—painted by Mrs. Anderson, as contrasts and companions for her "WIDE AWAKE" and "FAST ASLEEP." Agents have immense success; call it the "best business ever offered canvassers." We furnish the lightest and handsomest outfit and pay very high commissions. Each subscriber, old or new, receives WITHOUT DELAY two beautiful pictures. Full supply ready for immediate delivery. The paper itself stands peerless among family journals, being so popular that of its class it has the largest circulation in the world! Employs the best literary talent. Edward Eggleston's great serial story is just beginning; back chapters supplied to each subscriber. Mrs. Stowe's long expected sequel to "My Wife and I," begins in the new year. Daily Chronicle.

Circumstantial Evidence.

On the 12th of September, 1868, a farmer's boy discovered on the banks of White River, about three miles north of the city of Indianapolis, the dead bodies of Jacob Young and Nancy Young, his wife, two reputable citizens of that place. The post mortem examination disclosed the fact that Mrs. Young had been killed by a pistol shot, the ball entering the back part of the head and coursing upward through the brain until it lodged upon the inner surface of the frontal bone. The ball proved to be a cartridge pistol ball. Mr. Young had been killed by a discharge from a double-barrelled shot gun, which was found by his side, with one barrel exploded, the other barrel heavily charged with ten buckshot, and standing cocked. The position and course of the wound upon Young and his wife proved conclusively that they had been murdered. No pistol was discovered. The day after the discovery of the murder, it was ascertained that the shot gun found by the dead bodies had been purchased from a pawnbroker in Indianapolis on the day of the murder. The gun was identified by means of a broken thimble and a peculiarity about the locks, and the man who had purchased it was accurately described by the pawnbroker and a negro servant who was present when the purchase was made. At the time of the murder, a gentleman and his two children, who were fishing some distance below the scene of the murder, heard the report of firearms in the direction of the place where the bodies were found. Five minutes before the report was heard, the children saw the deceased and another woman walking on the sand bar near where they were killed. A farmer and his son, driving along the road within a few hundred yards of the place, heard two reports, one loud like a shot gun, and the other sharp like a pistol and so near together that it was difficult to distinguish them. A man and his wife, living a quarter of a mile from the scene, heard two reports and a scream between them. The witnesses agreed that the time was about four, P. M. The horse and buggy of the deceased were found hitched in the road near by.

On examining the neighboring ground the well-defined tracks of a womaun wearing a new number-three gaiter, making long steps as if in flight, were traced from a point near the dead bodies, through the woods to a place where they intersected the track of a buggy, going in the direction of Indianapolis, and drawn by an animal wearing small-sized interfering shoes. The tracks of the woman and the horse and buggy were all accurately measured. These were the clews, and the questions arose: Who bought the gun? Who was the woman seen in company with the deceased? Who drove the buggy in which the murderers fled from the scene of the tragedy?

The pawnbroker sold the gun at nine o'clock in the morning. Between the hours of eight and nine three applications for the purchase of a second-hand shot gun had been made at as many auction stores and pawnbrokers' shops by a man having sandy hair and complexion, and at the third place he had inquired of a bright little girl, who took him to the door, directed him across the street, and saw him enter the establishment where the gun was purchased, which in seven hours afterwards had slain Young. Five witnesses identified William J. Abrams, a reputable carpenter of Indianapolis, as the man who had purchased the gun. Mr. Abrams was arrested, and attention was then directed to the the subject of the horse and buggy tracks.

The afternoon of the murder Silas Hartman had hired a horse and mare from a livery stable. The mare wore small interfering shoes, and a shoe taken from her foot was applied to the track made in the woods near the scene of the murder, and it fitted exactly. A plaster cast of the shoe was taken and was compared with thousands of horse shoes without finding one that would go in it. Hartman was lodged in jail.

Some farmers coming to Indianapolis the afternoon of the murder, met Young and his wife going in their carriage in the direction of the place where they were murdered, with a lady sitting in the same seat with Mrs. Young. A few rods behind the carriage, Silas Hartman, driving the livery-stable mare, was seen by the same parties. He was recognized, but when they attempted to speak to him, he turned his head and drove by them without returning their salutation. Several of these witnesses testified that Nancy E. Clem, the wife of a leading grocer in Indianapolis, was the lady who occupied the seat with Mr. Young's wife in his carriage. Silas Hartman, who followed in the buggy, was her brother. A close watch was placed upon Mrs. Clem's movements, but her arrest was delayed for three weeks. This delay in her arrest insured her conviction.

The confederate Abrams was in jail, and had difficulty in raising money to pay attorney fees. He sent for his brother, and directed him to go secretly to Mrs. Clem's house and get several thousand dollars, and to "tell her that the money must come." The brother obeyed these directions, and Mrs. Clem, yielding to the demand, went into a cellar where she had a package of bills concealed in a stovepipe hole in a chimney, and gave Abrams' brother several thousand dollars, and told him to tell his brother in jail not to send for more money, as it would excite suspicion.

The murdered man was known to have had over seven thousand dollars on his person a few hours before he was murdered. On the day of the murder, Abrams, who purchased a gun, went to Mrs. Clem's house, from which she was absent a good portion of the afternoon, and remained there till she returned, and received a large sum of money from her immediately upon her return.

It was proved that Mrs. Clem offered her sewing girl $500 it she would swear that she was at her home during the afternoon of the murder. By means of bribes and threats she procured her niece, her sister-in-law, and an Irish servant girl to swear before the grand jury that she was at home and in the house of her sister-in-law, next door, during that afternoon, and these persons afterward confessed their perjuries, and testified on oath that she had suborned them. She procured a book peddler to swear that he had delivered a book to her in person, at her house, the afternoon of the murder, and persuaded a miller, who had delivered a sack of flour at her house on another day, to swear that it was the day of the murder, and that he conversed with her at the very hour of the murder. She procured another man to swear that he met her in the Indianapolis post office, and accidentally trod upon her dress and apologized to her the same afternoon. She procured two women to swear that they met her shopping in a dry goods store a few minutes afterwards. Immediately upon her return from the murder she told a neighbor, who noticed her flushed appearance, that she had been at home canning grapes over the hot stove all the afternoon of the murder, the fact being that no grapes had been canned. And on examination before the coroner's jury before her arrest she swore that she was at home at the time the murder was committed. On the day of the funeral of Young and wife she stood at her front gate as the procession went by, and said to a friend, that she had no acquaintance with Young or his wife; the fact being that she had been visiting his house with her sister-in-law two or three times a week for months prior to the murder. In fact there was no end to the lies she told and hired others to tell for her.

When she was arrested she was wearing a pair of carpet slippers belonging to her colored servant, and not a slipper or shoe of any kind belonging to her could be found about her house. Inquiry was made at a number of shoe stores in Indianapolis, and it was ascertained that a boy had sold Mrs. Clem a pair of No. 3 gaiters a few days before the murder. The boy was requested to get a pair of the same size of the same manufacture. They were procured and a careful measurement showed that the heels were too deep for the woman's tracks in the woods near the dead bodies, but corresponded with them in every other particular. Upon this being mentioned, the boy remembered that Mrs. Clem complained of the high heels when she bought them, and inquired for a shoemaker, and upon being directed where to go, started to have them altered. The shoemaker remembered that he had altered the heels of a pair of gaiters for Mrs. Clem, and upon being requested to alter the new pair in a similar manner, he removed a portion of the heel just as he had done for her, and when thus altered the gaiters fitted the tracks near the dead bodies to perfection. The servant girl swore that she saw Mrs. Clem's new gaiters lying on a bed in the house a day or two before the murder; that she saw the same gaiters soiled and muddy on the porch the morning after the murder; that Mrs. Clem passed out by them on the porch, and that they were never seen afterward. It was also proved that Mrs. Clem was seen to go into the carriage with Young and wife, as they were going in the direction where they were murdered, the afternoon of the murder; and one witness, who had known her and her brother Silas for years, met them coming home in a buggy from the direction of the murder, at a rapid pace, and swore that they refused to recognize him.

The most remarkable feature of the case, however, and one that has excited a curiosity that will never be allayed until the guilty parties confess and explain it, grew out of the secret and mysterious financial transactions which were carried on between Mrs. Clem and her victim, Young, and other prominent citizens of Indianapolis, for months prior to the murder and up to the very day of its commission. Young, the murdered man, had been a porter in a hardware store, and was known to be poor. Suddenly he gave signs of wealth, improved his property, bought him a horse and carriage, quit working, and informed his former employers that he was engaged in a business that was realizing enormous profits. He borrowed large sums of money at enormous rates of interests, invariably upon short time, and always repaid them before his obligations matured. He kept a large bank balance at one of the Indianapolis national banks, and established a credit that enabled him to procure the endorsements of some of the leading business men of the place. No one knew his business, and when asked by his endorsers what he was doing, he put them off with evasive answers. He was murdered Sept. 12, 1868, and $27,000 of his paper matured in bank on the 14th. This amount was paid by his endorsers. He was seen in a bank the day he was murdered, with $75,000 in his pocket, and one witness swore that Mrs. Clem said that Young had given her $20,000 in the morning of the day of the murder. These financial transactions of Young's covered a period of six months, and during the whole time he was visiting Mrs. Clem's house as often as three or four times a week, and always when her husband was at his grocery store.

Mrs. Clem's husband never met Young, and never knew that his wife was acquainted with him until after the murder. Mrs. Clem was also in the habit of visiting Young's house two or three times a week, in company with her sister-in-law, and when there she and Young would retire to an adjoining room, where they would be engaged in conversation and writing for a few minutes. When questioned by her sister-in- law about the nature of her business relations with Young, she put her off with indefinite answers. Meanwhile, Mrs. Clem and Young both had plenty of money. During the same period the fortunes of her convicted accomplice, Abrams, who purchased the gun, began visibly to improve. He quit working at his trade, commenced loafing and borrowing money at high rates of interest, kept a respectable balance in bank, paid his bank paper promptly, and spent a good portion of his time visiting Mrs. Clem's house. But the strangest part of these financial transactions remains to be told. Dr. Duzan, a leading physician of Indianapolis, and a man of wealth, had been acquainted with Mrs. Clem since she was a child, and had always been her family physician. Before her arrest Mrs. Clem had testified as a witness in the grand jury room, and had there positively asseverated that she had never had any financial dealings with Dr. Duzan, and that he would not testify otherwise. All the dealing bankers in the city were examined and compelled to produce the bank accounts of Dr. Duzan, Young, the murdered man, and Abrams, Mrs. Clem's confederate. Mrs. Clem kept no bank account during these transactions.

A comparison of these bank accounts revealed the fact that there were the most intimate relations existing between them. When Dr. Duzan would check $10,000 out of his bank, Young would make a deposit of the same amount the same day; and when Young would draw upon his bank balance, Duzan's would be increased to the same extent. It was the same with the bank accounts of Young and Abrams. Dr. Duzan swore in all the trials that he never knew or saw Young, and that he had never had any dealing with him directly or indirectly. Duzan, however, had large money transactions with Mrs. Clem. She began by borrowing small sums of five hundred or a thousand dollars at a time for short periods of seven to ten days, at enormous rates of interest, invariably returning money with interest before due, and telling Duzan that she was engaged in large speculations with leading business men in Indianapolis, and that she would tell him all about it at the proper time. These loans increased until Duzan at one time advanced her over twenty thousand dollars, for which he took no receipt note or memorandum. It invariably happened that the very day she would obtain the money from Duzan, Young would make a deposit of like amount or pay off a note in bank.

As has been stated $27,000 of Young's paper matured in bank on the 14th of September, 1868. Four or five days before that time, Mrs. Clem came to Duzan in great distress of mind, and, as he testified, wept bitterly, and begged him to lend her $22,000. Just at this time Duzan's bankers had become inquisitive concerning the use he was making of his money, and upon his refusal to tell them they withdrew their accommodations. He informed Mrs. Clem that he could aid her no longer. Young evidently looked to her to provide the means to his maturing notes, and when she found it impossible to effect a loan from Duzan, she found herself at the end of the rope. She was compelled to close the account, and, catching the nearest way, she accompanied Young and his wife on their ride; her brother (Silas) followed in a buggy with the gun purchased by Abrams; Young and his wife were murdered, and the murderers fled o Indianapolis, in the manner described.

Mrs. Clem was first tried in the fall of 1868, and but for the obstinacy of a German juror, who stood out for conviction against eleven for acquittal, she would have gone scot free. Upon the second trial, she was convicted, and sentenced to the State Prison for life. Her brother, Silas, (who had testified in her behalf, and had been detected in a dozen perjuries concerning his whereabouts on the day of the murder) committed suicide in jail, the night of her conviction, by cutting his throat with a razor. Abrams was then tried and convicted of murder in the first degree, the proof of the purchase of the gun by him a few hours before the murder, being clear and conclusive; also, his dividing the money with Mrs. Clem after the murder.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment against Mrs. Clem, and gave her a new trial, upon a shallow technicality that led many ignorant people to believe that the court had been corrupted. Her counsel took a change of venue, and she was tried the third time at Lebanon, Booth county, Ind. The trial resulted in a divided jury. The fourth and last trial has just been concluded by a verdict of guilty, with a sentence of imprisonment for life. Thus has ended one of the most remarkable chapters in the history of the criminal jurisprudence of this country. We doubt if ever the celebrated Webster case furnished a stronger illustration of the efficacy and the reliability of a connected chain of circumstantial evidence. At first it was pronounced incredible that Mrs. Clem should have had any connection with the murder of her two friends, but little by little the truth came to light, until her guilt was so clearly revealed, that no intelligent mind could doubt it, after carefully considering the facts.

James Delos Center, the eighth juror in the Stokes case, has been convicted of contempt of court in visiting disreputable drinking places and conversing with parties outside the jury about the Stokes trial while the trial was progressing. Center, while drunk, declared that Stokes should not hang. Judge Davis sentenced Center to 30 days in prison and fined him $200. In case he does not pay the fine, he will remain 30 days longer in prison. Eight dollars and more a day isn't to be sneered at and Center can save that for a month by remaining in confinement, besides getting boarded free. The panic doesn't seem to affect Center's finances much.

There is said to be a can of nitro-glycerine buried in the Capitol Square at Raleigh, N. Grape stones are said to be a better substitute for coffee than chiccory is. When roasted and ground they are said to possess an aroma very much like that of East India coffee, and the beverage obtained therefrom is about the same as coffee in taste, though inferior in quality. The beverage furnished by many of the restaurants is very far from being "about the same as coffee in taste," and it is probable that a decided improvement could be made on the present article by the use of grape stones.

A Philadelphia dispatch says that three hundred thousand dollars of the paper of the California and Texas Construction Company, which is building the Texas Pacific Railroad, went to protest. The liabilities of the Construction Company are reported at $4,500,000 of in notes variously endorsed all maturing within ninety days; $1,600,000 of loans on collateral security; $600,000 of unsecured obligations in the shape of drafts, and $250,000 of the floating debt, amounting to near $7,000,000. This, with the $4,000,000 of cash paid in on the stock of the Construction Company, has been expended under careful management in the construction of Texas Pacific Railroad, and there are 300 miles of the road completed, equipped and in operation, and about 150 miles additional graded, bridged and ready for the iron.

The resources of the Construction Company consist of $32,000 per miles of the completed road, of the first mortgage bonds of the Railroad Company, secured by a line on the railroad, its equipment, franchises and a thousand acres of land per mile granted by the State of Texas, over two millions of unpaid construction stock most of which will be promptly paid, and the private property of the individual endorsers, which is very large. It is believed that the creditors, most of whom hold large amounts, will speedily arrange for an extension of the liabilities of the Company, so as to give time to realize money without the ruinous sacrifice required by the present stringency of the times.

State News.

Patrick Murphy, who broke jail in Keene recently, with another convict, turned up in Worcester, Mass., on Wednesday, and calling at the station, told Marshal Washburn where he had come from, said he was almost sure to be captured, and would like marshal to take him, as he remembered his kindness to him when he was serving out a sentence in the Worcester house of correction, and would rather he should get the reward offered by the Keene authorities than any other person. Mr. Washburn was considerably surprised, but, telegraphing to Keene, found that the man had told the truth; accordingly Murphy was taken back at once, and the marshal got the reward. Murphy is in jail for horse-stealing.

Hazing don't pay at the Union Academy, Canaan. A few of the students made the experiment the other night, with the following result: Having no particular love for one of the village boys, they met him in the evening and commenced reasoning with him by tying his hands and feet and blindfolding him. They then led him into the woods, tied him to a tree and strengthened their argument by the use of the "oil of birch." After they had enough of this sport they released their victim, telling him to go about his business. This he was not long in doing, making it his business to complain at once of the young men whom he recognized, and the next evening the fun was the other way, and the youths were busy raising $50 to pay the mother of the injured boy for damages.

Prosperous.

The Cocheco Manufacturing Company has issued a circular to its Dover operatives, stating that although "the times are out of joint," and the company can purchase goods for printing at considerably less rates than they themselves can manufacture them, still they propose to stand by their help, keep their mills running on full time, pay the usual wages, and only ask that they practice the strictest economy in their work so that the loss, if any, may be reduced to a minimum.

The Manchester locomotive works have begun to run on twelve-hours' time, they having received ordes from three different parties for locomotives to be made this month. A number of the old hands, discharged last month, have returned.

The mills at Great Falls are running on full time, and no danger is apprehended of their stopping or running on reduced time.

Running on Short Time.

The Exeter Manufacturing Company has reduced the time of running its cotton mill in Exeter, N. H., to eight hours a day and five days a week, in consequence of the times and the alterations in their mill, necessitated by the erection of the new mill the past season. No reduction in wages is made.

The mills in Lowell are running on three-quarters time, closing work at five minutes past 4 o'clock each afternoon, except Saturday, when they will close at noon. The reduction of wages will be in the proportion of twenty-five per cent.

The Pepperell and Laconia mills in Biddeford, now running on short time, are in addition, to run one day less per week and reduce wages.

The Saco Water Power machine shop, employing 500 hands, will reduce, and the York cotton mill will follow suit.

How they Train Sheep Dogs in California.

Rev. C. E. Babb, in one of his letters from California, tells of what an old shepherd told him about the way they train the famous shepherd dogs in south California. He says you may go over the plains and hills for miles and see thousands of sheep, but not a man to watch them. Around each flock or band of, say, a thousand sheep, are half-a-dozen dogs, of a peculiar breed; dogs whose progenitors were imported from the sheep pastures of the Old World. These dogs take the entire care of the sheep, drive them out to pasture in the morning, keep them from straying during the day, and bring them home at night. These dogs have inherited a talent for keeping sheep; but the shepherds do not depend wholly on that. They cultivate it in this way, so at least the old shepherd says: "When a lamb is born it is taken away from the mother sheep before she has seen it, and a puppy put in its place. The sheep suckles the puppy and learns to love it. When the puppy grows old enough to eat meat, it is fed in the morning and sent out with the sheep. It stays with them because it is accustomed to be with its mother, but it cannot feed with them. As they get full the dog gets hungry. At length impatient to return where it hopes to get another piece of meat, it begins to tease and worry its mother, and finally starts her toward home, the other sheep follow, and thus the whole flock is brought in. If the dog brings the sheep home too soon, or comes home without them, he gets no supper, or is punished in some way. Hence he soon learns when to come, and to see to it that none of his charge are left behind. These animals are trained by taking advantage of their instincts and appetites."

Americans in Egypt.

A correspondent writing from Washington says: A number of Confederate officers got employment, at from $250 to $500 per month, in the following curious way: Gen. Mott, their ranking officer, was the son of Valentine Mott, the great American surgeon, who cut the wart off the Sultan's head when all Turkish rhubard-men were afraid of the Calph's vengeance if they should hurt him. Mott took it into his hands as if the Calph was a turnip, and great was the wonder of the faithful. For this the Doctor was rewarded, but he despised the decorations which were tendered him. His son, Thaddeus, however, availed himself of the old surgeon's fame when he went over to Turkey, in Andrew Johnson's time to investigate the complicity of our Minister, Joy Morris, in the Cretan revolt. Thaddeus Mott married a Greek woman, who furnished the harem with haberdashery, and got admittance to the Sultan's bowers, which is, in the East, influence. Blacque Bey, a convert to the faith, and afterward Minister to the United States, married Gen. Mott's sister. The Khedive of Egypt, who is always seeking to get influence with the Sublime Porte, his sovereign, offered Gen. Mott a staff position in his army, expecting to be a step nearer the ear and the mouth of the Sultan. He also got the idea that he would have a number of American officers brought out to Egypt, for these would be detached for European diplomacy, and would not so much excite the Sultan's jealousy. Mott came to New York and there he saw a crowd of discharged rebels drinking around the hotels, poor, ruined and borrowing. His warm heart took pity on them, and he would say to this one and that one: "Well, I'll give you a position." He was obliged to discharge the bill of some of those, and others had not even the money to ride in a carriage to the steamship.

Official Brutality.

Wade was hanged Thursday afternoon in Williamsport, Pa. The drop was knocked out, but the rope was too long and he touched the ground with his feet. The rope was again adjusted and the hanging accomplished. Wade was very profane and told the jailor "to hurry up, as he had an appointment to dine in —— with the devil at two o'clock." He said the only thing that troubled him was whether the people he murdered are in heaven or hell.

Singular Cause of Death.

A week ago, while Mr. Charles A. Nickerson, residing in East Boston, was picking his teeth with a broomcorn, a little silver caught in the roots of his tongue and subsequently worked its way down into his throat, where it lodged. He could not succeed in displacing it, and the result was the formation of an abscess. On Tuesday morning the abscess broke, rupturing a blood vessel, which terminated in death.

Business Notices.

An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pellets, from their cleansing and renovating effect upon the digestive apparatus, makes him feel decidedly better. Twenty-five cents, by Druggists. 703

Help the Torpid Organs.

When the body is in a state of health, the food taken into the stomach acts on the bowels as a stimulant, causing in them that worm-like motion by which their contents are expelled. The liver being in a natural condition, the flow of bile (which is a mild cathartic) into the intestines is ample and regular, and hence the discharges are easy and sufficiently frequent. The reverse of all this constitutes costiveness, and the only true method of cure is to restore the functional activity of the two important organs which use the bowels as a sewer for the egress of waste matter. For this purpose Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can be confidentily recommended as the most effective of all medicines. It is not too much to say that chronic constipation would be unknown if the Bitters were in universal use as a remedy in the earlier stages of the complaint. At this period of the year, when dyspepsia with all its kindred disorders are so apt to be engendered and aggravated by the dampness of the atmosphere, this unequaled stimulant, tonic and alterative should be taken daily.

Aldermanic Proceedings.

On Thursday evening, in the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, on petition of Josiah Morrison, it was voted to erect a gas-post on the corner of State and Cass streets.

The petition of Harry J. Freeman for compensation for damages caused by raising grade of Albany street and the laying of a railroad through the same, was laid on the table.

The committee on claims reported an unauthorized claim of Lewis W. Brewster for publishing names of Sons and Daughters of Portsmouth, without recommendation. Aldermen Garrett, Spinney, Sise and Lefavour voted to pay Mr. Brewster the actual expense incurred. Aldermen Wilson, Davis, Hayes, and Trefethen voting in the negative defeated it. It was then voted that Mr. Brewster be allowed to withdraw his claim.

The committee appointed to confer with Mr. Joseph Parry relative to damages for widening Fleet Street, reported in addition to the former award that Mr. Parry be paid $1000 for damages to building, and 50 cents per foot for 437 feet of land taken. The report was accepted; yeas, Aldermen Garrett, Spinney, Davis, Sise, Trefethen—5; nays, Aldermen Wilson, Hayes, Lefavour—3.

Voted, that a suitable horse be provided for the street department and to saw wood.

That Boat-Race.

The Exeter News Letter publishes the following communication from Portsmouth, which explains itself:

Editor News-Letter: Will you please allow a member of the Lelap boat club of Portsmouth, to reply to the article in your last week's issue, strangely headed "Unfair Play."

The club on learning of the proposed regatta of the academy boat club, requested through their secretary, permission to enter their boat; but received a negative answer. The club then decided to visit your town, to witness the races. After their arrival, the regatta committee proposed that a friendly race be arranged between our boat and a four-oared shell. The committee evidently misunderstood the reply of the captain of our crew, which was, that he would make a decisive answer before the commencement of the regatta. A meeting was then held, and it was voted, under the circumstances, not to race. It seemed to us, as it would to any oarsman, too great a difference between our heavy six-oared boat, the "Crest," and the four-oared shell "Grace," the former being at least 400 lbs. heavier, twice as wide, and carried a coxswain. We were surprised when about to start for our 27 miles pull home (which, by the way, we rowed in three hours) to learn that the "Grace" crew had pulled to the stake boat and were awaiting our appearance. We then pulled to that point, and explained to them the misunderstanding.

The stroke (Mr. Hall) was desirous for a race, and when we learned that he did not belong to the academy, and also on account of the great difference in the boats. After repeated requests our crew (although the boat was loaded with baggage and overcoats, and had two flags flying) consented to row against them. At this time the "Grace" was considerably in advance, and it was sometime before the boats were even. The real contest then began; for the boats were alongside of each other for a long distance, and the "Grace" was passed in a fair pull at a time when its crew, as they afterwards informed us, were doing their best. The lead then obtained was held.

After crossing the line, our boys pulled directly to the boat house and on the return of the "Grace" crew from the judge's boat, were informed by them that, on their own representation, the judges decided it was a race, and declared us the winners. We were in and about the academy boat house and in conversation with the crew of the "Grace" and other students for nearly one hour; and we regret not being informed before, that it was not considered a race. We consider the judges' decision as reported to us by our opponents themselves was sufficient authority for the CHRONICLE item. It was immaterial to us whether the judges decided it a race or not, so long as we had the satisfaction of outpulling our antagonists: a fact that has not yet been disputed, at least to our knowledge. As for the complaint that we "crossed the flooded meadow," it must be remembered that it was our first pull on the river, and our coxswain naturally steered a straight course, and it was his own risk, as our boat drew double the water that the "Grace" did. Great stress was laid upon the fact that the crew of the "Grace" had not pulled together before. Three of our crew were new members, two had pulled in the boat but once before, and the coxswain had never steered the boat previous to the day of the regatta.

We hope our trip will result in a visit of the academy boat club to a regatta which the Lelap boat club propose to hold next summer, and that satisfactory arrangements be then made for a race between the same boats. We also desire an opportunity to return the courtesies and attentions which we received from the academy students. No. 5.

A Beautiful Work.

Mrs. Samuel Lamprey has on exhibition for a few days at the bookstore of J. H. Foster one of the most beautiful specimens of wax-work that this gifted and artistic lady has ever produced. The design, which is also the work of Mrs. Lamprey, is a cross and crown, and the workmanship is exquisite. The cross has a base partially concealed by flowers in wax, and is covered with a crown of flowers, perfect in every detail. As a work of art, it will rank high and add to the reputation of Mrs. Lamprey as an artist, whose rare genious and devotion to the chosen recreation of her life bring forth the most beautiful results in such tasteful and elegant conception as that now on exhibition.

Odiorne's Point Monument.

The Odiorne's Point Monument committee visited that locality on Friday, meeting first at the City Rooms. The following members appointed by the Historical Society were present, viz: Hon. Charles H. Bell of Exeter, Hon. B. F. Prescott of Concord, Hon. John H. Elliott of Keene, Hon. William Towne of Milford, and Hon. John J. Bell of Exeter. Of the Portsmouth committee, Hon. John Elwyn, James P. Bartlett, Esq., Frank W. Miller, Esq., Hon. Thomas E. O. Marvin, and Hon. Lory Odell, were present, Frank W. Hackett, Esq., of Washington, D. C., being the only absentee. Speeches were made and the historic places where the old Manor house was erected in 1623, the site of the ancient burial place and other places of interest were visited. The towns of Kittery, Eliot, North Berwick and South Berwick, Me., were invited by vote of the joint committee to unite in the commemoration. Committees on finance, procuring the necessary title to the land, designs for monument, etc., were appointed. The committee voted to locate the monument at Odiorne's Point, Rye, as near as possible to the site of the old Manor house, and every native of New Hampshire, every citizen, and every town in the State will be invited to contribute. It is thought that matters are progressing favorably to secure the monument in due time.

Laconics.

Schooners D. K. Ham and Emily A. Staples, previous to being used in transporting the truss of the P. & D. R. R. to its location in the bridge at Dover Point, will be taken to the navy yard and dismasted, after which tug Clara Bateman will tow them to the Point and assist in placing the truss.

Mr. Samuel Dodge has recently added to his valuable autograph collection a genuine and well preserved official "Order to the French Army," dated March 3, 1775, written on a peculiar parchment, and signed, par le grace de Dieu et Roi de France, Louis XVI., and his Secretary St. Jermaine, issued during the the third year of his reign.

—Among the few "contingent" expenses to be considered in estimating whether a business will pay a profit are the following: Advertising, agents, beggars, bad debts, clerks, collections, commission, dirt, discounts, depreciation, expressage, freight, fuel, ice, imposition, interest, insurance, labor, losses, mistakes, nonsense, printing, postage, repairs, rent, stationery, stealings, swindlings, travelling, taxes, water, waste, wear, watchmen, worry, usury, and an infinity of other trifles, etc., etc.

—Thackeray tells us of a woman begging alms from him, who, when she saw him put his hand in his pocket, cried out, "May the blessing of God follow you all your life!" But, when he only pulled out his snuff-box immediately added, "And never overtake ye."

—A justice of the peace at Kansas City puts it: "Now let the gaul darned jade wince."

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th,
High School Reunion, 5th,
The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at the Chronicle Office, J. H. Foster's Bookstore, and at Wm. R. Preston's.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Centennial Building.

The centennial committee on architecture have selected the plan for the exposition building submitted by Calvert Vaux of New York, and their choice will probably be approved by the executive committee. The proposed structure will be made up of 15 "pavilions" 156 feet on a side, and will be 2040 feet long and 680 feet wide, except at the centre and ends, where the width will be 652 feet. The "pavilions" are merely immense arches, marked off at the corners by the great pillars that support the roof. The materials of the building will be iron, slate, tin, and, perhaps, a little wood, and the estimated cost is about $3,580,000. The principal entrance to it will be on the east side, where it will be easily accessible from all the drives of Fairmount Park, on which all the buildings of the exposition are to be located. It is proposed also to build railway tracks to the grounds. The design for the memorial hall, which is to be a permanent building, and which is to cost the State $1,000,000 and the city $500,000, has not yet been selected.

—A desire to rise in the world is always a hopeful sign, and necessarily precedes the attempt; and such persons frequently rise to affluence and power through the simple and easy development of powers which they are never supposed to possess. The chief cause of young men's disappointments is the prevalence of the erroneous opinion that excellence, in any pursuit or vocation, is dependent on natural talent, and not on personal exertions.

The Singer Still Triumphant

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the highest of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The Singer received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in variety and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong,

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Disease of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

'Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the principal name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.
PREPARED BY

SETH W. FOWLE & SONS,

NO. 1 MILTON PLACE,

BOSTON, MASS.

And sold by Druggists and Dealers generally.

"TAKES" on sight. LAST AND BEST combination for Canvassers, Agents and Salesmen! Henry Ward Beecher's family newspaper starts its fall campaign, giving subscribers a FAIR of the largest and finest OLEOGRAPHS,—two most attractive subjects that "take" on sight,—painted by Mrs. Anderson, as contrasts and companions for her "WIDE AWAKE" and "FAST ASLEEP." Agents have immense success; call it the "best business ever offered canvassers." We furnish the lightest and handsomest outfit and pay very high commissions. Each subscriber, old or new, receives WITHOUT DELAY two beautiful pictures. We can supply ready for immediate delivery. The paper itself stands pre-eminent among family journals, being so popular that of its class it has the largest circulation in the world! Employs the best literary talent. Edward Egleston's great serial story is just beginning; back chapters supplied to each subscriber. Mrs. Stowe's long expected sequel to "My Wife and I," begins in the new year. The Country Gentleman.
Volume for 1874.
THE CULTIVATOR & COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, for the past forty years, has ranked, both in this country and abroad, as the STANDARD JOURNAL OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. The Editors and Proprietors, in addition to their own personal labors, are regularly assisted by a very large number of Special Correspondents and Regular Contributors, among whom are included many Leading Agricultural Writers, in all parts of the Country, East and West—and by over Five Hundred Occasional and Voluntary Writers, directly in the ranks of the Best Farmers and Horticulturists of nearly every State in the Union. With the co-operation of so large a corps of practical men, this Journal is intended to possess exceptional value as the chosen Medium of Intercommunication among all classes interested in the Products and Fertility of the land—those who Cultivate and those who Consume—the Buyer and Shipper, as well as the first Owner of the crop—Breeders of Improved Animals and their Customers—Manufacturers of Improved Machinery and those who purchase and employ it—Nurserymen and Fruit Raisers—and, especially, to supply fuller and better data as to the progress, prospects and returns of each successive Season, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and when to Sell.
TERMS.—The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is published weekly, on the following terms when paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; FOUR COPIES, $10, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

Daily Chronicle.

Backwoods Humor.

Edward Eggleston, whose pen is as lively as his fancy, writes in Hearth and Home:

I have been not a little interested in studying the humor of the "Hoosier"—that is, the rough back-country class who are laughed at by all the rest. You laugh at the hawbuck, but the hawbuck has somebody in his imagination greener and lower than he is, and it gratifies his vanity to tell stories of blunders which he would have scorned to make. I have found in conversation with the rudest people that they always told me jokes of ruder people. There is no fun in these stories or not much to cultivated people, but they are at least curious as illustrating the character of these people who tell them and laugh at them by the wide open fire-places of their log cabins. Will you hear some of them?

There were once two young men who had never been away from home, who went to town on an errand of some sort. They conspired together and bought two and a half cents' worth of gingerbread. As they walked along the streets stuffing it into their mouths, one of them nudged the other and said: "Laws, Sam! if marm knowed we wuz a takin' sech a splurge wouldn' she gin us goss?" There's not much humor in this truly, as I tell it; but told by a "country-jake" who poor as he is, never takes change below a "fip"—five cents—and who laughs all over when he tells it, I have found it quite amusing.

Here is one like unto it: Two young men from "Injeanny" strolling through Cincinnati come to the sign "City Hotel." One of them spells it thus: "C-i-t, Kit, y, Kitty, H-o-t, Hot, Kitty Hot, e-l, Kitty Hottel. Thunder Bill! that air mus' be the same Kitty Hottel as used to keep tavern in Injinop'lis." This story never fails to bring a laugh.

Sometimes

is an Irishman, sometimes a negro. Generally, the Irishman figures as supreme fool, while the negro often shows a good deal of wit. "More rain more rest," cried a negro one day as it began to rain. "I said more rain, more chuckin' corn in de barn, sah." Then this of an Irishman: He had just arrived in this country, and was crossing a stream on a foot-log. Seeing a bear come the other way he took him to be a negro, and bade him good morning. The bear raised up, and, after the manner of bears, clasped the Irishman to his bosom. The Irishman, supposing this to be a sign of affection, hugs the bear in turn. But finding that the "nager" squeezed unconsciously hard, he affectionately remonstrated with him. When it got to be a matter of life and death, he pulled out his knife and said: "An' if yo don't let go I'll bev to kill ye;" which he proceeded to do. The bear rolled into the water and the Irishman, meeting a man soon after, informed him that he had killed a "nager," upon which they returned and found the carcass of the bear.

In some of the stories

appears as the "inferior being." In western parlance a watch is called a turnip. It is a joke that has grown into slang. One of the stories which I heard on Clifty Creek was this: A white man met a negro with a watch-chain hanging out, and asked: "What time is it by your turnip?" "Laws, massa," answered the ingenuous darkey. "how did you know 'twas a turnip?" Behold Bryan O'Lynn with a black face.

Some of the

of the western people show the extravagance to which their humor tends. A man who is a fool is said not to have "the sense the law allows." The law used to exempt one hundred and fifty dollars from execution. A man who had less than this was in a state of extreme bankruptcy. A man who threatens an enemy always proposes to "lick him till his hide won't hold shucks." A bag which will not hold corn husks is, of course, a sorry affair. A stingy man is "as tight as a bark on a beech tree." "He squeezes a quarter till the eagle hollers." When a man shoots another he "siliviates him." And when a man is in great danger they say: "Saltpetre won't save him." I do not know what this means unless it is an allusion to the preservation of meat by saltpetre. I have often heard a westerner threaten another man that he would "tan his hide for him," and I have heard an angry woman call out to her hopeful boy: "I'll warm your jacket for you, my son!"

—The brilliant glow of an August afternoon lay upon the sparkling waters of the bay at Scarborough. A pleasant party in a little boat went merrily trolling about, and all was harmony and fish. But, alas! a fearful catastrophe. One beautiful girl of fifty summers or so, whose bright young soul had anticipated nothing but joy from the excursion, suddenly found that a fish had taken her hook. Sweetly smiling in her glee, she bent to lift her victim into the boat, when, to her inexpressible dismay, her gold palate, teeth, &c., gently fell into the waves. What did that strange fish do but shake the hook from its mouth, seize the shining prey, and disappear in the deep, deep water, while a wild scream rang from shore to shore, piercing the very hearts of all who heard. What the fish will do with his investment remains to be seen; as for the young lady, she never smiles now.

Daily Chronicle.

Readables.

A dispatch from Mississippi says that Ames' (republican) majority for Governor will be 30,000. A republican majority in both branches of the Legislature is assured.

This is the way the democracy of Ohio have been progressing, according to their gubernatorial votes of the last few years:

1867—A. G. Thurman	240,622
1869—G. W. Pendleton	235,988
1871—George W. McCook	218,560
1873—William Allen	211,825

The Taunton Gazette gives new proof of the tightness of the money market, in the remark, that not enough money could be raised in that city to print a democratic ticket.

The case of the Tichborne claimant has been again posponed on application of Queen's counsel, until November of next year. This indicates a probable abandonment of the case on the victory of Roger Orton, as the prosecution call him.

The New York World has elected a democratic President in 1876, on the strength of the elections that have just taken place. The World has elected the democratic candidate for President, for the last three terms, and others perhaps farther back. It elected McClellan without difficulty. It was obliged to throw over Blair, but with the load this lighted, found no difficulty in carrying in Seymour. With equal facility, it elected Greeley, having first pronounced him utterly unfit for the position, and then going for him with the zeal and persistence which a democrat always feels when he is doing what he knows he ought not to.

Several of the prisoners captured by the Spaniards on the Virginius have already been tried, condemned and shot at Santiago de Cuba. General Ryan, known in this country, was among them.

It is stated on good authority that the Hudson Bay Company are marketing their furs this year in England by way of Montreal, there being comparatively no demand for them in the United States. The gentleman giving the information added that the "Canadians can buy the skins now as they have not yet felt our panic, but they soon will, and then they will wish they hadn't bought"—lest they find themselves skinned, we suppose.

State News.

Now the skirmishes in other States have concluded, New Hampshire republicans will inaugurate the coming contest by a meeting of the State committee at Concord, on the evening of November 20. The times and places for holding the several conventions will then be fixed.

The abstract principle of success by persistent trying has just succeeded in the concrete at Keene, a toad-stool having forced its way through a sidewalk of the latter material.

The jewelry store of Mr. Sumner Eastman, in North Conway, was entered on Monday night, and robbed of $600 worth of watches and other valuables.

The city authorities of Dover demand $300 of the Boston and Maine Railroad for the privilege of draining their new station through the common sewer.

A settlement of French woodchoppers, numbering forty-four persons, lately moved into one old farmhouse near Enfield. There are nine families, and more are expected to come along soon to fill up the unoccupied rooms.

The Asiatic Trade.

The San Francisco Chronicle learns that Mr. Charles Crocker, who was recently a director of the Central Pacific Railroad, has gone in the interest of that company to China and Japan to stimulate the shipment of goods, by way of San Francisco and the Central Pacific Railroad to New York and all European ports. When this is accomplished he goes to Europe to promote emigration to California and to secure additional facilities for the accommodation of emigrants while on their way. In both of these missions the State of California and the port of San Francisco are deeply interested, and the success of either will insure a certain gain to the company, through whose agency this movement is pushed forward. Much of the tea, silk, opium, tobacco, and other articles of Asiatic trade are shipped from Chinese ports direct to European markets, and even to New York by way of the Suez Canal. This is an anomaly in commerce, and is undoubtedly owing to a want of cooperation among our transcontinental railroads in carrying overland freights. By this system San Francisco loses the advantage, profits, and commercial importance that belong to her geographical position. Asiatic commerce ought, by the natural laws of trade, to pass through that port. All light goods, such as teas, silks, and curiosities, destined for Europe or the United States, should pass through the Golden Gate and be transported across the continent by rail. A natural course of bullion would be from London through San Francisco to China.

A Sewed Cat.

A Haverhill, Mass., paper tells the following cat story, for the truth of which it vouches: A family by the name of Cushman, residing in West Amesbury, have in their possession a tortoise-shell cat about half grown, which a few weeks since had a swelling appear on the side of its neck, and showed signs of sickness and distress. One day Mrs. C., while holding the cat, noticed what had appeared to be a particle of thread, which she took hold of and found it was embedded within the swelling. Upon drawing it out a small needle was found attached to the end of it. The thread measured over eleven inches in length. The conclusion is that the cat must have swallowed it some time prior, and it finally worked out at her neck. The swelling has disappeared and the cat is now well.

The Second Advent.

[Hartford Courant, 6th.]

There were but a few visitors comparatively at Terry Island, the resort of the Adventists, yesterday, though it was generally understood that the day was fixed upon by the most ardent believers for the second coming of the Saviour. The newspaper announcements had made it positive that this was the day agreed upon, yet upon the island it was only looked forward to with anxious interest, and expectations that it would give development to some event justifying the prophecy which is depended upon as the basis of the perfect faith existing among the faithful and zealous people there assembled. The fact that the day passed without any startling or convincing discovery could furnish no cause for despondency, since it is only claimed that in these days are signs hoped for and eagerly anticipated. The passing of yesterday only serves to make to-day an important figure, or to-morrow full of prophetic significance. The belief is that the present week will give developments of great magnitude, and in this belief there is no wavering; but even the passage of the week uneventfully will not destroy the hopes entertained nor the convictions established. One of the speakers at the conference meeting yesterday said that they all felt a perfect assurance of receiving some light within three days, but they might be disappointed in this, though Adventism was firmly anchored to the belief that the end would absolutely and without failure come before the year closes. The basis of all calculation, chronologically, is on the Jewish ecclesiastical dates, and it is impossible to make definite calculations within a few days or hours; but the whole period covered since the prophetic writings of Daniel and John has been gone over with such a perfect analysis of events that there is no room for doubting that the year 1873 is the time for the ingathering of the harvest—the ingathering of the saints. There were several speakers at the conference, including Mr. Bishop, Mr. Barker and Mrs. Rebecca J. Smith, prominent and well-informed Adventists, and the remarks made took in the usual line of argument depended upon to establish the theories maintained; and there was in each case as to the prophetic and symbolic writings "in the book of truth," a clear presentation of the whole subject not altogether without some logical deduction. The papal power in Rome is the central point depended upon toward which prophecy is aimed, and the occurrence of mighty events there, and the political deve opments in France, growing out of the meeting of the Assembly yesterday, which shall determine the fate of the Bourbons and the recognition of the temporal power of the Pope, are awaited with eager longings and the most satisfying assurances. While these things have great and indeed overwhelming weight as a source of strength to hope and conviction, the general condition of the world at large and especially the panicky, unsettled state of affairs in this country, fortifies belief and makes the present an occasion full of the deepest prophetic meaning.

Those who go to the island expecting to find there a gathering of excited people, will be mistaken. There is far less of animal excitement than commonly attends the revival meetings of a religious character, even those of the mildest type. The atmosphere of the place is altogether subdued. There is a quiet, patient, hopeful exhibition of faith that is impressive, to say the least. One may wonder at the singular infatuation of a people giving themselves over to what nearly everybody calls a wild speculation, yet after all there is something about those Terry island saints that compels respect, as they are seen in their meetings, and demands that in spite of all apparent absurdities they shall not be ridiculed.

The Murderer Evans.

The Boston News says: "Our reporter was at Concord, N. H., last week. Though well aware that no one was allowed to see the Northwood murderer, he was surprised at the strictness of his seclusion, which, by the way, he takes very hard. He would like to be on exhibition. But he even now refuses to confess the murder for which he is to be hanged in February. He whines out, when urged to tell the circumstances: "They deceived me; they promised to give me a pistol and some money and let me go to Canada, if I would find them the body; and they would not." Warden Pillsbury says, just as we said at the time of the Northwood murder, that probably there is but one man living capable of the deeds in Bussey Woods, and in Maine. The mutilation of three bodies, leads to the same conclusion. In the last case the entire contents of the pelvis were carried off in his satchel; in each of the others a single gash only was cut, but the same diabolical hand is seen in them all. The old villain keeps up his professions yet; hails the chaplain as "brother," and "hopes to meet him in glory." Said chaplain does not reciprocate, —dares not, on any account be left alone in the cell with him. This cell was made by simply removing the partition wall between two cells, so that his little parlor has two doors, and good strong ones at that. The average Concord cell is not, perhaps, quite as neat and inviting as those usually shown in Charlestown, but it has a similar outlook upon a whitewashed wall, with high windows in it. But the outsider who expects to learn more than this of Evans' surroundings, will not be likely to be gratified. It is our impression that Evans will reveal nothing, absolutely nothing, to any who have ordinary access to him. The master touch, at which the secrets will flow from his heart, is certainly not in the chaplain, nor to be looked for in the honest, kind-hearted warden. If Gov. Straw will send the right man there he will do a good service to humanity."

—Why is a bubble like a bruise? Because each comes from a blow.

—Young ladies use powder, perhaps, because they think it will make them go off.

Storing Fruit.

An expensive structure is not required, for the fruit may be kept exceedingly well in a dark room in which it will not be exposed to sudden changes of temperature. A cellar is a capital place, provided it is perfectly dry and dark; but, as usually constructed, cellars are too damp and incapable of being properly ventilated. If a place is built expressly for fruit, it should, in dry soils, be partly below the general level, with the soil banked up against the walls. On wet soils it may be built upon the level, and a bank of soil made against the walls. The roof must be double, or covered with a good thickness of thatch, which will materially assist in maintaining an equable temperature. The fruit should be kept in perfect darkness; but, to facilitate the examination of the stores, windows provided with shutters should be fixed at intervals in the roof, or elsewhere, according to the style of the house. The fruit room should be in a shady position, for a very considerable number of soft fruits ripening in Summer are materially improved by being placed in a cool room for a few days, and in some cases the season of a particular fruit may be prolonged considerably by a portion of the crop being gathered and then placed in a cool, dry place, or a dry cellar. With regard to the internal fittings, it will suffice to say that shallow shelves or drawers of open lattice-work are preferable for laying the fruit upon.

A Sailor's Description of His Bride.

A seafaring man, who was recently married, gives the following description of his bride and her apparel, which we think will put some of the "society papers" to the blush: "My wife is just as handsome a craft as ever left a millinery dry docks, is clipper built, and with a figure-head not often seen on small craft. Her length of keel is five feet, eight inches, displaces twenty-seven cubic feet of air; ot light draught, which adds to her speed in a ballroom, full in the waist, spars trim. At the time we were spliced she was newly rigged fore and aft, with standing rigging of lace and flowers, mainsail part silk, with foretaystaysail of Valenciennes. Her frame was of the best steel, covered with silk with whalebone stancheons. This rigging is intended for fair weather cruising. She has also a set of storm sails for rough weather, and is rigging out a small set of canvas for light squalls, which are liable to occur in this latitude sooner or later. I am told, in running down the street before the wind she answers the helm beautifully, and can turn around in her own length if a handsomer craft passes her."

Pignatitively Western.

A man from Illinois went over to Fort Madison with sweet potatoes to sell. His early education had been somewhat defective in arithmetic, for he offered to sell his entire wagon load at sixty cents per half bushel, or two dollars per bushel. Baskets and sacks were begged or borrowed, and every one was busy buying potatoes at sixty cents per half bushel. The man did not see it until the last half bushel was sold. He persisted in selling at sixty cents per half bushel, thinking doubtless that there were four half bushels in a bushel. One man said he would take three half bushels. Another took two half bushels. Before the man commenced the retail business a grocer bought two bushels for his own use at two dollars a bushel. He offered one dollar and ninety cents a bushel for the whole load, in order to sell again; but was refused. When the man saw his blunder, he held up both hands and exclaimed, "Oh! thunder!"

He Wasn't A Pudding Head.

An anecdote is told of Parson Shute, the first minister settled at South Hingham, which for ready wit ought not to pass uncorrected. It appears that the reverend gentleman was very fond of pudding, so at a ministerial meeting one day, the hostess, in order to gratify the taste of her guest, had pudding for dinner. Unfortunately, it came very near the fire while it was cooking, so that when it was served it was extremely hot. The parson, without allowing it time to cool, placed a piece at once in his mouth, and then followed the usual contortions incident to such an occasion but all to no purpose. The pudding would not go, so the parson, who was a polite man, quietly slipped it out of his mouth and into his coat pocket, all of which was observed by his brother ministers, who for the sake of a joke, said: "So you are putting the pudding in your pocket, are you?" "Oh, yes," said the parson, all unmoved, "I put a little piece in there merely to light my pipe with after dinner." The explanation, it is needless to add, was sufficient.

Hell-Fire and Missions.

[T. W. Higginson.]*

The great missionary movement made two and a half centuries ago by the powerful society of the Jesuits dwarfs to pettiness all the evangelical missions of to-day. If conversion were salvation then no sum is too great. A million dollars for a soul is not too high. But through the whole course of the Evangelical alliance I did not see any paper, except that of one Dutchman, which even hinted at the possibility of these unregenerate heathen being in danger of hell-fire. That idea has been visibly dropped, and with it fell the whole philosophy of missions.

The Massachusetts Gun That Kicked.

[Worcester Gazette.]

The Boston News, prohibitory organ, almost despairs of the safety of the law. It is only sure of eighteen senators, with it thinks an even chance of two more and possibly three. As to the House, it thinks there is very little hope of it. The whole number of Senators is forty. There is no doubt whatever, we should say, of the repeal of the beer clause, at least, which was all that was expected by the license men before election. If Dr. Miner succeeds in stirring the Boston state constables into activity, the whole law will go.

An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous when no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pellets, from their cleansing and renovating effect upon the digestive apparatus, makes him feel decidedly better. Twenty-five cents, by Druggists. 769

Help the Torpid Organs.

When the body is in a state of health, the food taken into the stomach acts on the bowels as a stimulant, causing in them that worm-like motion by which their contents are expelled. The liver being in a natural condition, the flow of bile (which is a mild cathartic) into the intestines is ample and regular, and hence the discharges are easy and sufficiently frequent. The reverse of all this constitutes costiveness, and the only true method of cure is to restore the functional activity of the two important organs which use the bowels as a sewer for the egress of waste matter. For this purpose Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can be confidentialy recommended as the most effective of all medicines. It is not too much to say that chronic constipation would be unknown if the Bitters were in universal use as a remedy in the earlier stages of the complaint. At this period of the year, when dyspepsia with all its kindred disorders are so apt to be engendered and aggravated by the dampness of the atmosphere, this unequaled stimulant, tonic and alterative should be taken daily.

Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture, this has kept pace with, if it has noticed the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874--SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pic ures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—and may without conceit claim a peculiar character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other class of work, for the money, UNLESS HE TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and a recognition of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are exempt of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The woodcuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce entire pictures, of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of fine art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractiveness any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted to offer the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Domestic or Home," a new and beautiful chrome, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longing of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publisher, direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the facsimile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

Extraordinary Offer!

We have just received a large lot of fine Teas, bought during the recent panic, and we shall give our cash customers the benefit of it in a novel way. In every 6th half-pound we have put a Silver Trade Dollar.

The Tea we shall sell for 40 cents a half-pound, and the quality is guaranteed equal to any dollar tea sold, it being the finest quality of

OOLONG AND JAPAN.

People wonder how it can be done. All we ask is for you to call for a half-pound of our 40-cent Tea and test it.

Local Matters.

The Odiorne's Point Monument Committee

Organized while in this city on Friday, by choosing Hon. Charles H. Bell of Exeter (who is President of the New Hampshire Historical Society,) Chairman of the Committee, and Frank W. Miller Secretary. The Monument Committee consists of the following gentlemen, nearly all of whom are also members of the State Historical Society:

John Elwyn, Lory Odell, T.E. O. Marvin, J. P. Bartlett, Frank W. Hackett, Frank W. Miller, of Portsmouth; Charles H. Horton, Dover; Charles H. Bell, John J. Bell, Exeter; Wm. B. Towne, Milford; John H. Elliot, Keene; B. M. Prescott, Joseph B. Walker, Concord; John Bedel, Bath.

The following sub-committees were appointed: To secure land for location of monument—Messrs. Elwyn, Odell, Bartlett.

To report design for monument—Marvin, Elwyn, Elliot, Towne, Prescott, and C. H. Bell.

On Incorporation—J. J. Bell, Miller, Towne.

On Finance—Prescott, Elliot, Bartlett, J. J. Bell, Towne, Horton.

It was voted and especially desired to be understood, that the movement is not in any manner local, or sectional; but designed to merit and invite the support not only of every resident and native of New Hampshire, but of all interested in the settlement and early history of the Piscataqua colonies. Mr. Bartlett stated that the first subscription, $5, had been paid to him by Mr. Frank W. Hackett, who was one of the originators of the present movement. The next meeting of the committee will be held in Concord at the Historical Society's rooms, Dec. 17th, Hon. C. W. Woodman of Dover, having declined to serve on the committee, Mayor Horton of that city was invited to become a member.

Laconics.

Mr. Frank W. Rand of this city goes to Deerfield to teach. May success attend him.

The late Hon. Edward E. Bourne of Kennebunk left a manuscript history of the towns of Wells and Kennebunk, which it is understood will be published at an early day.

Mr. Henry H. Ham of Portsmouth, who has for several years been store clerk in the department of equipment and recuiting at this naval station, has been removed by Commander C. C. Carpenter, in charge of that department. Mr. Ham is a gentleman and deserves better treatment.

The York county commissioners are convinced that despite the inviting character of their new jail, inmates are incined, if opportunity offers, to stray away, and cases of absenteeism can only be prevented by substituting new locks upon the cells, and all of these are being fitted with a patent by a Boston firm.

The Portland and Ogdensburg.

A correspondent of the New York Times, writing from St. Johnsbury, Vermont, says:

A shorter route from Ogdensburg and Montreal to the sea-board has long been a desideratum, and the object will be attained with the completion of the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad by the end of next summer. Portions of the road have been built and in operation for some time. From St. Johnsbury east the trains run only about ten miles, not quite to the junction with the Boston, Concord and Montreal road at Dalton. To the west, however, the road is open to Hyde Park, fifty-two miles Here the road breaks through the Green Mountain chain, and is graded to Swanton, on Lake Champlain. Beyond this no work has been done. The preliminary survey runs north of Rouse's Point, and half the remaining distance to Ogdensburg is located across the line in Canada. Another section toward Portland through the White Mountains is in running order for sixty miles; then there is a break until Dalton Junction is reached. This is the most interesting portion of the whole, as it runs through "The Notch" close to the Crawford House, skirting Mount Willard, 300 feet above the carriage road. This route will, therefore, give much finer views of the White Mountain scenery than are now obtainable even from the Grand Trunk Railway. If the opening of this road brings Montreal sixty miles nearer to Portland, it will certainly have an important place in solving the transportation problem of the day.

Tolerably Sassy.

[Gail Hamilton.]

"We should say that Esau was a far more agreeable, interesting, and gifted person; and that Jacob, with his sly ways, and his mean-spirited willingness to work seven years longer for the man who had cheated him out of one wife, and into another, was not a man to be held in esteem of gods or men or women."

—The latest case of absence of mind occurred last Sunday in one of the churches. A steady churchgoing man became absorbed in some train of thought, not exactly suggested by the sermon, it is presumed, took a cigar from his pocket, put it in his mouth, folded his arms, leaned contentedly back in his seat, and was only aroused from his reverie by the courtesy of a friend, who happened to sit near.

—Potter Palmer's new hotel in Chicago, just thrown open to the public, is said to be the finest caravansary in the world. The building will cost about $2,000,000; the site upon which it stands is valued at $1000,000; the furniture will cost nearly $500,000.

—A French astronomer thinks he will be able to find out during the comiug transit of Venus whether the planet is inhabited.

—The signal office on the summit of Pike's Peak is called a mansion in the skies. The government does not owe for it.

—There were tooth-carpenters in those days; for in Egypt mummies have been found with teeth filled with gold, and in Quito a skeleton has been discovered with false teeth secured in the check-bone by gold wires. In the museum at Naples, among some of the surgical instruments discovered at Pompeii, there is a fac-simile of Sim's speculum. In the ruins of Nineveh, Layard found several magnifying glasses.

—Ladies in delicate health should go to Colorado. The case of Mrs. Prather of Golden City shows the wonderful restorative effects of the climate. She could not even sweep her room when they lived in Ohio, but in less than a year after her arrival in the territory, she chased her husband a mile and a quarter with a pitch-fork.

—John A. Dix, Governor of the State of New York; Thurlow Weed, one of the oldest editors in the United States, and Daniel Drew, the Wall-street Methodist millionaire, are pensioners on the Government, having been soldiers of the war of 1812. Weed played a fife, Dix carried the flag, and Drew carried a musket.

—Miss Le Clercq is playing in Chicago, and a writer makes the extraordinary statement that "in the last act—her crowning triumph—she infects the whole audience with the intense love, and the splendid, forgiving happiness that radiates from her very soul, and floods the stage like a bath of electric light."

Piano-Forte & Organ TUNING.

MR. E. Q. NORTON, late of Boston, will remain permanently in Portsmouth for the purpose of carrying on the business of tuning and repairing Pianos and Organs. Correspondence solicited with churches out of town, having organs needing repairs. Organs rebuilt, voiced and tuned in the most thorough manner. Estimates given on jobs; also specifications for new organs. Churches about to buy will save money by consulting me, as I am under the control of no maker and work for the interest of the party buying.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

Brain Worry.

Many of us pray to be delivered from sudden death, and why do we worry ourselves into it. If we do, can we help it? To most of us it is not given to choose our lives, to avoid the rough places, to gently shoulder to one side disagreeable fact. We must climb over the rocks though they hurt us sore, and the difficulties, however they annoy, must be met with brain fret and wear until they are conquered or we have passed them. They are as real, living, annoying as any tangible ache or pain could be; as bruising and irritating as the pea in the shoes of the pilgrims of old. Nervous health is one thing, and moral health and purely physical health is quite another and different thing. Calm and steady mental work is conducive to long life; but nervous emotion, mental work that is a constant urging, and, at the same time, is an unhinging of the even tenor of the mind, eats away the brain faster than any mental labor, no matter how hard, that is systematic. As men do not really die of heart disease as often as supposed, but of apoplexy, or congestion of the lungs, so they do not die of brain work, but of brain worry. Scott died of it; Southey, Swift, Horace Greeley, and probably Thackeray.

—A man out west brags that all the furniture and flooring of his house is made of live oak, but his wife, who does the hard work of the house, says it is nothing but scrub oak.

The Singer Still Triumphant

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarcely cut no old secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when recorded to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

The Country Gentleman.
Volume for 1874.
THE CULTIVATOR & COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, for the past forty years, has ranked, both in this country and abroad, as the STANDARD JOURNAL OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. The Editors and Proprietors, in addition to their own personal labors, are regularly assisted by a very large number of Special Correspondents and Regular Contributors, among whom are included many Leading Agriculturists, in all parts of the Country, East and West—and by over Five Hundred Occasional and Voluntary Writers, directly in the ranks of the Best Farmers and Horticulturists of nearly every State in the Union. With the co-operation of so large a corps of practical men, this Journal is intended to possess exceptional value as the chosen Medium of Intercommunication among all classes interested in the Products and Fertility of the Land—those who Cultivate and those who Consume—the Buyer and Shipper, as well as the first Owner of the crop—Breeders of Improved Animals and their Customers—Manufacturers of Improved Machinery and those who purchase and employ it—Nurserymen and Fruit Raisers—and, especially, to supply fuller and better data as to the progress, prospects and returns of each successive Season, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and when to Sell.
TERMS.—The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is published weekly, on the following terms: when paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; FOUR COPIES, $10, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

Stock Swindling.

The San Francisco Real Estate Circular is responsible for the following interesting narrative of a recent affair in the realms of stock jobbing: The risks attending the loaning of money on even the best class of mining stocks, and a specimen of the morals prevailing in stock circles, are well illustrated by the following story: An attempt was made not long since to take control o the Savage mine, from certain large operators in whose hands it has for some time been. To accomplish this it was, of course, necessary to secure large loads of Savage stock. Under the influence of these purchases the stock went up to $160. About this time, however, it was found that a controlling interest in the mine could not be had; that the opposite party were a little too "hefty" to be thrown overboard. The move was, therefore, a failure, and a fall in Savage was not far off. One of the buyers, who was loaded down to the guards with the stock, was well aware that if he were to attempt to sell out prices would break terribly, and, being a moral genius in his way, he devised a plan to let himself down easily and put the losses on other shoulders. Calling in the aid of an unscrupulous individual, he made a stuffed sale of 2,600 shares of Savage to him. He then sent him to two of our largest money-lenders to borrow on the stock. One of them loaned $95 per share on 1,000 shares, at 2 per cent. per month, while the other loaned $105 a share on 1,600 shares, at 3 1-2 per cent. per month; the first loan amounted to $95,000, the other to $168,000; 2,600 shares having thus been disposed of, the sharp operator then let the remainder of his load go upon the market. The price, of course, began to fall, but he got out with comparatively little loss. The stock in three days went down to $45. Both the money-lenders rushed after the borrower when the tumble began, but he coolly told them he had no money; that the unexpected fall in the stock had set him naked on the bed-rock; and, finding nothing to attach, the lenders had to grin and bear it, not knowing that what is called a neat job in the stock-market had been put up on them. One of the lenders sold out at $45, sustaining a loss of $35,000; while the other has his little bundle still on hand to say his prayers over. This little incident is a true story of unsophisticated brotherly kindness. If its relation here should prove to be the means of inducing any widows or orphans to withdraw their little savings from a slow-going bank and invest it in mining stocks (where they are sure to double their money) our benevolent object will be more than attained.

Wackup's Washing.

Mr. Wackup, a married man of Bridgeport, quit work early the other afternoon, and went home to fix up for the purpose of spending the evening—or rather half the night—with a number of his friends. He found his wife lying upon the lounge enjoying a sick headache, but he couldn't find a clean shirt. Mrs. Wackup said his shirts were washed, but not ironed, and she was too ill to do it, and it was the girl's afternoon out. A shade of disappointment clouded his brow, and, rushing into the kitchen he slammed the door with much earnestness, and fortunately found an iron on the range, nice and hot. Then he dived into the basket of dampened clothes, and found one of his shirts at the bottom, just as he expected.

He spread the garment out on a table without first removing the oilcloth cover, and hurriedly consulted his watch. Then he couldn't find the iron-holder, and substituted his pocket-handkerchief, and, after burning four of his fingers and breaking one of the commandments, he landed the hot iron on, his shirt-bosom. He thought the garment had a strange look, but supposed it would assume its proper shape when ironed, and he shoved the iron up and down like a jack-plane. The labor seemed so easy that he mentally said he had a mind to follow the business for a living. Then he undertook to turn his shirt, and just because it adhered to the glazed table-cover, he gave it a violent jerk, adding at least six inches more to the split in the back.

Then he noticed for the first time that he had set the hot iron on the tail of the garment and scorched a hole in it as large as his hand, and in his haste to remove the smoothing-machine he neglected to use the holder, and dropped the hot fraud on his choice toe; and when Mrs. Wackup, who was startled by the intensity of his language, entered the kitchen, holding her head with both hands, she discovered her husband hopping about the room on one foot and clasping the other with both his hands. The sympathy that Mrs Wackup tendered was not of a nature that her blistered husband yearned for just at that particular moment. She placed her arms akimbo and indignantly observed:

"Ain't you ashamed of yourself, you old fool! dancing the can-can around here! and your poor wife nearly dead, too! And"—here her eyes rested upon the wreck on the table—"and if the old idiot hasn't gone and ruined my best chemise! O, the the—" Wackup didn't tarry to hear his infuriated better-half finish the sentence, but adroitly dodged the broom-handle and limped out of the room and up stairs to bed without his supper. The next morning he told his friends that the reason he failed to keep his engagement was, he was suddenly attacked with cholera morbus at the supper-table, and liked to have died during the night.

Readables.

The round-house of the Boston & Albany Railroad was burned, Monday morning, with fifteen locomotives, six tenders and two snow-plows.

The republicans have probably elected their candinates for Comptroller and Canal Commissioner in New York State.

Six hundred men were discharged from the Brooklyn navy yard on Saturday. It is reported that another discharge will take place on the 15th instant.

Mary Curtis Lee, widow of the rebel General Lee, died last week at Lexington, Va. She was 67 years of age.

The committe of the French assembly on the prolongation of the powers of President McMahon was filled, Saturday, by the election of three candidates of the Left, giving the republicans a majority of one. It is reported, however, that the right, by making certain concessions, won over one republican and thus gained control of the committee. All the ministers tendered their resignations to the president, Saturday, but they were not accepted.

The elections have all been estimated in their effects on Senatorial elections for the seats to be filled March 4, 1875. The republicans claim to have practically carried California, Kansas, Minnesota, Mississippi, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York, seven, a gain of two, while the democrats have carried Ohio and Virginia, a republican loss of one. Wisconsin may be regarded as doubtful; but, granting it to the opposition, the republican vote in the Senate will remain as before, offsetting the loss by gains.

The New Haven lighthouse keeper reports that large quantities of oysters were washed up on the beach during the recent storm and were carted off in wagon-loads. It is also reported that bedded oysters were so buried in sand that they will be almost a total loss, and that many owners will lose their entire crop.

The Newburyport Herald says a race is soon to take place between two fast sailing Newburyport schooners, from that port to Delaware breakwater and return to Gloucester. It is said that quite a sum is made up for the winner of the race.

State News.

Eight inches of moist snow fell in North Conway on Friday night.

The Franklin Journal says the new school at Orphan's Home is to be named in honor of the late Hon. Horton D. Walker, who was a trustee and benefactor of the institution.

The Saco river has risen twenty-five feet above low water mark above Conway, and every bridge over the Saco from the Notch to Bartlett has been swept away by the freshets. One of the engineers on the Ogdensburg road that about all the dirt has been swept out of the Notch.

A Worthless Opinion.

[Foster's Dover Democrat.]

A Portsmouth paper, (the Times) pretending to speak by authority, has the following:

"The democracy of Portsmouth, who are the true friends of the cause of temperance, will insist that the party in this State place itself squarely upon a license law platform, and demand the repeal of the odious and inoperative prohibitory laws that now disgrace our statute books. They will then demand the nomination of some temperance man of unquestioned integrity and known strength of character, and will be ready to do their share toward redeeming this State next March."

Now, we happen to know something of the democracy of Portsmouth, and although we will not dispute that they are "the true friends of the cause of temperance," yet we venture to say that they will "insist" upon no such absurd things as stated. In the first place they will not "insist" upon a "license-law platform." In the next place, they will not insist upon "the repeal of the odious and inoperative prohibitory laws," because a thing which is "inoperative" cannot be very "odious," not sufficiently "odious" to provoke much of a "demand." In the next place, if they should "insist" upon the "license-law platform" and get it, they have more sense than to stultify themselves by "demanding the nomination of some temperance man" upon such a platform.

So we conclude that "the democracy of Portsmouth" will keep along in about their usual course, and there won't be much of a tempest on their account.

Morton and Thurman.

[Brooklyn Argus.]

Senator Thurman is unsurpassed in the art of electioneering. He is the most consummate political tactician of his time. Allen's election is more due to Thurman's efforts than to his own popularity. Senator Morton is the only man in the republican party who can be matched with the famous Buckeye. But Morton is unscrupulous. He descends to stratagems that Thurman's superior cleverness enables him to do without. Morton is the more venturesome; Thurman is the more adroit. Morton has little conscience; Thurman has a good deal. Morton is sometimes clumsy Thurman is always comme il faut; Morton would crucify his grandfather to carry his point; Thurman might take your scalp, but you wouldn't know it.

Black Pine Wool.

Seeing the article in the CHRONICLE with this heading, of garments for underwear imported from Germany, reminds me that within a year a Scotch acquaintance, named Charles Raumus, now living in Spottsylvania County, Virginia, secured a patent for preparing the common pine leaf for manufacturing purposes. His patent, as I recollect it, was very broad to secure his processes for manufacturing the leaf into a material which he claimed was very much better and cheaper than curled hair for mattresses and for stuffed furniture. He was enthusiastic over the untold wealth under the old pine trees along the Southern seaboard States and the pine regions of the North. He claimed that his prepared material not only would give the softest mattresses for beds but would drive all vermin from the house where used. He had tested it in his own Virginia home, where they had lived and multiplied from before the memory of the oldest inhabitant, and no contrivance could drive them from their entrenchments until a mattress of prepared pine leaves for his own bed seemed to afford him protection; when he applied it freely about the house, and since that time bedbugs had become as scarce as snakes in Ireland. He also claimed that he had drawn his prepared pine leaves to a fibre finer and smoother than wool or cotton, and that it would come in use for cloth manufacturing sometime. The last time I saw him he was waiting for the removal of a hitch about his patent called an "interference." Somebody else claimed to have discovered substantially the same process for preparing pine leaves previous to his discovery, and had samples of woven and knit fabrics at the Patent Office, to show to what uses it might be applied. The last I heard from him he was arranging a compromise with the other inventor, to combine their discoveries, and join hands in preparing to revolutionize manufacturing, and give to the people better and cheaper goods from the old pine woods than can be obtained from the cotton fields or the sheep-fold.

EXE.

Had Something on His Mind.

The Hartford Courant mentions a singular transaction which occurred recently on the cars between New York and New Haven. A gentleman of that city, who was riding in the smoking car, noticed that a man sitting in a seat directly in front of him gave the conductor a two-dollar bill to pay his fare to New Haven. Some change was to be given back, but the conductor, to the surprise of the spectator, handed the passenger a roll of bills and passed on. The man who received the money appeared no less astonished than the Hartford gentleman, and was evidently about to follow up the conductor and return the bills, when the latter suggested to him to hold on a little while, and see what the ticket-puncher would do. When the train stopped at Bridgeport, the passenger said he would step into the refreshment saloon a moment and would return, but did not make his appearance again, having probably decided to keep the money. This, of course, made the Hartford gentleman feel a little queer, as he had stopped the fellow from paying back the money, though with the best intentions in the world. Very soon after the conductor and a brakeman came through the car together and made a very careful search for something. It is probable that to this day the conductor thinks he dropped the roll of bills in that or some other car, and that some rascal stole it, and it is possible would express a good deal of indignation if told that he gave the money away in the coolest manner imaginable. Instances of absence of mind rarely take this form among railroad conductors.

Retribution.

[Portland Advertiser.]

In the year 1827 one of our prominent mercantile firms doing business with Cuba had an account against a firm on that island for $17,000. Shortly afterward, so we are informed, one of the Portland firm visited Cuba and desired a settlement, as no answer had been received to their account current

The Cuba firm either ignored the account altogether, or refused payment and failed. The Portland gentlemen informed Cubans he would remember them. On Thursday last our Portland friend was sitting in the dining-room of the Falmouth Hotel when he saw a man seated at one of the tables who resembled one of the Cuban firm very strongly. Upon investigation he ascertained his surmises were correct, and that the junior member of the firm was in his power. The old books were burned up and the account made out, amounting, with interest, to $28,000, and placed in the hands of an officer, with the writ. The officer arrested the gentlemen from "il fidelissima isla de Cuba," and he now languishes in a cell in default of bail. He made application to several of our Portland merchants for bail, but we are told, without avail. The debtor denies that he possesses any property, but the gentleman who gave us the item—who is connected with the Portland firm—understands that the gentleman is owner in a large sugar establisment on the island. Others say he is not owner, but possesses a simple power of attorney.

The Marks of Adversity.

"A Nelson street dog," says the Danbury News, "noted for its admiration of hens, was on the walk in front of this office a few minutes this morning, and attracted general attention. The animal will not weigh over eight pounds, and is probably not over two years old. But the vicissitudes of a neighbor's temper has told several on his frame. Cobble-stones have made one leg perfectly worthless, and transformed two others into valueless ornaments. Hot water has made him bald enough to supply a hair invigorator manufacturer with instructive and pleasing reflections for months at a time, while a marvellously aimed coal-clinker has given to one of his eyes an expression that must not only scare a hen, but is well calculated to make a full grown man feel a fresh interest in the nearest fence."

The Fate of Franklin.

[Springfield Republican.]

The Buddington party saved much valuable manuscript from the wreck of the Polaris, but Mr. Smith, of Tessuisak, is said to have documents which belonged to Captain Hall, quite as valuable as any others likely to have been left by him. Hall and Bessels both frequented Smith's house, and, meeting there one evening, came to very strong language regarding each other. Subsequently, Hall confided to Smith four boxes, some of which referred to his researches into the fate of Sir John Franklin. Hall had never permitted these notes to be published, being determined, he said, to keep the secret till after the death of Lady Franklin, out of regard to her feelings. The suppressed data were to the awful purport that Franklin's party were reduced to eating each other. The discovery or evidence of such a calamity, awful as it was, would of course have added a great exploit to the list of Hall's achievements. To keep ever about with him these precious memoranda for which he had sought so assiduously, to delay, as it proved, beyond his own death, the full realization of his fame, out of regard to the feelings of the aged and mourning widow, makes altogether an exhibition of real chivalry that attests the true hero-stuff in this man. It is not alone his iceborn grave that challenges the world. The heart within it was both brave and tender.

The Workings of Law.

The New York Graphic has the following: "Trial by jury is apparently a device designed wholly for the benefit of the defendant. Thus every misconduct on the part of a juror, such as his acceptance of a bribe from the friends of the prosecution, is sufficient ground for setting aside a verdict of guilty. But, on the other hand when once the defendant has been let loose, no evidence of the improper conduct of the jury is sufficient to bring him again within the clutches of the law. The Stokes trial furnishes an example of this curious anomaly. One of the jurors is accused of having grossly misconducted himself, and is now under arrest. If found guilty, however, he can only be punished for a misdemeanor, and his conduct cannot be used by the District Attorney as a plea for a new trial which might result in the adequate punishment of Stokes. Nevertheless, had Stokes been found guilty of murder, the charges alleged against the juror would have been certain to have resulted in setting aside the verdict.

Camphor as a Medicine.

The Scientific American lectures those people who make frequent use of camphor as a medicine. It says: The physiological action of camphor is not yet understood; but, judging by the symptoms that follow the taking of a moderate dose, it may be called a nervous stimulant. It is somewhat like opium and alcohol, therefore, in its action, when given in small quantities; but, when taken in large doses, it causes excessive irritation to the nervous system, producing convulsions and death. Camphor acts to irritate and congest, and finally, to inflame the mucous lining of the stomach, causing, in the milder cases, a form of dyspepsia, and in the more aggravated ulceration of the stomach. From these two actions, namely, that of nervous stimulant and local irritant, come all the good and evil of its use. We can, therefore, readily see how unsuited this drug is to be a household remedy.

Vanderbilt.

[New York Tribune.]

The enormous prestige of Mr. Vanderbilt has carried everything he touched to prices which those on the inside know to be utterly without justification. The reaction was inevitable, and it goes as far to the other extreme. For the wild panic that has accompanied the fall, and for the needless and wicked sacrifice that are entailed, we have mainly to thank the obstinate old man who refused to save the Union Trust Company by paying his debt. The sum that he declined to pay—though on that eventful night his friends and followers labored with him till midnight to persuade him to do this simple justice—was a million and three quarters. Those who know what share he holds of the stocks that go by his name estimate his own losses, by reason of that night's wilful refusal, at nearly or quite twenty millions. He has his reward.

Partridge Hunt Extraordinary.

[Ripley (Tenn.) News.]

An old man named Partridge, with a double-barreled gun, and lady Partridge, with a cowhide, went in pursuit of their respected townsman, Captain W. H. Foster. They found him and ere he was aware of the situation his flesh was being tortured by the weapon in the hands of Mrs. Partridge. He collected himself and blew her in the countenance by striking out from the shoulder—causing her to reel and totter. Mr. Partridge now prepared to give the proper range to his piece in order to forward a vengeful projectile to a bloody lodgment in the captain's frame; but he was prevented by the captain, who managed to stick a knife in the old artillerymen's back. An armistice here took place which is likely to merge into profound peace.

—The editor of the Cleveland Leader recently took his wife and eleven children—all boys and girls—to "Eli Perkins'" lecture on free tickets, and then went home and deliberately wrote and punctuated the following: "A poor man fell over the gallery last night while 'Eli Perkins' was lecturing in a beastly state of intoxication."

—A McKeesport man lost his coupon ticket for the Connellsville Railway nearly a year ago. Last week he found it in his Holy Bible. He has thought it necessary to publish a card in the newspapers stating that "it wasn't his other Bible."

—Many a man, who thought he had made a bargain buying silks, found that he had got worsted.

An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pellets, from their cleansing and renovating effect upon the digestive apparatus, makes him feel decidedly better. Help the Torpid Organs.

When the body is in a state of health, the food taken into the stomach acts on the bowels as a stimulant, causing in them that worm-like motion by which their contents are expelled. The liver being in a natural condition, the flow of bile (which is a mild cathartic) into the intestines is ample and regular, and hence the discharges are easy and sufficiently frequent. The reverse of all this constitutes costiveness, and the only true method of cure is to restore the functions. Inactivity of the two important organs which use the bowels as a sewer for the egress of waste matter. For this purpose Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can be confidently recommended as the most effective of all medicines. It is not too much to say that chronic constipation would be unknown if the Bitters were in universal use as a remedy in the earlier stages of the complaint. At this period of the year, when dyspepsia with all its kindred disorders are so apt to be engendered and aggravated by the dampness of the atmosphere, this unequaled stimulant, tonic and alterative should be taken daily.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the patch-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new.

E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has not led the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874--SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh picture to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with other of similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The success of a competitor would be almost impossible, unless it should duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shade or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that some of the best examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding! a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality will prevail in its stead. The woodcuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better delineating of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign models, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to BE ALDINE will, as a trifling equivalent, obtain his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The illustrations issued for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject the publishers will send "Thoughts of Rome," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

CHROMOS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid, by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

Local Matters.

"Music Hath Charms," etc.

Messrs. Editors:—Two correspondents of the Journal, signing themselves respectively "Musicus" and "Music a Blessing," have for some weeks been conducting a paper warfare; and as the subject they have been discussing is a public affair and their articles have excited much attention and comment, I propose, with your kind permission, to say a word or two about it myself. The irrepressible conflict commenced as follows:

For a great many years the subject of music-teaching in our public schools has been neglected, and private instruction for the young wholly relied on. This year the school managers decided to have a public music-teacher, and engaged a lady from out of town for the position, at a liberal salary. "Musicus" (who is popularly supposed to be one of our most energetic and public spirited citizens, who has for many years personally interested himself in musical affairs,) complains of this in the Journal, urging that while there are so many competent music teachers in the city, with all their interests centered in it and expending their earnings here, it is unwise to go abroad for service which can be as well done and as cheaply procured at home.

At this, "Music a Blessing" (who is popularly supposed to be another energetic citizen, and not the best tenor singer in the city) feels aggrieved, and comes out with a communication stating that none of the local music teachers are competent for the position! In support of this statement he says that "comparatively nothing has been done towards educating the young in this branch during the past fifteen years," that "we have an unusual amount of local musical talent in proportion to our population, but it has not been made available," and that this state of affairs must be attributed "to the lack either of enterprise or ability on the part of our local teachers—it may be both." He also queries; "With one honorable exception, T. P. Moses, who of our local teachers have done anything towards educating the young in vocal music?"

"Musicus" replies, instancing the many good performers, vocal and instrumental, in the city, pupils solely of the local teachers, as an answer to the assertion that the latter are incompetent. He points out that he neither opposed the teaching of music in the public schools nor objected to the lady teacher, but only to the policy of sending abroad to get what could be as well procured at home.

"Music a Blessing" returns once again to the fray, repeating his assertion that none of the local teachers are properly qualified to impart musical instruction; says that "Musicus must have been influenced by some of our local teachers, or by interest of a personal character, to have assailed the policy of our school committee under the garb of the adage 'Encourage your own;'" states that the local teachers are behind the age; hopes "Musicus" will follow the new teacher in her rounds for at least one day "before he makes a hasty conclusion as to whether" she "is or is not properly qualified to teach youth;" and winds up with "none will be found on the side of Musicus."

This, Messrs. Editors, you will at once perceive is "a very pretty quarrel as it stands:" but it may be made still more interesting if more people will publicly join in it—so here goes for my contribution to the literature of the day. In the first place, let me say that I am not a music teacher; that I stand not in awe of "Musicus," though I heartily endorse his advice to "Encourage your own" by giving them the preference, other things being equal; that I want nothing from the city, either for myself or others; that the city fathers and school committee may do whatever they please, for all me; and lastly, that—incredible though it may seem—I don't care a snap even for "Music a Blessing," and maintain that my unsupported assertions over a fictitious signature are just exactly as good as his. I now propose to overhaul a little of the latter's special pleading.

In his first epistle general to "Musicus," he says—in support of his statement that none of the local teachers are competent—that the sad neglect of vocal music in past years must be attributed "to the lack either of enterprise or ability on the part of our local teachers—it may be both." Why? No complaints have ever been made, so far as I know, that pupils under our local teachers did not learn; and for the failure to learn of those who did not attend their instructions, I fail to see that the teachers can be blamed, as there is no law to compel the attendance of children at singing-school,—at least, I never have heard of any. That singing has not been successfully taught in the public schools is no more the fault of the local teachers, either, for no one of them all has ever been employed, so far back as my memory runs; and under these circumstances it is ridiculously absurd and unjust to saddle upon the music teachers the sad effects of the neglect and indifference of parents and school committees. "Music a Blessing" himself refers to Mr. Thos. P. Moses as the "one honorable exception" among the local teachers who has done something "towards educating the young in vocal music;" but he does not give any reason why Mr. Moses was not employed by the city. Mr. Moses' speciality through a long life has been the instruction of the young; that his abilities as a teacher have deteriorated has not been hinted at; and he would doubtless have gladly accepted the position of music teacher in a portion of the public schools, at a reasonable salary, at any time within the past ten years. It certainly cannot be his fault that music has not been taught in our schools.

In his second epistle, "Music a Blessing" assails the motives of "Musicus,"—which doesn't concern me at all; he also hopes "Musicus" will investigate the facts "before he makes a hasty conclusion as to whether our new teacher is or is not properly qualified to teach youth,"—which, as "Musicus" has not said anything which could be tortured into a question as to the lady's abilities, seems to me very like setting up a man of straw for the purpose of knocking him down; and with that sterling modesty which shows so prominently all through his communications, "Music a Blessing" closes the last one by saying "none will be found on the side of 'Musicus.'" We have his word only for that, as for his other statements; and as I make bold to question his other assertions, so do I with this one.

In conclusion, Messrs. Editors, let me say that if any believer in the blessings of music can secure a coveted soprano for his church choir and get the city to indirectly contribute towards defraying the expenses, I don't know as I care anything about it, any way; but when "Music a Blessing," in his indignation at any one's presuming to question the wisdom of certain proceedings, makes the sweeping assertion that his favorite music teacher is the only competent music teacher in the city, he assumes a great deal. Men whose fame as teachers and musicians is far ahead of what "Music a Blessing" will ever win, have spoken most commendingly of more than one of our local teachers and not a few of their pupils; and for "Music a Blessing" to suppose that his ipse dixit is enough to overthrow the well-earned reputations of a dozen or more local music teachers, seems to me very much like ignorant "cheek." If he has points to carry, and can carry them, let him do so; who cares? But he need not deal wholesale in insults and falsifications against a score of persons in order to exalt the individual he may happen at the time to favor.

Yours truly, BLESSED MUSIC.

The Howard Society will hold its first meeting at Mrs. Lyman's, No. 1 Austin street, this (Tuesday) afternoon.

The order to reduce the hours of labor to eight at the Eastern Railroad car works has been countermanded, and the shops will be run on full time for the present.

The friends of Rev. Carlos Martyn desire him to remain here, and show the inappreciation of his ministrations by a gift of $700. We are pleased to learn that he is to remain.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern railway by which our citizens can attend the Odd Fellows' Fair at Biddeford, at a very reasonable price. The price of tickets for the round trip, including admission to the fair, is only $1.65. The fair begins on Wednesday and closes on Friday evening.

The fire at Wenham, Mass., Sunday evening, was plainly visible from here, seeming about ten miles distant. Ten large ice houses belonging to Addison Gage & Co., were totally destroyed. No ice had been removed during the past season, consequently there was about thirty-five thousand tons of ice lost, together with about two hundred tons of hay used for the preservation of the ice.

PIANOS.

ANY PERSON wishing to purchase a Piano may examine a superb instrument upon application to MISS M. E. B. MILLER, or A. PEARSON, at No. 8 Daniel street (up spire.)

Also, a SECOND-HAND PIANO for sale cheap.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above fuel, we would call the attention of both Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON

And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

Benefit of One Advertisement.

If there is one man on this continent above another who appreciates the benefit of advertising, it is Orange Judd. A number of years ago, when he and his wife spent their evenings in putting up packages, and a penny had its full value to them, he sent a boy with a check for $100 to the Herald office, with instructions to pay what was due, and leave the rest toward future advertising. The boy being dull of comprehension did not understand him, and told the book-keeper to use the $100 for one day. The next morning what was Mr. Judd's horror on taking up the Herald to see "Read the American Agriculturist" repeated for nearly a whole column. He rushed down to the office for an explanation, and found that they only followed instructions, and there was no help for it. "We are ruined;" he said to his wife, "a whole year's advertising gone in a day." But instead of being his ruin it was the beginning of his success. Immediately, subscriptions poured in from all parts of the country. The Agriculturist soon became an institution, and its proprietor is one of the richest men in New York. Mr. Judd has continued, from the day of his lucky mistake, to be one of the most extensive advertisers in the country and he has his reward.

The Singer Still Triumphant

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong,

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, from the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarcating out morbid secretions, and leaving no room for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Debility, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR UNEASINESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

"TAKES" on sight. LAST AND BEST combination for Canvassers, Agents and Salesmen! Henry Ward Beecher's family newspaper starts its fall campaign, giving subscribers a PAIR of the largest and finest OLEOGRAPHS,—two most attractive subjects that "take" on sight,—painted by Mrs. Anderson, as contrasts and companions for her "WIDE AWAKE" and "FAST ASLEEP." Agents have immense success; call it the "best business ever offered canvassers." We furnish the lightest and handsomest outfit and pay very high commissions. Each subscriber, old or new, receives WITHOUT DELAY two beautiful pictures. Full supply ready for immediate delivery. The paper itself stands peerless among family journals, being so popular that of its class it has the largest circulation in the world! Employs the best literary talent. Edward Eggleston's great serial story is just beginning; back chapters supplied to each subscriber. Mrs. Stowe's long expected sequel to "My Wife and I," begins in the new year. "Unquestionably the best sustained work of the kind in the World."
Harper's Magazine.
NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.
The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has noticed the times, should cause the conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR
THE ALDINE,
An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest illustrated publication in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.
NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES,
THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of choicest, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original enterprise—alone and unapproached—unrivaled by without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume can readily duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shade or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES THE COST; AND THIS, TOO, IN THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!
ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.
The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is a mentioned fact that its wood-cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.
In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasure and refining influences of true art.
The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.
PREMIUM FOR 1874.
Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.
If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.
TERMS.
$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.
FOR 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.
THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

Daily Chronicle.

Madame McMahon.

Every afternoon between two and three a portly looking lady, with a kindly expression of countenance, with large blue eyes, and hair slightly tinged with gray, may be seen to leave the Executive Mansion at Versailles, leading a little girl by the hand, and devoting her attention immediately to a number of poor people who seem to have waited for her, and among whom she and her pretty little companion then distribute alms, addressing a few benevolent words to each of the recipients of their charities.

When the two, whom the most casual beholder will at once recognize to be mother and daughter, appear, the two sentinels present arms. They leisurely walk down the superb avenue, and move among the other promenaders in the most unostentatious manner, standing still every now and then, and exchanging a few pleasant words with acquaintances. But for the glances which most of the passers-by send after the lady, you would believe that she was the wife of some government employee—perhaps a deputy in the National Assembly; for she wears a simple black dress, and her bonnet, although of faultless shape, can not have cost many dollars. And yet she is at the present time the foremost lady in France, the consort of Marshal McMahon, President of the French Republic.

The career of this eminent lady, although the papers have had very little to say about her, has nevertheless been eventful, and in her present exalted station, notwithstanding her quiet, unobtrusive demeanor, she is known to exert a momentous influence upon the decision of her husband. The latter admires pluck, and it may be truly said that he has a most plucky wife. Indeed, it was an act of heroism on her part that first attracted his attention toward her.

It was on the first of December, 1838, at an advanced hour of the night, that a fire broke out in the female seminary of Limoges. The flames spread with such rapidity that the fair young inmates could be rescued only with the utmost difficulty. At last, when all of them were believed to be assembled, shivering in their thin night dresses, in front of the burning edifice, the cry resounded suddenly, "Louise de Bailly is still in the building!"

The lookers on stood as if petrified, and the firemen did not venture to enter the house, which now looked like a fiery furnace. Poor Mademoiselle de Bailly was already given up as hopelessly lost, when all of a sudden a tall young girl, with her blonde hair hanging loose over her shoulders, and her deep blue eyes flashing out the heavenly fire of inspiration and indomitable courage, rushed from among her terrified young sisters, and exclaiming, "I will try to find her!" ran toward the burning building.

A thousand voices shouted, "Do not risk your life thus foolishly!"

Others prayed for "dear Heloise," who thus recklessly risked her own life in order to save that of one of her young classmates. But none of the warning exclamations deterred the heroic girl from her purpose. In a few seconds she had entered the front door, undaunted by the blinding smoke and the flames that were momentarily gaining ground.

For the spectators of this thrilling scene this was a moment of supreme suspense. The strongest hearts quailed when the heroic girl did not immediately return. A minute, nay, two, elasped, and minutes under such circumstances are eternities. But all at once her white night-gown appeared in the door. Yes, it was she; and by the hand she led the missing, terrified Louis de Bailly.

Such a shout as went up from the hearts of the relieved crowd! Such praises as were showered upon the brave young girl!

But she herself was half ashamed of being thus feted. "Mon Dieu!" she exclaimed, "it was enough for me to ascend that stairway; it was not yet on fire. Only the smoke troubled me a little. Had I waited a minute longer poor little Louisee would have been lost."

At the reopening of the seminary, a few months later, M. Sarreguin asked Mademoiselle Heloise to step forward, and presented her in the name of King Louis Philippe, a handsome gold medal for saving a human life, and praised her courage and devotion in eloquent terms of enthusiasm.

The girl thus honored blushed deeply, and when the hall in which the opening ceremonies were held resounded with heartfelt applause, Mademoiselle Heloise was more confused than at that memorable moment when she had rushed into the flames.

Among the spectators on this occasion was a young officer of the garrison of Limoges, who seemed to be deeply interested in the heroine of the day. He asked what her full name was, and was told that she was the daughter of M. Antoine Gilbert de Morin, Seigneur de Valleau.

This information made the inquirer somewhat thoughtful. Perhaps the fact that M. de Morin was one of the wealthiest and proudest noblemen of the surrounding country had something to do with this.

Captain McMahon (that was the name of the young officer,) however, was not much disturbed by this information. True, he was then but a captain in the French army, and had nothing but his pay to depend on, but then he had excellent prospects of once becoming rich; his family was as old, if not older, than that of Heloise's father and a French soldier always has a marshal's baton in his knapsack.

How he managed to get acquainted with Mademoiselle de Morin we cannot tell, but certain it is, when the young lady, some time afterward, was told by her father that he had selected a husband for her, she startled him by the announcement that he might save himself that trouble, and that she had already made her own choice.

The old gentleman was at first astonished, and then became furious. But his daughter briefly told him that she wanted no one but Captain McMahon, of the Fourth Regiment of the Line.

And now began a curious struggle between the exasperated father and the determined daughter. Notwithstanding the efforts of M. De Morin to intercept Heloise's correspondence with her lover, frequent letters were exchanged between the two; and when Captain McMahon was sent to Algeria, they pledged themselves to remain true to one another. This separation lasted three years, until 1842, when McMahon, who had greatly distinguished himself in Africa, suddenly fell heir to considerable property. This softened the obdurate heart of M. De Morin, and in 1844 Heloise became the wife of Lieutenant Colonel McMahon.

She accompanied him to Africa, and wrote from thence to the Gazette de France a series of anonymous sketches on Algerian life, which were favorably noticed by the critics, and which, oddly enough, were generally attributed to a distinguished officer of the French army.

In 1849 Madame McMahon returned to France, where the successive deaths of her three children almost broke her heart. She took up her abode at her husband's property, Sully, near Autun, and lived in the deepest retirement, from which she emerged only after the Crimean war, when her husband's gallantry had made him the most popular general in France.

She moved into a modest house with him in Paris, avoiding as much as possible to come in contact with the imperial court, for which she entertained an invincible repugnance, partly, probably, on account of the Empress and her surroundings, and partly too because having been brought up amidst all the prejudices and hauteur of the old aristocracy, she could not bring herself to relish the parvenus that ruled supreme at the Tuileries.

On one occasion, shortly before New Year's, le jour d'etrennes, she met the Emperor Napoleon the Third while walking with her two children through a large Parisian toy store. The Emperor was piqued by the coldness which the duchess had displayed toward his court, and he adroitly tried to conquer her aversion. Taking her children by the hand, the autocrat caused them to select the most superb toys, until she finally interfered, and said to the Emperor:

"Sire, your kindness is unfortunately useless. What will my little ones do with these beautiful things in Africa, whither I shall take them to-morrow, and rejoin my husband?"

The Emperor bit his lips. He had failed in his purpose to conciliate her.

It is needless to recapitulate here the events of the next few years. Like every true daughter of France, Madame McMahon suffered intensely. The news of her husband's defeat at Woerth prostrated her so that her life was despaired of; and when she returned to Versailles after the war she looked ten years older, and her hair had assumed a silvery tinge. Those who know her best say that she has an excellent heart, that she is nobly ambitious, a generous foe, endowed with considerable literary talents, keen-sighted in politics, and a fervent Christian.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 92.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

The United States Constitution went into operation in 1789. By the constitution each State has two Senators. If as large in population as New York, which by the last census had four millions three hundred thousand, or as small as Kansas which had forty-two thousand four hundred, the number of Senators is the same.

In the first Congress, which commenced in 1789, New Hampshire had three Representatives. By a new apportionment made for the third Congress in 1793 our State was entitled to four Representatives. The eighth Congress commenced in 1803. By the apportionment then, this State had five Representatives. This was the number till the fourteenth Congress in 1815 when New Hampshire had six Representatives. This was the highest number. In the twenty-third Congress in 1833 it was five. In the twenty-eighth Congress in 1843 it was reduced to four. For the thirty-third Congress in 1853 it was down to three Representatives, the same as in the beginning of the Government.

The nation is expanding in the West. States there are becoming many, some of them having a population of one million, two millions, or two millions and a half. The eastern States increase but slowly. New Hampshire in the last decade lost 7,773. It is not likely, therefore, that the State will again have a greater number of Representatives in Congress than now. Let it always be sure and have men of talent and good influence there.

—Mrs. Pern, of Delta, Iowa, believing that "Blest is the bride whom the sun shines on," postponed her daughter's wedding four times in order to get a bright day. The bridegroom then astonished her by sending in his formal resignation to the daughter.

A Southwestern Slangwhanger Longs to Lapse Into Patagonian Barbarism.

A paper in Lafayette County, Missouri, which has gained some notoriety by its imitations of Brick Pomeroy, opens a jeremiad of several columns in this fashion:

Oh, for the wings of a dove, a wild-goose, or a buzzard, that we might fly away, and be at rest among the Fejees, the Hottentots, or some other nobler and better race than our own braggadociously-enlightened barbarians, our own boastfully Christian heathen! Oh, that we might trade off our mulatto-strumpet goddess of liberty for the queen of the Cannibal Islands, or any similar wenchly potentatess! Oh, for a roosting place among the Kickapoos, Caribs, or New Zealanders! Pagans as they are, they have never yet wallowed in the mire of Credit-Mob-o'-Liar robberies and custom-house frauds; or sounded the fathomless infamous depths of Presidential tumblebuggery, nepotistic cormorancy, office-peddling, and universal dead-beatery. Oh, for a lodge amid the sun-scorched blackamoors, of the Niger and Zambesi, or the tawny savages of Polynesian archipelago! Tattooed missionary-eaters as they are, they have a million moral leagues in putrifying damnation yet to sink, before they reach the Nadir of degradation, rottenness and shame—the low, low, bottomless level of our Christian patriots, heroes and statesmen! Ransack all their dark and gory caverns; puke out the last slimy reptile from their hideous dens of cruelty, rapine and lust; and you'll find no parallel for the beasts that prowl, and the deeds that are done, in all our counsel chambers, our social halls, and the temples of our Lord! They have no pillage-made-millionairey Senators like Harlan, Sherman, Chandler and Cameron; no back-pay pirates, like Comingo, Voorhees, King and Blair; no perjured, bribe-stained, grinning, Sunday-school-haranguing Vice-President, like Colfax; no penitentiary-pardon-brokerage, fifteen-cent-buyable, poor-kin-appointing, county-bond-swindling, "reform Democratic" Governors, like our peerless Woodson (for not going into short splitting ecstacies of rhapsodizzical jackassery over whose nomination, the Caucasian was solemnly and forever excommunicated from all party fellowship and good standing, by at least three dozen obscure little rural newspaperial nincompoops, to each, any, one, or all, of whom, to be struck by an original idea or an independent thought, would be as certain death, as a mule-kick or a stroke of lightning on their trouser-seats)! Oh, for a dwelling on Patagonia's frigid shores, where shaggy-haired Goliahs welcome the ship-wrecked stranger to warm and spacious soup-kettles, and each hapless guest supplies the shin-bones for his hospitable entertainers' broth. Oh, for an arbor of gourdvines on the torrid banks of Nyanza's or Ngami's flood, where the gentle Bushman dines on his grandmother and nibbles his own liee for dessert! Benighted and beastial devil-worshipers as they are, they have no white-sepulchre, pharisaic Beechers and Talmages, saintly guide-posts on the turnpike to damnation, preaching heaven and practicing hell; no long-faced hypocrites, groaning over other men's sins, in amen-corners, on Sunday, and dabbling in multifarious villainy all the rest of the week; breaking the body of Christ in the sanctuary, and cracking the bones of their brethren in the office, market, shop, and store; sipping the shed blood of the Savior at the altar, and, vampire-like, draining the last drop from the hearts of their victimized fellows at the counter or desk; no Missouri Democratic Legislature; no Louisiana carpet-bag hellionisms; no South Carolina nigger Supreme Court, and law-grinding menagerie of buck baboons; no sstrap reconstruction and constitutional bedamnedments; no pantry-rifling, grave-plundering, cock-eyed Beastie Butlers; no ulcerous fiend-inspired Leper Mortons; no blasphemy-palsied, hyena-froth-souled, hell's-head-light Brownlows; and no swarm of lousy, itchy-handed, beggar's brat, royalty-aping Grants and Dents! All these are the home products, the peculiar luxuries of this enlightened and enchristianed Yankeeddidledoodle land! Oh, for a home, where the Bengal tiger wooes his dusky mate, with vibratory tail and jungle-frightening serenade; where the Indian mother tosses her chocolate-colored cherub to the crocodilian god; etc., etc.

The Reformed Gambler.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Once upon a time there came to Pokerville a genius of the stripe commonly known as the reformed gambler.

Now, as the Pokervillians had no other amusement than playing poker or seven-up, when it became generally known that an individual was coming that way whose avowed purpose was the demolition of those popular institutions, and consequently the destruction of the town, through the annihilation of the very "industry" upon which its existence depended, there arose a great excitement, and preparations were made to give him a warm reception. A meeting was held, at which the people attended in mass, and the prospect for the new light of reform was anything but encouraging.

Notwithstanding all this—or, perhaps, because thereof,—the hall which had been engaged for the lecture was crowded with an expectant throng, who had gone there for the express purpose of mobbing the exponent of nassvory truths.

Among the assembled wisdom was the head deacon of Pokerville, who never played cards except for "fun" (with a nominal stake, "just to make it interesting, you know"), and who had such a rooted antipathy for card-playing in general that he never had a compunction against skinning anyone of 'em when it did so happen that he was induced to take a hand.

The speaker stepped upon the rostrum, punctual to the moment, dressed in an ordinary suit of the pepper-and-salt mixture, with short, stubby hair, and a very red nose.

In proceeding to his lecture he threw down upon the table a pack of ordinary playing cards, and deliberately rolled up his sleeves and spit on his hands, at which demonstration curiosity so far got the better of indignation that the murmuring and scraping of feet subsided, and the lecturer knew, by the general craning of necks and the firmness with which each listener clenched in his teeth his individual "chaw" of tobacco, that he had 'em where he wanted 'em.

The proceedings were opened by a "pra'r" by the deacon, and to hear the "amens! and "O, Lords!" which gurgled from the stomachs of the listeners, one would have supposed a prayer-meeting was in progress; but this is the way they always did in Pokerville.

The lecturer went right into the bowels of his subject. He traced the origin of cards back to the father of sin, and said the first victim of the pasteboard was Esau, who gambled on his patrimony at the game of euchre, and who was so dead-broke in consequence that he was glad to accept of a free lunch at the hands of the victor. He was down on cards of all kinds, as a general principle, and he had ascertained that the new-fangled "postal cards" were only devised as an instrument of offensive warfare in the hands of duns; he was down on them, too.

But first he wished to explain to his audience the means by which so many were skinned of their little piles, and was willing to bet there wasn't any man in the room that he couldn't beat, no matter what the odds might be against him.

There was a general crowding forward toward the rostrum, and pretty soon the table was heaped with the money of betters. Trick after trick was then explained, but somehow, although everybody "saw it," no money was seen to return to the pockets of those who ventured it. On seeing their cash disappear at the end of each fresh experiment, they would scratch their heads, as if in some perplexity, and then go over to hold a conference with the deacon.

The hour of his departure having at last arrived, the great reformer took up his hat, stuffed his "lecture" into his pocket, and was about to leave, when the deacon rose to his feet and requested the indulgence of the lecturer, as he had "a few words to offer."

"Although most of the folks here present," he said, appear to consider they've got their money's worth, I ain't quite satisfied myself, and though I'm dead set against gamblin', I wouldn't mind enterin' into a trial of skill with my friend here and if I'm beat it may be concluded that the knights of the pasteboard are done in Pokerville.

The great reformer being ready to accommodate, the two sat down at opposite ends of the table, the crowd gathered round, and for some moments nothing was to be heard but the thumping of the deacon's fist, and the scratching sound of his fingers as he raked in the cash.

The great reformer began to look sickly and when he got up again to leave it was observed that his features did not wear that pleasant smile which had overspread them at the earlier stage of the evening.

"Now, deacon," said one of the original sufferers, "there's about twenty of us in for it, and I guess you may as well divide up."

"In that case," said the deacon, "the force of this great moral lesson would be utterly lost. 'The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away.' Let us pray."

Since then it is dangerous for a greenhorn to pass through Pokerville.

A Funny Mixture.

[Baltimore American.]

I have purchased a billiard table. My wife says it is a good thing to have in the house, and prevents our boys from spending their evenings away from home, and lounging in saloons or bar-room.

The table being a new thing, is immensely popular in the family, and as our connection is large and friends numerous, it is seldom that I get a chance at the balls. By the by, I wonder why everthing about balls, has such a fascination for human kind, and why everybody is after them, of some sort or another. There are race balls and inauguration balls, pawnbrokers' balls and billiard balls, cannon balls and nursery bawls, and I once knew a widow Balls, who had more offers of marriage than any spinster or widow of her age in the country.

My brother-in-law, who fires over the way from our street, frequently comes over to play a game of billiards. He never played before we got our table, and did not care much for it at first, but now, since he can carom on the red and white, and make a run of two, he is incessant in his playing, and we have hard work to stop him at bed-time. He like all other fancy players, insists upon knocking the balls right and left for an hour after the game is finished, and the lights are ready to be put out. Indeed, so pertinacious is he that we have jocularly named him Mrs. Gibbs, after the historical lady who owned a sow that required beating to get it to the trough, and beating to get it away.

A few evenings since, my family having gone to the theatre, and I detained at home by a cold, I sent the following note by a new servant to my brother-in-law:

"My Dear Mrs. Gibbs—Susan has gone to the theatre, the coast is clear, and we can have a good time. Come over at once.

"Ever yours, M. Y. FULLNAME."

Instead of delivering my note on the east side of the street, he handed it on the west side, where, as it was a plain sheet of paper not sealed, it was carefully read and returned to the bearer, with advice to take it next door, where the same process was gone through, until it had been perused by every domestic circle in the block.

Finally, a neighbor told the servant that Mrs Gibbs resided in blank street No. 159, two doors from the corner of another street, which place he soon found, and joyfully presented the note to. Mrs. Gibbs who was enjoying a quiet evening with Mr. Gibbs, surrounded by all the little Gibbses, and several inquiring friends, who all wanted to know the contents of the note that Mrs. Gibbs was blushing over and telling the man she did not understand.

Imagine Mr. Gibbs' surprise when he had read it, and the sorrowful look that overspread his countenance while gazing upon the partner of his bosom and the mother of his eleven children.

Mrs. Gibbs could not explain, and the new servant complicated the case by saying that the lady he was after was a gentleman, which determined Mr. Gibbs to put on his hat and come over. Mrs. Fullname had returned from the theatre when he arrived, note in hand, and over a social glass all was satisfactorily explained and settled. But, alas! the numerous curious eyes in the other street that had glared upon my note next day spread the report that poor Susan Fullname was neglected by her husband, and that poor Mr. Gibbs was suing for a divorce.

Time, that kills all things, is killing and curing the rumor; but although nine days are over, I do not dare to pass the Gibbs mansion or to look at Mrs. Gibbs when Mrs. Fullname and myself are together in public.

The Great Issue in Congress.

[Graphic.]

But, as Mr. Pierrepont says, "If is certain that the great issue in Congress will arise between those who are in favor of a paper inflation (closing their eyes to certain ruin in the future) and those who are in favor of gradual resumption and certain prosperity in the future." If Congress fail to take measures to secure a speedy resumption, if it tries to tide over the present emergency by a further inflation of the currency, this financial question will go over to the people, and form one of the organizing elements of a new party. But if the republican majority meet the occasion with a wise and sound financial policy the future of the party is secure.

—A young man who professes to have traveled says that the only difference in the whiskey of the two principal cities of California is that, after taking a drink of Sacramento's chain lightning, you quickly make a short cut to the railroad and go to sleep on the track; whereas, after imbibing a little of San Francisco's bottled insanity a burning desire takes possession of you to steal a horse and buggy.

—In view of the cheapness of Sandwich Island whiskey, and the consequent uncertain tenure of King Lunalilo's life, he has been earnestly urged to designate a successor to the throne.

Business Notices.

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, &c., will certainly yield the great alterative effects of the VEGETINE.

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard medicine of the Western Hemisphere. Boasts the most extravagant, fabrications the most preposterous, cant the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the field with that famous vegetable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general restorative, and a specific for indigestion, billious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints to which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of unscientific pretenders than the everlasting hills by the winds that rustle through their defiles.

An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pellets, from their cleansing and renovating effect upon the digestive apparatus, makes him feel decidedly better. CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.: I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily for it through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Snuffs and Lotions are only temporary relief. The CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY strikes at the root, building up the constitution, makes it new, and drives every trace of Catarrh and all diseases of the mucous membranes and their attendant pains and aches, pertaining to head, back, shoulders, kidneys, and throat.

Price $1 per Bottle. Sold by all Druggists. A Pamphlet of 32 pages, giving a Treatise on Catarrh, and containing innumerable cases of cures, sent FREE, by addressing the Proprietors,

Local Matters.

Right is Might.

Messrs. Editors: The communication from "Blessed Music's" pen carries us back to school boy days, when, if we got into a fracas with one of the boys and found him more than our match, our big brother would step in and help us out. So it seems that if we guess rightly, "Musicus" has a big brother, who steps in and makes a bold front in behalf of "Musicus" by calling "Music a Blessing" bad names, etc. Now we do not propose to call names or try to throw what is termed the laboring oar on "Musicus" or his big brother, but rather propose to discuss the question in a fair and upright manner:

"Blessed Music" states that we have done our local teachers injustice. We beg to differ, and if we do not sustain ourselves, are willing to be set right, and without calling on relatives to help us out. And we would state here, first of all, that we don't propose to write up or down any person's reputation, as we have no relatives in the music business—nor do we claim to make much of a hand at it ourselves, as our living is not obtained in that direction, and we think we have not shown the least feeling in our communication to the Journal.

We have not questioned the ability of any of our teachers of music, "Blessed Music" to the contrary. Only in this particular branch we state that it requires talent, and we are willing to abide the action of the school committee as to whom they may employ to teach this new branch of study in our schools. There are teachers of music here whom we have the highest regard for and believe them successful in the particular branches they teach. The fact that one of our local teachers has brought out quite a number of our best organists is to his credit, and we do not question but that he is as well qualified to teach the organ, piano, thorough-bass and harmony as could be desired; but with all due respect, we may question his ability to teach the young, as he has not made it a speciality, and his make-up may or may not be of the right material. He may have, with many of our local teachers, all the business he can attend to, with far more remunerative results than could be obtained in teaching music in our schools.

We claim that the school committee, in the course they have pursued, have given music a new impetus in our midst, the benefit of which will be realized by all our local teachers. When the committee decided to introduce this branch of study in our schools, the first question to be decided was as to who could be obtained as teacher to make the work a success. The present teacher was not appointed until after a careful investigation of her past experience, and success, which fact was well established in the minds of the committee before she received the appointment.

The correspondence through the papers has not been of her seeking and has proved very unpleasant and distasteful to her. She came among us with a desire to do all in her power for the advancement of the interest of music in our city, and is willing to relinquish her position any moment when the committee is convinced that local talent can be used to as good advantage and more general satisfaction. We think that "Blessed Music" misjudged our motives in his communication. Our talents are varied; some can plough and some sow—but we all may rejoice and join in the grand chorus, "Harvest Home." If we have done any one of our local teachers seeming injustice, we beg pardon, wishing them now as ever the height of success, and shall do all we can to sustain in the future as in the past this beautiful science in all its branches, believing in MUSIC A BLESSING.

Newcastle.

Orders have been received to discharge on the 15th all the men and abandon the works at Jaffrey's Point and also at Gerrish's Island for the rest of the year.

For some time past students of Andover on exchange have helped to fill the desk at the Congregationalist church. The discourse last Sabbath by Mr. Smith was good and instructive. At the Advent house there was no preaching.

The subject at the Christian chapel was: "Thy will be done." It was presented in a different light from that in which some of us use it in our supplications. Next Sunday the desk is to be occupied by an old acquaintance who has been long known by his every-day life. B.

Laconics.

Hampton has voted to purchase such a lot of land for a High School as will comply with a provision of the will of B. Dudley Emerson, late of Roxbury, Mass., who has given to the town $17,500, as a fund.

The Concord Monitor speaks in a very complimentary manner of a temperance address made there on Sunday evening by Dr. Chas. A. Norton of Portsmouth. The Universalist church was crowded to overflowing. The Monitor says: "The fact that the whole audience gave him strict attention during its delivery, and were sorry when he concluded, speaks for itself. He is very happy in his manner, and follows close on the heels of Gough in his power to portray the drunkard's career."

That Old Relic.

Several papers have of late published the following: Among the old things in Portsmouth may be named the carpet on which Lafayette spilled some wine when he and Washington dined and wined there." It is not doubted that these great men used wine, as all did in those days. It is implied in the above that they dined and took wine together there. When was it? Lafayette was in this country in the war of the Revolution, but, so far as I know, not in Portsmouth. Washington was in Portsmouth but once, that was in 1789. Gen. Lafayette was in the United States the second time in 1824 and 1825. In the last year he was in New Hampshire and probably in Portsmouth. This was 36 years after Washington was there. Was the same carpet that Washington trod preserved, and did Lafayette spill wine on it? If so bring it out. But Portsmouth can do better in relics of olden time than this. J. F.

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new. E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders. D. H. MONTGOMERY.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SILAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will be all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

How He Went to Bed.

(Keokuk (Iowa) Gate City.)

A certain young gentleman in this city is what may be termed a sorehead—at least his head is somewhat sore. It wasn't occasioned by any disappointment in the pursuit of official honors and emoluments, but is the result of mistaking a patch of moonlight for a feather-bed. He went home at rather a late hour the other night, proceeded cautiously to his room, disrobed himself, and prepared to indulge in a little of tired nature's sweet restorer. Fair Luna cast her refulgent rays through the blindless window. The young man got a good ready, and gave a leap—not into bed, but into the patch of moonlight on the floor, which he mistook for the bed. It was difficult to convince the other inmates of the house that the building had not fallen.

—A tender-hearted little girl came in from the woods and showed a face covered with mosquito-bites. "Why did you not drive them away?" said the mother. "They would not go," said the child. "Why did you not kill them?" "It would not have been right," was the answer. "But I have seen you kill them at home," urged the surprised mother. "Yes, mamma," argued the child firmly, "if they come into my house and bite me, I kill them. But if I go into the woods, that is their house, and I have no right to kill them."

The Singer Still Triumphant

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, removing out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents, or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved to inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

"Unquestionably the best sustained work of the kind in the World."
Harper's Magazine.
NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators and well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—New York Globe.
The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with it, it has not, of course, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also enables them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874--SEVENTH YEAR.
THE ALDINE,
An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.
NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.
THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the hurry or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, high, and genial literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding issue offers a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—the lithely without competition in price or character. The possession of a complete volume of THE ALDINE gives the quality of fine paper and engravings in any one number, a value which it cannot FOR A TIME ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!
ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.
The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality will greater facility for production. The woodcuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.
In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best ordinary intelligence can set them up and run them. They are the most economical engines ever invented. One common scuttle of coal will do more work, of a better quality, in half the hours, other fuel in proportion. FULLY GUARANTEED. Daily Chronicle.

Henry A. Wise.

Henry Watterson tells what he knows of Henry A. Wise, in his paper, as follows: "There are men, and good men, too, who, by dint of incessant talk, manage prematurely to tire all listeners with really brilliant talk. Governor Wise belongs to this category. He has for years poured an overflowing stream into the popular ear, until, truthful and tart as his gabbling often is, it has a show, and perhaps only a show, of fatigue in it. He never knew the value of occasional reticence. A courageously imprudent man, with a glib tongue, he has always held himself ready to write, speak or converse on every topic, running along like a shallow mountain torrent, from politics to cooking, from philosophy to puns, with a pleasing, indiscreet disregard of consequences characteristic of Rambouillet's intellectual knights-errant of Hibbgostura. No man in America, not Governor Foote himself, has displayed a wider range of subjects or a more abundant vocabulary. He should have been an editor; for then the mantle of impersonality might now and then have enveloped and protected him.

"In early life Henry A. Wise stood for chivalry, and the first time he went out on the field of glory he plucked his man. It was old Cocke, of Virginia, and somewhere back in the thirties, with Love, of Kentucky, as his second. There was a deal of bickering among the friends before the principals were placed vis-a-vis, and Wise, numbed by the sharp morning air, and by nature nervous and excitable, was trembling perceptibly. Cocke saw this, and, mistaking it for trepidation, said to his second in a stage whisper intended for Wise's ear: 'I call you and heaven to witness that I am guiltless of this man's blood. Wise's eye flashed fire at what he knew to be a piece of deliberate jockeying, and he stammered out: 'B-b-by —, you b-better take care of your own blood,' and put a bullet through his body at the first fire.

"About that time it was that he pulled the nose of Mr. Speaker Polk. He was a rare bird in those days, with Baillie Peyton on one side of him and Sargent S. Prentiss on the other. Together they kept things warm and lively about Washington. Wise was one of the most devoted of the personal adherents of John Tyler, and led the little body of disaffected Whigs called the Tyler Guard, getting the offer of the French mission for his services. The Senate refused to confirm the nomination. He was then sent ad interim to Brazil, where his only enemy, Polk, coming to be President, permitted him to remain until he was succeeded, in 1849, by his old friend, Baillie Peyton. The event of his life, however, was his anti-Know-Nothing campaign of 1855. He took the field on his own hook, and made at Alexandria in the mid-winter of 1854-'55 a speech which was perhaps never surpassed for dramatic power—a speech which sealed the doom of the American party, opened the door to its secret lodges, and secured him the object of his ambition.

"Strangely enough, Governor Wise was not a success in the war. His friends attributed his failure to the hostility of the Richmond government. But this is not sustained even by probabilities. Excitable men, of undisciplined and eccentric self-assertiveness, rarely achieve military usefulness or honors. The famous Virginian is too astute, too redundant, too filled with his intellectual stuff, to get on in martial affairs. Yet, on the whole, he is doing good rather than harm to his time, and is perhaps less wrong in his opinions now than ever he was in his life before. An interesting figure, truly, and one that will long maintain a traditional existence after the actual stuff which composed it has passed away.

Sitting up With Her.

She was expecting him Sunday night; the parlor curtains were down, the old folks notified that it was healthy to go to bed at 8 o'clock, and Johnny bribed with a cent, to permit himself to be tucked away at sundown. He sneaked up the path, one eye on the dog, and the other watching for the "old man," who didn't like him any too well, gave a faint knock at the door, and it was opened, and he was escorted into the parlor. He said he couldn't stay but a minute, though he didn't mean to go for hours. She wanted to know how his mother was; if his father had returned from York State; if his brother Bill's rheumatism was any better; and he went over and sat down on the sofa so as not to strain his voice. Then conversation flagged, and he played with his hat, and she nibbed at the sofa tidy. He finally said it was a beautiful evening and she replied that her grandfather predicted a snow-storm. He said he guessed it wouldn't snow as the moon wasn't crooked enough to hang a powder horn on the end, and she said she didn't believe it would, either. This mutual understanding seemed to give each other courage, and he wanted to know if she had seen Bill Jones, lately. She hadn't, she said, and she didn't want to. Then they went to talking about the donation visit which was to be given Elder Berry, and he carelessly dropped his hand on her—his right hand, while his left arm sneaked along the sofa and got behind her shoulders. She pretended not to notice it, and he looked down at his boots, and wanted to know if she thought mutton tallow rotted out boots faster than lard and lampblack. She couldn't say, but she had an idea that it did. He had just commenced to lock fingers with her, when she discovered something ailed the lamp. She rose up, and turned the light down a half, making the room look dim. It took him five minutes to get hold of her fingers again, and she pretended to want to draw her hand away all the time. After a long pause, he lowered his voice to a whisper, and said he didn't see what made folks love each other. She bit her handkerchief and admitted her ignorance. He said that he could name a dozen young men who were going to get married right away, and his left arm fell down and gave her a hug. Then he went over and looked out of the window to make sure that it was or was not going to snow, and, coming back, he turned the light down a little more, and then sat down and wanted to know if she didn't want to rest herself by leaning her head on his shoulder.

Ah, me! We have all been there, and who of us cared a cent when the old clock struck twelve, and we five miles from home? The old man was fast asleep, the watch-dog gone a visiting, and the handsomest girl in the country didn't see why we need be in a hurry.

Perhaps I shouldn't have written of this, but as I was going by Saunders' the other day, thinking of the night I heard him whisper in her ear at spelling-school, that he'd love her very shadow as long as he lived, he raised the window and called to her, as she was picking up chips in the road:

"Sue Saunders, come in here and find the b'ar's grease for my sore heel, or I'll break every bone in your body!"

Readables.

The Boston Journal's Washington correspondent telegraphs that Secretary Robeson has ordered the immediate completion of the new sloops-of-war building at this naval station.

On the 7th inst. the Captain and thirty-six of the crew of the steamer Virginius were executed at Santiago de Cuba, and on the 8th, twelve more of the Cuban volunteers on the vessel were shot.

The democratic hand-organs needn't show quite so much astonished pleasure over their victory in Virginia. The democracy "carried Virginia" all through the rebellion.

The Massachusetts prohibitionists are under the weather.

It looks very much as if some of the Massachusetts papers were conducted in the belief that Gen. Butler will be Governor of that State next year unless they persist in abusing him steadily.

Seven persons were instantly killed and several injured by the explosion of a boiler in New York, on the 11th.

The wise course adopted by the city, says a Boston paper, in refusing the kindly offered pecuniary assistance from other cities is fully justified by the fact that a year after the event the special fund raised by our own citizens has a balance of nearly forty thousand dollars.

In giving—without comment—the history of the recent proceedings at Plymouth church in the case of its editor, the Golden Age prints the text of the charge on which these proceedings were founded, but "from motives of proper delicacy omits to give currency to the specifications."

The net earnings of the European and North American Railway, from all sources, during the month of September, were $70,000. The directors of this company, on the withdrawal of the Pullman cars from the day trains three weeks hence, place thereon new cars similar to the Pullman in arrangement, and nearly as convenient. The reason now given for the withdrawal of the Pullman is that in stormy weather their weight prevents the trains from making card time, and also that the Pullman Company bear no expense in running these cars, except in paying conductors. The directors say that the Pullman are more than double the weight of ordinary first-class passenger cars, and that the average number of people who ride in them is but six, thus making the company pay the expense of hauling what is equal to two and one-half ordinary cars for the accommodation of six passengers.

Another bank defalcation in New York has just come to light, the fact transpiring that on Tuesday last the cashier of the Security Bank of New York disappeared with $25,000.

Of the result of the recent election in Illinois the Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "The result of the election in this State is much better than we hoped. The republicans have not only held their own in the most of the counties, and that against vast odds, but they have made large gains in a number of towns, a thing not looked for in this comparatively unimportant election. It is very evident that the republicans of Illinois are the old stock and do not humbug worth a cent.

Running Lone Pine.

Lone Pine is a town in California. It can't be much of a town, but appears to be too big to be run by one man. George Watson had to leave it months ago, on account of some murdering he had done there. He made a tour of the mines under another name and came back to Lone Pine with a reinforced opinion of his ability to stay there, and some money in his pockets—the fruit of his wandering and thieving operations among the miners. He was in the habit of killing or robbing a man whenever he took a fancy to such amusement, and having been quite successful in these enterprises, he came back to Lone Pine with his arms and ammunition, announcing his intention to "run the town." His first act of government was to beat and nearly kill an inoffensive English-speaking Indian, because he was an Indian. The same evening, pistol in hand, he turned all the occupants out of a saloon, and, standing in the door, announced that he was able to whip any man in the crowd, and that if some one did not take him up and fight him instantly he would be under the necessity of shooting somebody. Just then he got a gun-shot through the heart, and fell dead, and the coroner was unable to find out who did it. That is the way George Watson "run" Lone Pine.

State News.

The only question of interest that involves political action in the State is: Does the prohibitory law promote temperance? As the law is not enforced in a majority of the towns, a majority of the legal voters of the State would unhesitatingly vote "No," were they allowed to answer the question at the polls.

Foster's Dover Democrat proposes the name of Hiram R. Roberts, a successful farmer of Rollinsford as the democratic candidate for Governor.

The Northern Railroad has declared a dividend of $4 per share, payable Dec 1.

One of the Lancaster papers says: We intended to publish a complete list of the births in this vicinity since our last issue, but we find we haven't room to do so and give our readers any other matter.

Now that Exeter is to have the Boston and Maine round house, a suit is threatened to recover money contributed to furnish a site furnished by Dover citizens. Also, to reimburse an aqueduct for money expended on this presumption.

F. P. James, a New York man, born in Deerfield, has just built a school-house for that town at a cost of a thousand dollars, and proposes to supply the district with money enough to keep a good school nine months in a year.

Proper Temperance Efforts.

The Pittsfield News has the following account of a temperence meeting there recently. The News is quite excited against the prohibitionists as the closing of the article plainly shows:

Tuesday evening the town hall was crowded with ladies and gentlemen to listen to addresses by Mr. Francis Murphy of Portland, Me., and Mr. J. H. Kent, of Portsmouth. Dr. Tenney called the meeting to order, and after a few appropriate remarks, introduced Mr. Kent, who vividly and graphically described his early career, —his struggles and triumphs in the cause of temperance and intemperance. Mr. Kent's address throughout was an appeal based on moral suasion, which carried the sympathy and conviction of the audience. Mr. Murphy was next introduced and delivered a long lecture, portraying his "real life" with such force and eloquence as to bring many a sobbing tear from the audience. Mingled with his dashing oratory, were now and then flashes of his native Irish wit, which swayed the anxious and attentive audience no less than his master arguments and glowing appeals. After the lecture a Temperance Reform Club was organized. Next came in order the pledge book of the N. H. Temperance Union, and eighty-two persons, including ladies and gentlemen, signed the pledge. Here a brisk and lively time followed as each person stepped up to sign his or her name. Applause and manifestations of approval from the audience endorsed each signer to the pledge. This effort to further the temperance cause in regaining unfortunate victims of intoxicating drinks by peaceful agitation, by kindly forbearance, by moral suasion, and by reasonably appealing to the heart and mind, is just the doctrine which we will favor and support. Down with prohibition and prohibitionists! they carry honey of heaven on their lips, and the fire of hell in their hearts. They are not fit to govern themselves, and much less fit to govern others, or dictate the policy by which the temperance cause should be managed. Give us temperance, sobriety, public order, good government, true religion, education, prosperity, coupled with moral suasion to beget and enforce them all.

Behaviour of Witnesses.

One of the witnesses in a case on trial in the Supreme Court at Bangor, the other day, being asked as to his relationship to one of the parties, undertook to be very precise and not to make any statement beyond his actual knowledge. What he knew upon that subject was hearsay. The Judge, who has no great love for wordy and irresponsive answers, mildly reprimanded the witness, and advised the young man, if he had occasion to answer that question again, to answer it directly.

This reminds a correspondent of the Bangor Whig of a scene in the Belfast court, where Mr. A. G. Jewett practices. He is very impatient at any behaviour of his own witnesses that puts them in a bad light before the jury. A middle-aged man, Mr. Jewett's witness, was asked as a preliminary question if the plaintiff was his father. The witness repiled in a drawling, swinging manner, "Wall, they say he is." Upon which the lawyer roared, 'Stop that, sir! Don't act like a fool. Do you not know any better than when you are called as a witness to begin by casting doubts upon your own paternity?"

In another case in Bangor a witness was asked to state a conversation, when he began: "It was in this way; it was one morning quite early, and had the appearance—" The judge hinted that when a witness began in that way he always expected prevarication. One of the veterans of the bar, in commenting upon the evidence, remarked that he had always observed that an honest and truthful witness stuck to the point and answered directly the questions put; generally remembered well what was material and was not disposed to wander from it in his answers; while untrustworthy witnesses are constantly dodging the material point and filling up the time by telling a great many truths not inquired for and entirely immaterial. Conscience troubles them and they get away from the troublesome point as quickly as they can.

The Sleeping Beauty.

[Nashville Union.]

We learn from the Hickman Courier that Miss Susan Caroline Godsey—known as the Sleeping Beauty—died at the residence of her mother, in Obion County, Tennessee, on the 27th ult. She had attained the age of thirty-one years, and had been in her sleeping condition about twenty-four years.

It will be remembered that her case has excited great interest, and gave rise to much investigation and discussion among scientific men. The true nature of her affliction, however, was never understood, and will doubtless always remain a mystery.

She was brought to Nashville in the fall of 1867, for the ostensible purpose of procuring medical aid, but was really in charge of an agent who contemplated making an exhibition of her. She was accompanied by a brother and other relations who were very much attached to her. While they were in Nashville they boarded at the house of Maj. Bruce, on Market Street, and the sleeper was constantly watched by Mrs. Bruce, who took great interest in her. she remained under Mrs. Bruce's care eleven days. While there she was visited by a great many persons, and had with her one or more physicians all the time. She awakened every hour, night and day, at almost the same second each time, and remained awake from seven to ten minutes. Just after going to sleep each time, she had convulsions that shook the room, and at such times she appeared to be suffering great pain.

When asleep she was dead to everything, but when awake talked pleasantly and intelligently, sometimes complaining of pain, and exclaiming: "Oh, my head!" and when she awakened she invariably asked for water, but ate very little. She said she had no consciousness of ever having dreamed, and that it was no pleasure for her to live afflicted as she was. She was very sensitive, and appeared mortified to think that she was being exhibited. Her affliction was inaugurated by a spell of chills. Some medical men have attributed it to the medicine she then took; others that the chills are precursory to her long sleeping state.

Upon leaving Nashville she went to St. Louis and remained there a short time. It is said that the physicians there unanimously agreed that she was an imposition. She soon returned to the house of her mother, and has remained there ever since.

The Sleeping Beauty is said to have been a truly beautiful woman—not so emaciated as one would think—and of shapely form.

Salted Wool.

It is a curious fact, and one of great practical importance in structural science, that in the salt mines of Poland and Hungary the galleries are supported by wooden pillars, which are found to last unimpaired for ages, in consequence of being impregnated with the salt, while pillars of brick and stone, used for the same purpose, crumble away in a short time by the decay of their mortar. It is also found that wooden piles, driven into the mud of salt flats and marshes, last for an unlimited time, and are used for the foundations of brick and stone edifices; and the practice of docking timber, by immersing it for some time in sea-water, after it has been seasoned, is generally admitted to promote its durability. There are some experiments which appear to show that, after the dry-rot has commenced, immersion in salt water effectually checks its progress and preserves the remainder of the timber. If care be taken to renew the coat of paint as often as it decays, wood on the outside of buildings may be made to last for centuries; paint, however, is no preservative against the internal or dry rot, notwithstanding the opinion so generally prevalent to the contrary.

Chicago Municipal Election.

We have already referred to the fact that the city government of Chicago, recently elected, was chosen by a combination of the German, Irish and other foreign citizens, aided by a portion of the American-born voters. It was, in fact, a victory of the foreigners on a question as to which many others sympathized with them. The real issue was that of prohibition; already the Germans had been offended by Sunday laws wholly contrary to their view of personal liberty; and it was feared, that the next step would be the prohibition of the sale of liquors, including ale and beer. What the full vote of Chicago is, we do not know, but the successful ticket had a vote of 30,000, and a majority of 10,000. On the part of the defeated party, it was urged that all alcohol is poison, and that 5 1-2 per cent. of it is just as bad in principle as 57 per cent. Those supporting the People's, or victorious ticket, based themselves upon the doctrine of the State Board of Health of Massachusetts, which declares that "the love of stimulants is one of the strongest of the human instincts, and cannot be annihilated, but only regulated by law when it encroaches upon the rights of others." The Mayor elected is one who probably would not have been chosen had not this issue been forced. As a fact in our passing history, it is worthy of note. The defeated party lost all by insisting upon everything; and the successful party are dubious as to the result of their victory in matters quite as important as the right to drink beer.

In the Tweed trial there was great amusement with Daniel Bradley, an Irish 7th-Ward stable-keeper. He said he attended to his own business. He read a letter about Tweed, and could not tell whether he voted for him at the last election for senator. He always voted the regular democratic ticket. He could not remember whether he attended Tweed's ratification meeting. He heard a good deal of talk among the neighbors, and he believes the talk was that Tweed and Green were in complicity in the frauds. The prosecution contended that the witness was too ignorant, or not candid. Judge Davis refused to disqualify him for his answers, saying that a man who took no interest in politics and always voted the regular democratic ticket did not always know for whom he voted.

From this day forth the Caucasian will be, in some respects, a changed paper. Its roughest features will be laid aside; its tone will be somewhat moderated. Its long-eared Pegasus will be reined in with a vigorous curb-bit. It will be as chaste as the icicle that hangs, curdled from purest snow, on Dinah's temple for a spit-curl. All the imaginary indelicacies which sensitive olfactories have sniffed in its columns will be forever banished. Sunday school superintendents may, without hesitation, recommend it to their youthful flock for Sabbath afternoon divertisement.

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of the Western Hemisphere. Boasts the most extravagant, fabrications the most preposterous, cant the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the field with that famous vegetable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general reconstructive, and a specific for indigestion, billious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints to which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of unscientific pretenders than the everlasting hills by the winds that rustle through their defiles.

An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pellets, from their cleansing and renovating effect up-n the digestive apparatus, makes him feel decidedly better. Twenty-five cents, by Druggists. 763

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1872.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and stranglings. I have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily for through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

The Odiorne's Point Monument.

Now that it has been fully decided to locate the monument at Odiorne's Point, near the site of the Manor House the place of all others best fitted for the location, suggestions of designs for the monument are being considered. The editor of the Historical and Genealogical Register sends us the following :

Editors Chronicle: In regard to the manner of building the super structure, permit me to give the suggestions of a gentleman of large experience, observation and sound judgment, who is much interested in this project. He suggests that the monument should be built of rough stone, not in great masses, but in such pieces as a man could handle. The beauty of such work is the laying the stones in good lines ; in bringing the stones together so as to make good joints not longer than ordinary brick work ; not in courses like the stone-stable on the corner of Fleet and Warren streets, Portsmouth. The corners should be turned by split stone to bind the whole together. The work of the whole monument should be of this rough stone, laid in cement ; a smooth space to be prepared on the base whereon to engrave the purpose of the monument. In other respects, the mark of a hammer ought not to be seen on the work any more than was the sound of one heard in building Solomon's Temple. The monument, he suggests, ought to be at least 100 feet high, without any interior opening, and surmounted by a globe. There seems to be so much good sense in my friend's suggestions that I take the liberty of sending them to you.

ALBERT H. HOYT.

Newcastle.

The lost Town Records are coming. The express company's agents in London received them and they were to be shipped, Oct. 31st, by the Cunard steamer for Boston. We give items from Mr. Starr's letter dated London, Oct. 24 : "It is gratifying to me, as well as to my friend Captain Bokenham of Cheshirst who has for many years had possession of the book, to know that it is to be at length restored to its proper depository, from whence so many years ago it was spirited away.

It adds greatly to our satisfaction to know that the long-lost Records will be heartily welcomed back by yourself and townsmen, after their wanderings for the greater part of a century, for it seems to us probable that they formed a part of the booty taken from your town by George the Third's men. I trust when once deposited in their ancient home again, no sacrilegious hand will ever be found to remove them, or that in the sad event of a war with any foreign power at a future time, the good town of Newcastle will be ready and able to protect itself and its property from the hands of the spoiler.

Captain Bokenham is unwilling to receive any compensation for the book, being only too glad of the opportunity—which he has never before had—of restoring it to its legitimate owner; and hopes it will be received as a token of good-will from Old to New England. R.

The "Life of Christ" Circus.

The attendance on the show at the Temple on Tuesday night was good,—much better than the show, as it were. The main stay of the entertainment was a panorama, served up in a number of courses, with song-and-dances, horizontal-bar performances, clog-dancing, etc., as side dishes. The athletic part of the show was very good, and so was the song-and-dance as far as it went, which was not far ; the clog-dancing, too, was tair, but was tamely performed on the level stage, instead of at the dizzy elevation of twenty-five inches above it, as advertised per handbill. The panorama reminded us of the patchwork quilt made by a child only seventy-four years of age and exhibited at the agricultural horse trot as a side-show every year, being made up of all scenes,—good, bad and indifferent, and representing all sorts of subjects. There were exhibited some of the worst-looking saints and angels we ever saw, and the worst-looking "Columbia ;" some very good German and Irish landscapes, etc., and a few astounding whaling scenes, in one of which a remarkable sperm whale (who is amusing himself by swallowing a whale boat end on and has got fully three-quarters of it in his mouth,) is decorated with a magnificent pair of upright ears, "allee same one big jackass." Altogether, the grand combination of two shows in one is not to be sneezed at.

S. J. Court.

On Wednesday, the case South Hampton vs. Fowler, on trial since Tuesday of last week, was argued and given to the jurors in the afternoon.

Petit jurors were called and sworn, as follows :

Charles C. Barton, David J. Page, North Hampton; Henry Knowlton, Northwood ; John Dame, Nottingham ; George A Perkins, Ward 3, Portsmouth; Daniel H Spinney, Robert C. Sides, Ward 2, Portsmouth; Wilson S Abbott, Raymond; William J. Holmes, Rye; Ephraim D. Chase, Sandown, Emery Brown, Seabrook ; Frederick B. French, South Hampton; John N. Howard, South Newmarket; Samuel Campbell, Windham; Joseph H. Whittaker, Atkinson; James C. Crombie, Auburn; John W. Smith, Brentwood; Edmund Sleeper, Chester; Elisha Quimby, Danville; Elbridge G. Webster, East Kingston; Joseph Emerson, Epping; Alvin Wiggin, Exeter; David Sanborn, Fremont.

Assigned for trial—to-day (Thursday,) Calvin Page. Adm'r of Geo. G. Brewster, vs. Lewis W. Brewster et al, Ex'rs of Charles W. Brewster.

Music Be Blessed.

Music as a science is by no means abstruse. Minds of ordinary calibre have been known to grapple with it quite successfully. The system of notation is essentially the same, whatever may be the method employed in teaching it ; and is simple, mathematical and easy of comprehension.

In the meantime, have we any competent cordwainers among us?

Anxiously yours,

HITTY MCGINN.

Missing.

Miss Nettie B. Stevenson, a young lady of twenty years, who has been in a dependent mood of late, left the residence of Mr. Joseph Stiles on Hanover street, where she boarded, about daylight Wednesday, taking with her a night-dress, a water-proof cloak and shoes. Search is being made for her. Miss Stevenson is a dress-maker. No cause is assigned for her disappearance.

Laconics.

The snow that came Wednesday morning remained but a few hours.

Rumor has it that Job Jenness & Son, are negotiating for the purchase of the Island Ledge House at Wells Beach.

In spite of Joshua, the Times declares that all but three Portsmouth democrats will demand the repeal of the prohibitory law and the enactment of a license law.

The schooner Mary Remick, Goodwin, of York, went ashore on York Beach, Wednesday morning at 2.30. At 9 o'clock, half tide, she was entirely out of water, firmly imbedded in the sand, head to the shore. She had a few articles of freight, which was then transferred to the land without any damage. Efforts will be made to keep her from going farther on the beach. Commodore Howell has offered the use of the Mayflower, if needed. The vessel is over twenty years old and has no insurance. She is owned by Alexander Dennett of Kittery, George Donnell, Abial Goodwin and Josiah D. Bragdon of York, and James Alley of Lynn, Mass.

Headquarters at Portsmouth.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal sends the following abstract of the report of the commission appointed by the Treasury Department to examine the customs districts on the Atlantic coast. It will be seen, if the Journal is to be trusted, that the commission recommend the discontinuance of the Portland custom house, this being, according to the Journal, one of the small ports which have outgrown their usefulness since the introduction of steam vessels :

The commission recommended that the Atlantic coast be redistricted for customs use. They find that numerous small ports now in existence were established under the collection act of 1790, at a time when the chief commercial business of the country was done by sailing vessels. The changes in the commercial marine and in commerce generally incident to introduction of steam vessels have caused these ports to outgrow their usefulness, and they have now become to the Government a great expense without yielding a corresponding revenue.

It is considered that the efficiency of the customs service would be greatly promoted if these smaller districts were in many instances consolidated, and in the majority of cases abolished.

It is stated that three or four clerks are now employed at these ports to maintain the dignity of the customs service, where one competent man would be quite capable of doing the entire duty of the collector with even more efficiency than at present.

The special recommendation is made with regard to the State of Maine that the present fourteen customs collection districts be consolidated into three grand collection districts! The first of these districts, it is suggested, might embrace the country east of the Penobscot, with headquarters at Eastport; the second to include the region of the Penobscot and Kennebec rivers, with headquarters at Bangor; the third to comprise the remainder of the State, with headquarters at Portsmouth. The rest of the Atlantic coast might be similarly divided into large districts to the advantage of the customs service. It is represented that under the present system the office of collector is generally a sinecure place, the insignificant work of which is performed almost exclusively by clerks, and in many instances the collectors are engaged in other business and resident at different places. The collector thus receives fees and salary for services, which are performed by others.

The report concludes that if these officers were men of the highest capacity, which they are not, there is not enough business at any of these smaller ports to make them familiar with the duties of their positions.

A bill is being prepared designed to carry into effect the suggestions of this report.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of musical mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new. E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

Cranberry Sauce.

The entire crop of cranberries raised last year in the United States was nearly 300,000 bushels, of which New Jersey produced about one-third, and the remainder was divided among the States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Michigan and one or two other distant States. The crop of the Cape Cod plantation in 1871 was upward of 90,000 bushels alone, but, last year, owing to the ravages of the worm, it only reached 15,000 bushels. The present year's crop is estimated at 75,000 bushels, which is considered a fair average yield. The Western crop, which last year amounted to quite 150,000 bushels, this year, owing to various causes, is expected to fall off about one-half; while that of New Jersey will reach the figures of last year, namely, 100,000 bushels, and may over-run those figures.

A Model Wife.

[Philadelphia Press.]

"How do you get along?" said a wife to her husband, in the midst of the panic, "Oh, I shall weather the storm, but I wish I had only a few hundred dollars more." "Don't you wish you had married a rich wife?" said she, in a teasing way; then going to her room, she returned with rather more than the amount required in United States bonds. "Why, where in the world did you get this," said the husband. "Well, my dear, you went to a champagne supper seven years ago, and on your return finding navigation around the room rather difficult, deposited hat, shoes, gloves, and a large roll of bank bills on the carpet. I put the money away and waited three weeks for you to inquire if I had seen it, when, finding you were ashamed to do so, I invested it, and here you have it."

—Scene in a Western court: Judge—"Have you anything to offer to the court before sentence is passed on you?" Prisoner—"No, Judge; I had $10, but my lawyer took that."

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the models awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the same of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But internationally more, while in The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the Machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in reliability and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures a thousand ills, simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Obtains Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse." CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

"Unquestionably the best sustained work of the kind in the World."
Harper's Magazine.
NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.
The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has notled the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.
THE ALDINE,
An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Pictorial in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.
NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.
THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot fully estimate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shade or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!
ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.
The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.
In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to "THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.
The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.
PREMIUM FOR 1874.
Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.
If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.
TERMS.
$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.
For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.
THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

"A New Thing Under the Sun."
SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!
Never before was such an idea attempted for book illustration; every one who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,
Woman in Sacred History,
is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scriptural, historical and legendary sources, ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the
BRILLIANT OIL PICTURES
make it one of the most unique, original and remarkable books ever offered. The pictures, if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $32; while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with sumptuous bindings of the volume, can be had for one-fifth of that amount. The book is making a tremendous sensation among the agents and salesmen, because it is absolutely NEW, and "has money in it." To get pleasant work and good pay, send for terms, circulars, &c., to J. Stotesbury's Stove.
[Phila. Sat. Press.]

When Stotesbury was a bachelor, he boarded with a Mrs. Smiley, a landlady who lived in a very large house, the upper rooms of which were, for the most part, empty. As the cold weather came on, Stotesbury concluded to buy a stove with which to make himself comfortable. His room was very small, but he purchased the most diminutive stove he could find. It certainly would not hold more than a couple of quarts of coal. Everybody has seen such stoves at the stores. There was no stove-pipe-hole in Stotesbury's room, so he had an aperture punched in the ceiling, with the intention to use the pipe-hole in the vacant room above. He got about fifteen feet of pipe, and when it was fitted below, and run through the floor, he went up to put the end in the chimney. He was surprised to find that the vacant room also had no stove-pipe. It must be in the attic room above. So he bought twenty feet more pipe, cut another hole in the ceiling, and, after fixing the sections on, he proceeded to the garret with the intent to run the pipe into the flue. Imagine Stotesbury's anger when he found that there was no hole in the chimney up there, either! In a fury he went down stairs to examine the house from the outside to discover just where the chimney was situated. He found that it was over on the other side of the building. Then he bought forty feet more pipe, cut a hole from the attic-room to the entry, from thence to the other attic, and then ran his pipe all the way across, and at last got it safely into the chimney. There was so much pipe and so little stove that the stove looked like a mere excrescence on the end of the pipe; the draught was fearful, and sometimes when the wind was high it would draw the entire bed of live coals up out of the stove and shoot them out of the chimney with terrific force. Crowds of people used to gather around Mrs. Smiley's house on windy nights to watch the chimney belching forth red-hot stones and ashes in a way that would have made Mount Vesuvius ashamed of itself. Stotesbury used up two tons of coal a week in an effort to supply the volcanic eruption with fuel. One night, however, so Stotesbury tells us, there was a hurricane and as soon as it struck the flue of Mrs. Smiley's chimney, it drew Stotesbury's stove into the pipe, turned the pipe wrongside out, and lifted the whole concern up through the chimney. The next morning passers-by were amazed to see seventy-five feet of reversed stove-pipe standing on top of the chimney, with Stotesbury's stove at the end swaying about with the wind. This is Stotesbury's narrative. We do not vouch for it. We only know that he was educated to believe that lies are wicked.

Gail Hamilton as a Naturalist.

It appears from the following contribution to Harper's Bazar, that Gail Hamilton is a very clever observer and reporter of the proceedings of our small brethren of the insect world—and also that she wears a number seven thimble. She was in Augusta this summer, and this is what she saw:

Resting on a rock by the road-side one afternoon, I noticed a little fellow something like a beetle, but apparently not a beetle, digging away for dear life. He was making a hole, and he worked at it with a very comical energy. His slender little claws—antennae, or whatever you call them made—the dirt fly, and when the heap was so large as to obstruct the entrance to his gallery, he leveled it with admirable swiftness and skill. Sometimes he went in head first and pawed, and sometimes he went in tail first and shoved. The size of the pebbles which he lugged out was surprising—one you could not get into a number seven thimble—and the persistence with which he tugged and toiled over his load was amazing. When the gallery was apparently finished he flew away. Soon a wriggling was observed in the grass two or three yards off, and there appeared our bug riding a big brown locust three or four times as long as himself. This locust proved, however, to be dead or very much demoralized. The bug was striding his neck, and dragging him along by main force. When within a foot and a half of the cavern the bug left the locust, ran forward and examined the hole, trotted back and forth several times between the two, evidently taking measurements with his eye, made the excavation a little deeper, dragged up the locust to his grave, tilted him over the edge, and shot him in head-foremost! As he did not at once wholly disappear, the bug leaped in himself, dragged him down, then climbed out, shoveled in the dirt upon him, leaped in after it, and trod it all down snug and close around every part, till, by a laborious process, the hole was compactly and completely filled, the heap of gravel leveled, and no sign left of the burial but a patch of fresh earth. If I could have staid a little longer, I suppose I should have seen him put up a headstone with an epitaph, but I was obliged to go. It was as interesting a display of skill, persistence, and activity as one often witnesses; and I should very much like to know whether it was a foe that he was burying, or food that he was salting down for winter.

—A philosopher remarks that there is something peculiarly instructive in standing upon a street-corner in a large city, and watching the men all rushing around trying to make money, and the women all flouncing around trying to spend it.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1873.

Readables.

Gen. Burnside is likely to be chosen U. S. Senator from Rhode Island in place of Senator Sprague.

The case against the Kimball Brothers, publishers, of Auburn, Me., and Oliver Otis, the writer of an article that appeared in the Auburn Clipper, calling Judge Knowlton of the Lewiston municipal court "a muddle-headed manikin" has closed. Otis was sentenced to fifteen days in jail, Fred Kimball to ten days in jail, and William Kimball to pay a fine of $10.

The Albany Journal says that from the official returns it is quite probable that Hopkins (republican), for controller, and Platt (republican), for State prison inspector, are elected.

A defalcation of $45,000, committed several years ago, has just been confessed by the cashier of the Commercial National Bank of Providence.

Captain Joseph Fay, commander of the Virginius, was a native of Florida and 46 years of age. He entered the naval academy at Annapolis in 1844 and remained in the navy until 1861, when he resigned and entered the Confederate service.

It is said that all hope of disposing of the balance of the new government loan at 4 1-2 and 4 per cent., as contemplated by the funding act, is abandoned, and that the Secretary of the Treasury will ask Congress next session for authority to place the entire loan at 5 per cent.

Orders have been received at the Philadelphia navy yard to fit out the monitor Manhattan for sea immediately. A large force of workmen have been employed. It is understood that other monitors at League Island are to be made ready for sea at once. Orders have been received at the Brooklyn navy yard to get the sloop-of-war Kearsarge and the Juniata ready for sea at once. Under equally pressing orders, the torpedo boat Admiral Porter was launched, and will be ready for active operations in a few days.

The feeling of horror over the news of the execution of the Virginius prisoners is widespread. Franchi Alfaro offered the Spanish authorities a million dollars if they would spare his life. The Spaniards say that Alfaro was to assume the presidency of the so-called Cuban republic. The fact upon which our authorities will base whatever action they may decide on, is that the Spanish home authorities, at the request of our own, ordered that no more of the Virginius' crew should be executed. It was sent to Cuba, and received in ample time. If orders from Spain sent to Cuba in regard to persons claiming to be Americans are intentionally and cruelly disregarded, several Cabinet officers think it about time to compel the Spanish government to pay attention to decrees affecting the persons and property of those claiming American citizenship.

The result of a game of base ball played with ten players at Philadelphia, on Thursday, is reported to have been very satisfactory. It is thought that the change will increase the interest in the game and require more skilful batting. The tenth man played as a right short stop.

Those Terry Island people give repeated proofs that they consider the wear end of the world a sure thing. Mr. Terry, the proprietor of the island, and a prominent leader in the movement, settled his account with the tax-collector of Windsor Locks on Monday, and, as he did so, remarked that it was the last he should ever pay. These timeists are the best customers the Windsor Locks tradesmen have, for they make it an invariable rule to pay cash for all purchases, not wanting to leave any debts behind them. There has been no general begirs yet from the island, some of the faithful timeists still holding on in the expectation of some great developments. One believer from Hartford, who was there relying on the 5th of November, has resumed his daily avocations for sub-istence physically, and others will, no doub, very soon follow his very prudential example.

Mrs. Mary Crie, of Portland, recently went to Boston to have an operation on her teeth, and died in the dentist's chair at the office of a Dr. Eastman. She had taken but a small quantity of ether when she went into convulsions and died immediately.

Most American travellers throw away much of their reading matter at their journey's end. But in England at each station can be found a box fastened up, very similar to our letter boxes, into which the traveller puts his papers, books, etc. These are in turn collected by men who carry them to hospitals, homes for old men and women, and similar institutions where they are gladly received.

Elopes with His Wife.

[Lowell Times.]

Some years ago a man named John D. Gilmore of this city, was united in the bonds of matrimony to a young and pretty girl. The current of true love ran smoothly enough for several years, when a ripple appeared upon the surface. It resulted in his deserting his wife, and he took up his abode with another young woman named Follansbee. He lived with her about seven years, the wife in the meantime going to California, where, by some means, she amassed quite a large sum of money. A few days ago she returned to this city and bought out her first love. He became repentant, again renewed his vows to his wife, and became greatly attached to her and her money. Finally the pair started off for California one morning, without previously apprising their friends of their determination; met by appointment at the depot and enacted the strange scene of a man and wife eloping, the elopement being as real as though the parties had never been married and lived together.

State News.

Belle Colby, a little daughter of Newton G. Colby of Franklin, while standing near a perpendicular shaft running close to a partition in the Stevens mill, a few days since, was caught by the hair on the shaft, and her head drawn down with violence between the shaft and partition. Her father, a workman in the mill, seized the knife and severed the hair in a moment, thus rescuing the child from a shocking death. The scalp was started and the skin from one side of the face torn away.

The Beaver Mills of Keene, which cost $120,000, have gone under the hammer for $55,000.

The Belknap Mills of Laconia have been sold to John J. Lynes of New York on a mortgage.

Jonathan Currier of Hill, a man 85 years old, chopped wood too near a clothes line, which caught his axe and came near killing him.

A Free Trade Argument.

[New York Evening Post.]

The curious aspect of the present panic is the astonishment, perhaps not affected, with which protectionists find that their policy has failed to fulfil its promise. Year after year they have gone before the country with their panacea for "home industry," a protective tariff, which should stand a wall between the markets of this and other countries. Year after year this policy has grown in official favor and overcome every other consideration in the political economy of the United States. Finally, like the Irishman's horse that died just as he had got him down to the experiment of living on a straw a day, when this policy has so thoroughly controlled us that no other but the home market is available, suddenly that fails, and home industry exchanges protection for starvation.

Why are the cotton and woollen mills of New England and the iron furnaces of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey closing work? Why are the boatmakers, the carriage-makers, the manufacturers of wood, and, in fact, all the industrial enterprises, discharging their men? Because there is no market in which they can sell their wares at a living profit. The home markets have become overstocked through years of artificial prosperity, and when our markets are wanted they cannot be had.

It is impossible for a country to live entirely within itself. The time must come, sooner or later, when the home market, like the home production, fails. One year we want the surplus of other countries, the next year other countries want our surplus. But if by a prohibitive tariff, we shut others out of our markets, when we need other markets they are closed to us. We cannot sell our goods abroad always for cash, and if we will not take goods in exchange we cannot sell at all, unless at ruinous prices. We cannot always pay double freight for ships to export our grain and return empty. When the home market fails we must stop business and starve, reflecting on the benefits of protection to home industry.

Decline of Prices in New York.

[New York cor. Buffalo Courier.]

One reason why it must come is to be found in the redundance of labor and another lies in the general decline of prices and values that is taking place all round. The decline, although only barely perceptible in some things, extends along the whole line. Real estate, for instance, and especially the kind known as "fancy," would not bring within from twenty to thirty per cent. of last year's prices if holders were obliged to put it in the market, as many will have to do within the next three months. The few sales which have been made since the panic began were all at very low figures, in comparison with those of the summer, and it has become extremely difficult to sell a house unless it is absolutely sacrificed. Rents must, of course, come down when the value of houses falls. In the provision market a marked decline has also set in, though the benefit of it does not yet seem to have reached the poorer classes, whose purchases are all made in small retail stores. The decline in the wholesale market is from ten to fifteen per cent., and it will probably be a good deal more before January. The same is to be said of the wholesale dry goods market, where both domestic and foreign goods have fallen considerably, and most of the retail stores have gone through a general marking-down process to invite trade. The clothing dealers also offer goods at prices a good deal below those ruling before the panic, and now the hotel-keepers are reducing rates in a way that could hardly have been expected. I am told that rooms in the new Windsor which brought $100 a week when the hotel was opened are now offered at $70, and that a like reduction is going on in nearly all the large hotels in the city. The restaurants and boarding-houses, with a few important exceptions, still keep up the old rates, but their adoption of the declining scale is only a question of time, if the financial depression continues. It is evidently unwise, therefore, for trade unions to insist on the same high wages that were paid in prosperous times. All things are settling down, and labor will have to follow the course of other values.

—At a dinner party, recently, the Minister from Holland being asked, by a handsome young lady, if he could tell what the difference was between a tube and a foolish Dutchman, he won great applause by spontaneously answering: "One is a hollow cylinder and the other is a silly Hollander."

—Upon the "outer wall" of a female college at Clinton, Mass., one evening, was discovered conspicuously displayed, the sign: "Domestic Sewing Machines." Some of those specimens of total depravity known as college students did it.

—An negro woman was heard to exclaim: "Thomas Jefferson, you and James Madison come into the house, and bring Abe Lincoln along with you, or I'll reach for you, suah!"

What the Women Want.

[Catherine E. Beecher.]

Thus, if the brothers of a family seek either of the liberal professions, or wish as professors to educate their own sex, nearly one thousand colleges and professional schools are endowed for their preparation and future support. But as yet no such advantages have been provided for the sister of a family. There is not a real college for women yet in existence, though many take this ambitious name; for the distinctive feature of a college is independent professors supported by endowments securing such a division of care and labor as never can exist where an institution depends chiefly on tuition fees, and on the character of its principal, as is now the case with all so-called woman colleges. Even Vassar is no exception, its funds being all expended in building and apparatus. Instead of leisure for self-improvement and the advance of the given department, the lady principals of our higher schools have had to fit themselves to superintend classes in most of the college studies, aided only by poorly trained assistants, while often to this is added the charge of a boarding-house, involving debts and dunning for needful rent, food and furniture, and all the care of a family of teachers and pupils. It was such multiplied responsibilities that, in ten years, changed me from a vigorous, healthy woman to a helpless invalid. And many of our noblest woman teachers have met or are hastening to the same sad fate.

An Unexpected Answer.

The St. Louis Democrat relates the following:

During the progress of the trial of the case of Widow Matthews against the Elevator Company, in the Circuit Court yesterday, Colonel Slayback, counsel for the defendant, conceived the idea that one Murphy, a witness for the plaintiff, was a suitor for the hand of the widow, and on the eve of leading her to the altar. Getting Murphy on the stand, the lawyer endeavored to bring this fact before the jury, and this was the upshot of the examination:

"Mr. Murphy, are you any relation of the plaintiff?"

"No, sir, I am not."

"Don't you expect to be?"

"Such a thing might happen."

"Now, are you not going to marry her?"

"I'm afraid not."

"You are afraid you won't, eh! Well, now, don't you expect to marry her?"

"If my wife should die, and the widow remain single till then, such a thing might happen."

The jurors and spectators burst into a roar of laughter, and Murphy chuckled at the cunning manner in which he had drawn the lawyer on. The Colonel had nothing more to say on the matrimonial question.

The Irrepressible Small Boy.

It is well-known that the qualities for which the Small Boy is most remarkable are a sort of picturesque ingenuity and a devoted consideration for the prejudices of other people. In a little Boston office-boy we find an unusual development of them. While mourning, not long ago, his employer's absence, in a distant town, a delightful idea suddenly came to him: Why should the hours slip by so drearily all unlighted by genial and innocent amusement? That inventive and original Small Boy determined to grieve no more. From the gas-burner in front of the office-door he hung a dreadful effigy, with a black cap over its face, its throat gashed and crimsoned, a sword in one hand and in the other a small jug marked "Poison" in large letters. Then he advertised for feminine cooks and housemaids to apply at the office, upon the door of which they read this inscription: "Walk in; back in five minutes." Then hidden near, the Small Boy laughed with the careless, sunny glee of childhood as a crowd of excellent and industrious women screeched and fainted.

Too Much Democratic Victory.

The Pittsburg Commercial says: "The Bourbon victory in Virginia will cost that State millions of dollars in its deterrent effects on immigration and capital. Virginia has probably the greatest area of unoccupied land of any of the older States. Some of this may have been partially exhausted by severe cropping with tobacco, but much of it is in its primitive fertility. There are thousands of acres northeast and east of Richmond which will, with good culture, produce thirty bushels of first class wheat to the acre, yet year after year they are only producing nature's crop of weeds. Hardly any State in the Union has wealthier intrinsic resources, and none stand in more pressing need of those two great agencies of material development, money and muscle. But just so long as she chooses to fight her political battles on the miserable caste basis of Virginia for Virginians, just so long will the recreating and vivifying forces on which her future progress and prosperity depend, refuse utterly to wait upon her. The cant of shoddyism is certainly bad enough; but the insolent self-righteousness of Bourbonism is still more nauseous."

—A man entered a grocery store in a suburban town recently, and called for a half gallon of molasses. The attendant asked for a vessel in which to put the saccharine liquid, and the customer replied that he forgot to bring a jug, but suggested that his hat would answer every purpose. The dealer in West India goods was willing to humor the buyer, and deposited the sweetness-long-drawn-out in the tile, which to his astonishment he very soon found deposited on his own head, while a bare-headed man departed with the contents of the money drawer. This hat was felt.

—It was bad enough for the Boston Advertiser to say of Wilkie Collins as a lecturer: "The London intonation is noticeable in a flattening of the vowels." But it was worse when a Western compositor made it read, "a flattening of the bowels."

The Advantage of Advertising.

[Milwaukee Wisconsin.]

After the crash of '57, when everybody was almost scared to death and the croakers predicted that the country had gone to smash, a dry goods house was opened in this city which proceeded on the principle that in order to reach the hoarded money in the pockets of the people the proprietors must sell at very reasonable prices and advertise very largely. They worked vigorously upon this principle. Their brother merchants who did not advertise predicted that the new comer would be ruined as they paid too much for advertising. Nevertheless, they persisted. In a single year they paid five hundred dollars in gold to the Daily Wisconsin for advertising, and at the end of seven years they retired from business with a fortune of one hundred thousand dollars while the other merchants on the same street, some of them opposite their store had failed.

Question and Answer.

[Portland Advertiser.]

A demure citizen was walking down town one morning last week, when a stranger addressed him.

"Do you know where the post office is?"

"Yes," answered the Portlander affably, and walked on without further parley.

After proceeding for about ten steps he looked back, and enquired in his turn: "Why? Did you want to know?"

"No," replied the victim, with great earnestness, and then, the account having been balanced, the two shook hands gravely and walked off toward the Falmouth.

What Mrs. Hall Thinks.

A dispatch says that Mrs. Hall, widow of Capt. Hall of the Arctic expedition, represents to the Government in a written document that she believes her husband was murdered, and appeals for an expedition to bring home the body for examination, to see if it was poisoned. A medical examination by the chief surgeons of the army and navy has been made of Dr. Bessells, who attended him, and they both affirm that he is a good physician and gives correct details of the disease of apoplexy, of which he alleges Hall died.

—A Texas editor, whose midnight oil must have failed him just as he was going to press, prints the following energetic opinion: "The man who would water petroleum and sell it, would sneak into the palace of the king of kings and steal the gilding from the wings of angels. The sufferer could hardly have been more vigorous in his denunciation if he had caught somebody watering his whiskey.

—And now we hear of a meeting house in Dixon, Ky., which has a pig-pen under it, and the meditations of the congregation are disturbed by the scraping of bristly backs on the joists of the floor, while porcine grumblings mingle with the amens and suggests the parable of the devils cast out and the prejudice of the Jews against sausages.

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of the Western Hemisphere. Boasts the most extravagant, fabrications the most preposterous, cant the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the field with that famous vegetable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general remedy, and a specific for indigestion, billious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints to which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of unscrupulous pretenders than the everlasting hills by the winds that rustle through their defiles.

An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pellets, from their cleansing and renovating effect up n the digestive apparatus, makes him feel decidedly better. Local Matters.

S. J. Court.

On Thursday, the jury in the South Hampton case rendered a verdict in favor of establishing Richard Fowler's claim to his large enclosure and allowing South Hampton to hold a claim to the remainder.

The case of Calvin Page, Administrator of the estate of George G. Brewster, vs. Lewis W. Brewster et al., Executors of the estate of Charles W. Brewster, was taken up. This was an action of assumpsit. It appears that the late Charles W. Brewster gave to Miss Harriet Brewster, his sister, the following writing:

"PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 1, 1865.

I hereby promise to pay Harriet Brewster during her lifetime, Ninety dollars per year, semi-annually, being the interest at six per cent. of Fifteen Hundred dollars. The principal to be paid to her personally when she may require it, but to no other person. This obligation will bind my heirs in case of my decease, and release them from any obligation beyond her life time. CHARLES W. BREWSTER."

Mr. Brewster paid $45 every half year after that date until he died, Aug. 4, 1868. The defendants proved his will, finding his assets more than sufficient to pay his debts. They also paid Miss Brewster $45 Jan. 1st, 1869, and $45 more July 1st, 1869. August 9th, 1869, Miss Harriet Brewster made upon the defendants as executors, a written demand for the payment of the $1500. Two days afterward, the defendants paid to her and endorsed on the note the sum of $393.50. On the first day of January, 1870, they paid her $33.20. On the twelfth day of May, 1870, Miss Brewster sent a notary with the note to each of the defendants, and demanded payment of the balance of the $1500. Later in the same day, Miss Brewster died.

The defendants pleaded the general issue, that it was not the intention of Miss Brewster to collect the principal, that she frequently expressed herself as intending to refrain from doing so, because of friendly feeling to Mr. Charles W. Brewster and family; that the $1500 was put into Mr. Brewster's hands for investment in Concord Railroad stock—the plaintiff alleging that $500 of the $1500 was borrowed money and the remainder the proceeds from the sale of Miss Brewster's share of a house on Langdon street. The defendant also pleaded that the action was not commenced until Sept. 23d, 1871, fifteen days after letters of administration were granted them; that before the commencement of the suit they had settled their accounts in the Probate Court and distributed the balance due the heirs—the plaintiff replying that the writ was made and dated Aug. 23d, 1871, and served on the defendants Sept. 28th, 1871; and that the right of action of Miss Brewster existed in her favor at the time of her decease, and still survives, and that the action was commenced within two years after the original grant of administration on her estate. To this replication the defendants demurred and questions of law being raised, the full bench decided that the action survives and the executor of the estate of Harriet Brewster can maintain the suit. The agreement that these law questions should be transferred and on being determined the demurrer might be withdrawn and the case stand for trial by jury, either party having leave to amend pleadings, was signed by the counsel for plaintiff and defendants.

Judge William L. Foster, the presiding Justice at the time the case was transferred, again presides at this term. On the case being brought up for trial by jury, Thursday, Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett denied the truth of some of the statements in the agreement on which the case was carried up. Judge Foster said that were these statements untrue the counsel for the defendants should not have endorsed them by signing the agreement in which they were written; if the statements were true the case was plain enough without further examination. He then instructed the jury to find a verdict for the plaintiff, which they did without leaving their seats, mulcting the defendants in the sum of $1361. The counsel for the defendants demurred and the case was again transferred to the full bench.

In the afternoon, the case of Ballou vs. James was called. The former charged James with girdling his (Ballou's) trees in revenge for town-meeting peculiarities. Defence denied the suit impeachment.

Sad Case of Suicide.

The body of the missing young lady, Nettie B Stephenson, was found in the North mill-pond near the track leading to the Eastern Railroad engine-house, Thursday morning, about twenty-six hours after her disappearance. Engineer Ward observed what appeared to be a bundle of clothing in the water on Wednesday, at the place where the body was found, noticing it as the ice was broken there. He thought nothing more of it until, returning home at night, Mrs. Ward mentioned the disappearance of Miss Stephenson. Thursday morning, search was made at the place where he saw the clothing, and the body was found about a foot and a half under water, clad only in a night-dress, water-proof cloak, stockings and shoes. The cloak had floated over her head and covered it, giving the appearance of being a bundle of clothes.

One coroner being absent from Portsmouth and the other not to be found, there was delay in removing the body. W. Scott Stephenson married a daughter of Mr. Samuel Spinney, and Miss Stephenson had been on friendly terms with the family. Mr. Stiles, with whom she boarded, informed Mayor Marvin that Mr. Spinney had expressed the wish that the body when found should be carried to his residence at Christian Shore. We believe the law requires an inquest to be commenced before moving the body; but as Coroner Waittier could not be found until noon, having been visiting his patients when sought after, the Mayor ordered the removal of the body to the cheerless police station where a gaping crowd soon assembled to hear the particulars of the sad case, some being admitted to view the face of the deceased. Mr. Spinney, hearing of the disposition made of the body, soon appeared at the station, highly incensed and indignant that the person of the young lady who was such a favorite in his household, should have been conveyed to such a place, and that many people from mere morbid curiosity should be allowed to see her. The remains were taken to his residence at his request.

There is no clue which explains the cause of the suicide, other than that Miss Stephenson had of late been mentally depressed and seemed to suffer terribly from pain in the head. Mr. Stiles states that she would at times lean her head on her hands, complain of the distracting pain in it and moan with anguish. All who knew her speak kindly and respectfully of her, saying that she was good-hearted and conscientious. She was a member of the Court street Christian Church and had a sensitive organization, being so conscientious in all things that she indulged in self-crimination fearing that she did not live up to the standard of which Christ was the exemplar.

On the morning of her disappearance, two sons of Mr. Stiles heard her go down stairs about fifteen minutes after six o'clock, but did not know that she went out. Mr. Stiles noticed the tracks of footsteps in the snow, pointing westerly, when he swept off the sidewalk, but thought nothing of it until, breakfast being ready, Miss Stephenson was called, and no response being heard, her room was entered and the clothing she usually wore was found there. It is thought she must have passed many of the operatives going to their daily toil at the Kearsarge mills, it being too dark for any one to recognize her; that she crossed to the railroad and walked into the water, plunging through the thin ice and passing from the suffering of this life, let us hope to an eternity more merciful.

Some More.

Messrs. Editors:—"Music a Blessing," I see, writes you in reply to my former communication, that when he was a schoolboy and "got into a fracas with one of the boys and found him more than our match, our big brother would step in and help us out;" and reasoning from analogy, he assumes that I am a "big brother" and have stepped in to fight some little brother's battle. When I went to school and "got into a fracas with one of the boys" I always fought it out on my own hook, some how or another, and never allowed friends to interfere with my diversions, or myself interfered in theirs; so I object to "Music a Blessing" measuring my corn in his bushel. He says he does not "propose to call names, or try to throw what is termed the laboring oar on 'Musicus' or his big brother"—but I don't care what he does, I'm sure, so long as he don't come and sing to me.

He says he "don't propose to write up or down any person's reputation"—yet in his communications to the Journal he asserted that "a suitable person" to teach the rudiments of music (all of music that can be taught in public schools) to children could not be obtained in this city; and loftily rebuked "Musicus" for his "very faint idea" of "what comes within the category of fair play" "when he so boldly states that the new music teacher is no better qualified than are our local teachers." Most people would regard those and many other similar phrases used by "Music a Blessing," as indicative of a very earnest endeavor to "write up" one person's professional reputation and to "write down" others.

He further says, speaking of the lady teacher of the schools, that "the correspondence through the papers has not been of her seeking and has proved very unpleasant and distasteful to her." This is correct, undoubtedly; but for it she must thank only her self-constituted champion, whose indiscreet ardor led him to repel a purely imaginary attack (for neither "Musicus" nor I have said a word against her, either as a lady or a teacher) by a half-column of gratuitous insults to the other professional teachers of the place. It may be that the public teacher is indeed the only competent teacher in the city; but, if so, it is not proved either by the dogmatic assertions of "Music a Blessing" or by his faint show of attempts at reasoning. Yours truly,

BLESSED MUSIC.

P. S. Your neighbor, the Times, favorably notices the "musical" correspondence by saying that it is very dull reading, and adds: "We have been importuned to allow our columns to be used by the angry disputants, but have steadily refused to do so." Who "importuned" him to do anything of the kind, I wonder? Certainly not "Musicus" nor I, and probably not "Music a Blessing," who already had the columns of two papers open to him, and knew it. I can't imagine who the importunate individuals can be, unless they are the relatives of the "many prominent republicans" who used to go in procession to the Times office so often, and tearfully beseech the editor thereof to "rebuke" or "denounce" the CHRONICLE. Possibly the "importuners" are the "many prominent republicans" in person, under another organization.

Launches.

Lieut. Comdr. Yates of this city is ordered to the iron-clad Manhattan.

Thomas Gibney, who belongs in Chicago, fell a distance of twenty-four feet from the truss of the new railroad bridge, at Newington, Thursday. He was attend by a Portsmouth physician.

The captain of a schooner which arrived at Bangor from Portsmouth, last week, was welcomed by a deputy marshal, who wanted to know why he had caused an officer who had attached his vessel, on a claim for pilotage, to be ejected from on board just as he left this port. The captain was convinced that in these later days of telegraph, the "law's delay" referred to by one of the old poets is a thing of the past, and he succumbed to the powers with as much grace as possible.

Universalist Centennial.

The Universalist society is preparing to celebrate their one hundredth anniversary next Sunday. Rev. A. J. Patterson is to deliver a historical address, and other former pastors of the parish are expected to take part in the exercises. Morning and evening services will be held. Monday afternoon and evening will be devoted to a social reunion in the vestry.

There are many interesting incidents connected with the early history of the parish, and the old church will doubtless be crowded with people on the occasion.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of musical and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new. E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardiest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

MARY M. ABBOTT,

No. 17 Manchester Corporation.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 27, 1872.

The above lady is my mother. I am a painter by trade, and a member of the City Council of Manchester. Every word that my mother states is true.

JACOB J. ABBOTT.

Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Snuffs and Lotions are only temporary relief. The CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY strikes at the root, builds up the constitution, makes it new, and drives away Catarrh and all diseases of the mucous membranes and their attendant pains and aches, pertaining to head, back, shoulders, kidneys, and throat.

Price $1 per Bottle. Sold by all Druggists. A Pamphlet of 52 pages, giving a Treatise on Catarrh, and containing innumerable cases of cures, sent FREE, by addressing the Proprietors,

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion, it is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither run nor wash off.

Billiard Balls.

A billiard player, who is dissatisfied with ivory balls, makes in an English paper a suggestion which may be worth the attention of inventors:

"Every one who plays at billiards knows that occasionally the balls do not run true. They are made of ivory, and even when they are quite new the ivory is not of equal density throughout; and when they are old the external portion is much more dry than the internal, consequently the difference of density is greater, and the balls, especially when going gently, swerve from a direct course, the specific gravity of the different parts of the mass being different. It has often occurred to me that much better and truer balls might be made either of glass or steel. The weight might be made the same as those of ivory by having a hollow in the middle of the ball. It is well-known that a hollow sphere runs more truly and more evenly than a solid one. The specific gravity of ivory is to that of glass about as 3 to 4, to that of steel as 3 to 13. The hollow in a steel ball would thus be greater than in a glass one, and it would therefore be the superior to ivory for the purpose, and I wonder whether it has ever occurred to any one to try these materials. I do not think that glass of the toughest kind would be more liable to chip than ivory, and steel would be much less so. There is another point to be considered, the expense, and this I am convinced would be much less in either case. The experiment is worth trying, as elephants are getting scarce, and may be applied to better purposes than making billiard balls.

—A day before the execution, the chaplain at Fort Klamath was endeavoring to convert Capt. Jack, and seek rest for his soul. His remarks seemed to have an effect on the captain, who asked if he knew all about God and the happy land. The chaplain said he thought he did. "Well," said Jack, "you know all about Him; me give you ten horses you take my place to-morrow."

—A Western paper tells the story of a country woman who made her first attempt to get in the Court House yard through the patent back-action gate: She opened the gate, went through, as she supposed, and shut herself out on the same side seven times; then ejaculating "merciful sakes," climbed over the fence.

WILLIAM CRITCHLEY,
Agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the longest-tried merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in variety and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, sarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy, in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an from Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

[THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUSH," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

"A New Thing Under the Sun."
SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!
Never before was such an idea attempted for book illustration; everyone who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,
Woman in Sacred History,
is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scripture, historical and legendary sources. ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the make it one of the most unique, attractive and remarkable books ever offered. The pictures, if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $3, while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with sumptuous bindings of the volume, can be had for one fifth of that amount. The book is making a tremendous sensation among the agents and salesmen, because it is absolutely NEW, and "has money in it." To gentlemen of work, good pay, send for terms, circulars, &c., to J. B. SKETCH OF ITS ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY—THE "STRAWBERRY BANK" SETTLEMENT AND THE PURITANS—GORGES, MASON AND THE EARLY SETTLERS AS CHURCHMEN.

["M." in Boston Transcript.]

Rev. James DeNormandie of the Unitarian Church gave, on Sunday evening last, the second of the series of historical discourses which he is preparing on the religious societies of Portsmouth, and which will evidently embrace not only the religious record of the old settlement of the Piscataqua during two and a half centuries, in a more thorough, dispassionate and accurate manner than ever before given, but almost necessarily must embrace also much of the concomitant and concurrent secular history. This second discourse brings the history of the South (now Unitarian) Parish down to the erection of their first chapel—and the first in the colony—about 1638, and the election and institution of a rector, and the establishment of regular public worship.

In commencing, the speaker stated that "inasmuch as the South Parish for so many years embraced and directed all the ecclesiastical matters of Portsmouth—and not only Portsmouth according to its present limits, but all of Newcastle, all of Rye, and a part of Greenland and Newington; and inasmuch as all the persons who built the first chapel and formed the first congregation, built the first South Church, and formed its congregation; and inasmuch as the change from Episcopacy and Puritanism has seemed an inexplicable wonder to so many—its history can be understood only by a careful review of all its early relationships, even in things accounted purely secular."

And this Mr. DeNormandie is doing in the most thorough and satisfactory manner. And it was necessary and inevitable, that in the outset he must run directly counter to the generally accepted history and tradition so industriously and persistently written and taught by the Massachusetts Bay Puritans, and their successors and admirers, that while their own was a most saintly and godly colony, that of the Piscataqua was irreligious, ungodly and immoral. And on this occasion it was claimed, and clearly proven by abundant testimony of writers of antiquity and authority, that "the Piscataqua Colony was as devoutly and persistently encouraged in the interests of Episcopacy, as that of Massachusetts Bay was in the interests of Puritanism."

The first regular recorded settlement in the State.—which, notwithstanding all that has been said, appears to have been permanent—was made at Odiorne's Point (now Rye, three miles from Portsmouth), in 1623; and doubtless there were English dwellers here or in the vicinity for nearly or quite twenty years previous, for all the history of the time indicates this, and the earliest writers describing this little band of settlers in 1623, do not speak of or allude to the location as a new one. The number of these first colonists is not recorded, but they came furnished for a permanent settlement, as it proved to be.

The location was selected with good judgment, both as regards defence from the Indians, and the erection of salt works and fishing facilities. This settlement did not increase very rapidly in numbers for a few years, but it would seem had permanency and good success, for in 1626 we find David Thompson, its leader, buying one-half of all the goods sold in another plantation at a cost of £400; and in 1628 of a tax assessment for defence of the colonies along the coast, the Piscataqua settlements paid £2 10s, being the same as the Plymouth, indicating their relative importance was the same.

When Thompson left the Piscataqua to locate on an island in Boston Harbor, Edward Godfrey, afterward so famous at York, became leader. He had been a fellow traveller in Oriental countries with Captain John Mason, the great patron, with and under Sir Ferdinando Gorges, of New England, and especially of New Hampshire and Maine. Godfrey had been concerned with Mason in the east in procuring land patents, at great charges, hoping to fit them and their posterity to propagate the gospel and enlarge his majesty's dominions." He was not only "honorably entreated by Mason," but was afterwards appointed by Gorges one of the Council of Maine; so that he must have been a Churchman.

David Thompson, who at first had direction of the colony, was a Scotchman, and gave the name of Little Harbor to the adjoining water. The buildings consisted of salt works, the large house afterwards called the Manor House or Mason Hall, and a fort on the rising ground of the peninsular—the locations of which are all well known. The graveyard with its numerous stones, is still plainly to be seen, close by, but the stones have no dates or other inscription. It was the custom of the home country then, and adopted here, to bury the dead in the churchyard. And it would seem from the fact that the graveyard here was particularly sacred to these early settlers.

There is no reason to suppose there was at this time any other building answering to a chapel in the limits of the settlement, or near the graves. But it was natural to bury the deceased together. Moreover, Mason Hall, as the first union dwelling for the colonists at Odiorne's Point was called, would afford ample room for them to gather for their worship; and that they did gather there Sunday after Sunday, and read common prayer with as much regularity and devoutness as their neighbors of the Bay Colony assembled for their form of worship, admits of no question. Persons are wont to observe the worship of Sunday, and to miss their accustomed services more in the loneliness of a strange place at a great distance from their kindred and friends, than at any other time. You will not find a company, however small, journeying together for many days or settled in any place afar—if they have been frequenters of the sanctuary at home, but as Sunday comes on they will have some kind of devotions. You see this on board all steamers, and in the case of parties of summer visitors everywhere, and you will find it so in all distant settlements.

Now, notwithstanding all that has been said to the contrary, the colony at Odiorne's Point was composed of persons reared in and attached to the Established Church of England, and sent over by men who held that as one of the chief objects of their enterprise. November 7, 1629, the name of New Hampshire first appears in a charter to Mason, to be given to all this region; and under the securities of a new grant in 1631, Gorges and Mason renewed their attempts to increase the prosperity of the settlement, although there had been no returns for their constant outlay. In this year the original limits of what was afterwards named Portsmouth were decided, including the present city, Newcastle, and part of Newington and Greenland.

In this year also, 1531, Gorges and Mason sent over eighty colonists, all to be under command of Walter Neal, who is styled governor, and who the previous year had arrived and taken possession of the works at Odiorne's Point. Neal bore a commission from Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Mason and at once declared his preferences for the Established Church. Winthrop says Gorges and Mason wanted Neal to be governor-general of New England.

The colony, thus increased and encouraged, began works of a more extensive character. A fort was built on Great Island, where Fort Constitution now is; and coming up the river they built on what is now the corner of Court and Water streets what was known for many years as the Great House, to distinguish it above the Manor House at Odiorne's Point; and by reason of the rising ground from this spot to where St. John's Church now stands being covered with the wild strawberries, the settlement was named Strawberry Bank historically until 1653, and familiarly so to this day, while by the inhabitants of the neighboring towns. Portsmouth was long known simply as "the Bank."

Neal was agent for the lower settlement, at the Manor House, and Warnerton at the Great House, while Gibbons goes to that begun by the Hiltons up the river, at what is now Dover.

In the early provincial papers of New Hampshire, much testimony is preserved in regard to this fair Great House, and the grounds and cattle and the wide plantation attached to it. We have then at this date, 1631, three houses, by which we are to understand three settlements. Neal went home in July, 1633, and Gibbons and Warnerton took charge of the settlements until William comes over as governor in 1636 with some settlers and materials for the colony.

Two or three incidents during the administration of Neal will give some knowledge of him and the colony. It is related that he went on a journey of discovery to the White Mountains, which are described as the glowing style of modern tourists. They expected treasures and precious stones, and from something they found resembling crystal, they gave the ranges the name of Crystal Hills. At another time Neal and Wiggan met on a point of land up the river where the latter intended to begin a settlement, and was forbidden by the former. The angry dispute which ensued was about to be settled by the sword, when it occurred to each that it would be brave not to fight; and so the point of land was named Bloody Point—not on account of what actually happened, but what might have occurred in the event of the duel.

And just before Neal left, some trouble arose between him and the governor of the Massachusetts Colony. It was charged against Neal, that he did not call to see the governor of Massachusetts in Boston, on his way to England—a discourtesy from one governor to another; but Neal urged that he had not been well entertained the first time he was there; that letters he had written had been opened in the Bay, and except he were invited he would not call. The governor of Massachusetts protested his innocence, and that the letters were opened before they reached the Bay; but the incident shows that no papal inquisition ever exceeded the scrutiny of all persons and documents which came into the settlement of the Puritans. Winthrop says "the letters were opened because they were directed to one who was our prisoner, and had shown himself an ill-willer to our Government."

Thus early in the history, the criminations and recriminations began; and all because of the diverse interests and intentions in regard to the forms of worship. The Massachusetts Colony was determined to see nothing good in the Piscataqua Colony, because it was devoted to Episcopacy; and to exaggerate the immoralities of the settlers, as trying to prejudice the Government at home against the Puritans of the Bay, and as affording refuge to all who were banished from Massachusetts, and a welcome because the whole settlement at the Bank was on a level with her outcasts. While, on the part of the Piscataqua Colony, all the ill-feeling and contempt were quite as heartily returned, with even a more satisfied assurance of being the true Church.

Governor Winthrop says of Warnerton, that he lived very wickedly, in whoredom, drunkenness and quarrelling, and kept the Piscataqua men under awe of him—but, in fact, Warnerton was a favorite vice-governor, elected term after term. While Warnerton, trying to collect a debt of one of the Bay Colony, called him rogue and knave, and said that all were so on the Bay, and he hoped to see all their throats cut!

That Common Prayer was read in the Great House at Strawberry Bank, as well as in the Manor House at the lower settlement, is evident, not only from the interest Neal expressed in the Established Church, and because all the early agents and leaders of the settlement here, and Hilton up the river, had been chosen on that very account; but also from the fact that in an inventory of goods, in 1633, the mention of "one communion cup, a paiter, communion cloth and two service books, and again of one great bibb, twelve service books, of a flaggon" and a cloth for communion table, which were not the property of individuals but on the colony (each person would, of course, have his own prayer book), showing that religious service were not neglected and what was their character.

In 1634 we find Francis Williams appointed governor, a gentleman of good position and winning ways, and prominent in the subsequent affairs of the colony. A more regular form of government was now organized, with Williams at the head, elected annually, and Gibbons and Warnerton as assistants. The interests of Gorges were now chiefly confined to Maine, while Mason devoted himself to the Piscataqua settlement. But a series of discouragements attended their enterprises. There was constant enmity with the more flourishing colony in the Bay, on account of ecclesiastical differences; and the proprietors, not being here to look after their own interests, were subject to every annoyance and loss from their tenants. Gorges complains that the colonists would not attend first to husbandry, the original source of wealth in such an enterprise, and states that he sought thorough discovery before his own profit. The proprietors write of their constant outlays, and their agents here of their continued sufferings. But Gorges and Mason alone never lost heart in final success. Gorges, in defending his company and charter before the English House of Commons, says: "I have spent £20,000, and thirty years, the whole flower of my life, in new discoveries and settlements upon a remote continent, in the enlargement of my country's commerce and dominion, and in carrying Christianity and civilization into regions of savages." These are not the words of a man whose whole aim was trade without religion.

In the midst of these enterprises Mason died, in the winter of 1635, and the colony was left to its own resources and direction, and but little benefit accrued thereafter to the family of the proprietor, who had spent his life and fortune in its interests. In Mason's will we find instructions to convey one thousand acres of his estate here "for and towards the maintenance of an honest, godly and religious preacher of God's word, in such a church or chapel, or other public place appointed for divine worship and service within the country of New Hampshire; and also provisions for and towards the maintenance of a free grammar school for the education of youth."

The character of Captain John Mason is in every respect worthy of commendation. Enterprising and farseeing in business, unselfish and disinterested in his projects, unfailing in hope; and a stanch supporter of the Established Church against the Puritans; perhaps even more sectarian than even Gorges. So high was the sectarian feeling of that day, that the leaders of the Massachusetts Colony rejoiced at his death, as a proof of the Almighty's retribution upon the Episcopal settlement at the Piscataqua, and his favor towards the Bay Colony. Mr. DeNormandie regards it as a matter of regret (and the same is true, in a degree of Gorges), that no river, bay, street or point of land bears the name of Mason, a man who was so devoted to this settlement; and this is the more surprising, inasmuch as in one of the early divisions of the land by the Plymouth Council one of the twelve districts was called Masonia. Governor Winthrop writes that Mason "was the chief mover in all attempts against us, and was to have sent the general-governor (for all New England), and for this end was providing ships; but the Lord in mercy removed him, and at this business fell on sleep." Thus do prejudice and the misfortune of a sectarian education prevent us from any fair estimate of another's life or doctrine, a method of conduct not rare in our day, and reaching to a time wherein the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

As soon as the inhabitants of Strawberry Bank were left to their own direction, one of the first matters which came under their care was the erection of a chapel, and the more ample, permanent establishment of public worship. The Manor Hall at Odiorne's Point, and the Great House at the Bank, where common prayer had been read, doubtless, as regularly as the returning Sundays, for fifteen years, were not sufficient for the needs of a settlement, growing, slowly indeed, but still growing; and no community—least of all one gathered out of any religious sentiment—is long satisfied until it has a church where all may gather for public service, according to their peculiar belief. Therefore, "sundry persons gave and contributed money sufficient for the erection and furnishing of a parsonage house with chapel thereto united"—which were accordingly built on the present site of the Pickering or Goddard House, next the Universalist Church. This was about the year 1638, or a little later but before 1640, as Winthrop, in his history, early in that year says that "some gentlemen at the river's mouth had lately set up common prayer." A tradition has come down that Richard Gibson, the first settled minister of Strawberry Bank, preached in this chapel in August, 1638. For some time previous he had been ministering at an Episcopal society near Portland, and no good authority opposes the precise time of this tradition.

Mr. De Normandie concluded by citing some of the proofs that, in spite of the assertions which have been handed down, generation after generation and repeated by one writer after another, without examination and without reflection—that this was a business, worldly, ungodly colony, while the Bay Colony was a congregation of saints; yet it was the design of our founders to make this a branch of the Established Church as truly as the Massachusetts Colony was Puritan. And while our early settlers were not wanderers for conscience' sake, the religious element can be traced as distinctly as there, and for this the speaker turned chiefly to the authorities of the Puritans.

In the charter from the king to Gorges, in 1639, we find granted to him "full power, license and authority to build and erect as many churches, and chappelles there as Gorges and his heirs may deem meet and convenient, according to the ecclesiastical laws of the realm of England." In the earliest efforts made by the city of Bristol the first inducement held out is "to plant the Christian religion"—and that "the use of traffic, be it never so profitable, ought not to be fostered before the planting of Christian faith." And one of the first expeditions of Gorsnold that reached our coast carried with it a chaplain. Royal orders and instructions were issued requiring religious worship to be conducted as in the Church of England. Gorges' son Robert, who arrived in Massachusetts in 1624, to take superintendence of the churches, to the great dismay of the Puritans, brought with him a clergyman of the English Church.

One of the Puritan writers, speaking of one of the settlements on the coast of Maine, says: "Thus an Episcopal colony is terminated, and its anticipated influence to advance the interest of the National Church on our soil is hastily prevented." Again speaking of Hilton and his settlement, at Exeter: "Thus the Granite State commenced its existence, under the auspices of energetic and honorable proprietors, who purposed to give it the durable impression of Episcopacy as the efficient handmaid of royalty."

Again, speaking of the efforts of Gorges at colonization, we find "his great preferences to have it done by sons of Episcopacy, rather than by those withdrawn from its protection and rewards" Another royal character to Gorges says: "Our will and pleasure is that the religion now professed in the Church of England, and ecclesiastical government now used in the same, shall be ever hereafter professed, and with as much convenient speed, as may be, settled and established in and throughout the said province and premises, and every of them"

The speaker claimed that the evidence that it was the design of all interested to make this region an offshoot of the Established Church of England, is ample, voluminous and positive; from the expressed desire and determination of the Royal Government on one side, from the fears and accusations of the Puritans on the other. And the colonies of rival faith—the one at the Bay and the other at the mouth of the Piscataqua—were carried on, just as two rival parishes are at the present time. There was all the sectarian feeling, all the ecthusiasm, and—and that it must be so in matters of religion, but as it is always more in that than in other things—all the misunderstandings, the jealousies, suspicions, the misrepresentations and the criminations. Gorges and Mason were both stanch Churchmen, selected such for their colonies. They provided everything for the worship of the sanctuary. Neal and Hilton, Godfrey and Gibbons, Warnerton and Williams, were all zealous supporters of the Established Church, and in that faith they built the first chapel.

Our records, concludes Mr DeNormandie, begin after the chapel was erected—and we know only of its site—o, its size or appearance, nothing, but a simple frame building, doubtless, rude and poorly furnished for worship, we might think. And yet the worship, as of the Church of England always, proper, decent, orderly and precious to those who thought of their brethren at home engaged in the same familiar and time-honored ritual.

To this chapel we can easily fancy these fathers of our settlement coming, on Sunday morning; from Mason Manor Hal at Odiorne's Point, from the settlement at Bloody Point, and here and there from a house built beyond the safety of the inclosed and defended colonies—while the accomplished and scholarly Gibson read the order of morning prayer—the Lord be with you and with thy spirit.

The third discourse of this series will be given on Sunday evening, the 23d inst.

The Spring Campaign.

Hon. Chas. H. Bell of Exeter is developing great strength for the republican gubernatorial candidacy, and should Rockingham county be united in his support, Mr. Bell will carry off the honors easily. The nomination would have doubtless come to Portsmouth this time were it not for the decease of our honored Ex-Mayor, Horton D. Walker. Two years ago, Mr. Walker might have received the united support of this county had not our Exeter friends chosen to oppose him. Portsmouth republicans, however, while they would like to see Hon. William H. Y. Hackett the nominee next winter, will not endeavor to follow the course of the Exeter politicians and help send the nomination to another section of the State, but preferring Mr. Bell as their second choice, are prepared to show their desire for harmony and good feeling by polling a large majority for him should he be the nominee.

Albert R. Hatch, Esq., of this city, is likely to receive the democratic nomination, a result which the republicans of Portsmouth devoutly desire for the purpose of increasing their usual majority. Messrs. Bell of Manchester, Colony of Keene, and Roberts of Rollinsford are prominent candidates, but as party usage entitles Mr. Hatch to the nomination and he is supported by the old-liners who rejoiced in their hearts at rebel success a few years ago, he will probably be the democratic standard bearer. Hon. Samuel N. Bell of Manchester, John S. H. Frink Esq., of Greenland, or Hon. Frank Jones of Portsmouth would poll a larger vote and get some republican strength; but Messrs. Bell and Jones prefer little attempts at Congressional experience, perhaps, while Mr. Frink is not ambitious for defeat.

The labor reformers and liberal republicans seem to have dropped from public view and are divided so equally between the republicans and the democracy that their influence is an unknown quantity. The temperance organization is the only disturbing element at present in the politics of New Hampshire. Preferring to be leaders of a small organization rather than yeomen in the ranks of a victorious party, they will nominate some gentleman, reverend or otherwise, for whom their suffrages and that of all the malcontents they can gather will be given, and rank among the hundreds of voters classed as "scattering." Temperance men who mean to avail themselves of the best means in their power to help on reform will find in the republican nominee for Governor one whom they can support with consistency and satisfaction.

The Cuban Troubles.

The United States government will inform the Spanish authorities that if Spain cannot enforce its decrees in Cuba and insure the protection of American citizens, then the United States will be compelled to take the matter into its own hands and act decisively and with promptness. The President will give great prominence in his message to Cuban affairs.

One of the points about which there is much solicitude is the position of the Virginius when she was captured. The first despatch to Secretary Fish said she was captured six miles from the coast of Jamaica, while at about the same time a despatch received at the British legation said the capture took place in British waters. The commander of the Tornado, the captor of the Virginius, says the vessel was taken twenty miles from the Jamaica coast.

The President is restrained by the constitution and laws from making war on Spain by attacking her colonies All that can now be done is in the way of correspondence with the Madrid government. The official papers are to be laid before Congress for such action as may become the dignity of the nation in the vindication of its honor and the full protection of its citizens.

The Kansas has been ordered to Santiago de Cuba. In addition to this vessel and the Malvern and Manhattan, the iron clads Powhattan and Ossipee will also be ordered to active service in the North Atlantic squadron.

The war department will strengthen the forts in the Gulf, having already taken measures for strengthening and additionally garrisoning Fort Jefferson in Florida.

"THE SECRET OF SUCCESS IN WALL STREET." A neat little vest-pocket pamphlet under the above attractive title has just put in its modest appearance. It gives a concise statement of the various technical terms employed in Wall street business operations, the meaning of which is often so perplexing to general readers. Here we have explanations of the sphynx-like terms "long" and "short," "puts" and "calls," and other information calculated to put outside, wide-awake parties on the inside track of the mysterious Wall street. Hints and illustrations are given of the methods of operating for a rise or fall of stocks, and of the profits which may be expected to result from successful operations. There are few persons who do not occasionally see their way clear to a venture in Wall street, but they are deterred by the want of the necessary information. With this little volume in their hands the way is open to them, and they are told how to proceed. Persons engaged in business or living in the country and desirous of taking advantage of any turn in the market—at the present low price of stocks, for example—are told how they may invest their money and the returns that may be expected from a given investment. The authors and publishers of the present pamphlet, Messrs. Valentine Tumbridge & Co., Bankers and Brokers, 39 Wall street, may be communicated with at any time personally or by mail or telegraph, and all orders will be promptly and intelligently attended to.

Fall in Prices.

The Boston Transcript's New York special says:

The special sale of dry goods by Claflin & Co., was attended by 10,000 people. The average reduction of prices was twenty per cent., and much eagerness was manifested to make purchases. The salesmen were so busily occupied that many customers were disappointed. The sale, it is said, was the largest of the kind that was ever made in this country, and created intense interest in business circles. The value of the goods sold reached $500,000. Peake, Opdyke & Co. also conducted a very extensive special sale at greatly reduced rates, and another house opened 500 cases of goods to be sold at very low prices, having notified its customers on Monday that it would do so.

The best lines of domestic goods and prints sold at lower prices than since 1861. Such goods are marked down from 10 to 15 per cent. Imported goods are also reduced from 5 to 10 per cent. A. T. Stewart & Co., are inclined to meet the reduced prices. At their retail store, goods were sold at the same prices that Claflin marked them at. As the case stands it opens the speediest and safest solution of the money troubles. The money realized will go to pay the manufacturers, and thus avert the threatened disasters to the working classes. This fall in the prices of dry goods is the first intimation of a return to sound business. Dealers in other descriptions of merchandise must follow suit or they will stand but a poor chance of doing any business this winter.

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of the Western Hemisphere. Boasts the most extravagant fabrications the most preposterous, cant the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the field with that famous vegetable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general restorative, and a specific for indigestion, billious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints to which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of unscientific pretenders than the everlasting hills by the winds that rustle through their defiles.

Local Matters.

S. J. Court.

The case of the heirs of the late Captain Robert Norton vs. the Eastern Railroad, will probably be tried on Monday or Tuesday, after which Jeff. C. Rowe's suit against the same corporation comes on.

South Hampton

Pays the cost of the recent suit before the S. J. Court. Judge Foster directed a verdict for the defendant, and the council for the plaintiff has given notice of exceptions, and the case will be carried up to the law term. The land was originally claimed for a hundred years as a part of Salisbury, and subsequently for one hundred and thirty years has been owned by South Hampton, the ownership of the land having been reserved when Seabrook was made from this town. The right to cut grass, was sold annually by the town, as they claimed, but by some process Fowler seems to have spread his net over a portion of the land, and his claiming title thereto is confirmed by the jury.

Laconics.

Portsmouth has but 96 liquor dealers.

No quorum in the Aldermanic Board, Thursday evening.

Rye's new town hall will be dedicated next Wednesday.

A draft of seamen from the receiving ship Sabine were taken to New York, Friday.

Hon. Frank Jones has been chosen president of the New England brewers' association.

The receipts from customs at this port for the year ending June 30, 1873, were $23,216.78.

The postal clerks on the night Pullman trains between Bangor and Portland, on the Eastern Railroad, handle upon an average eighteen hundred pounds of mail matter on each outward trip, requiring an unceasing labor among the mail bags till the train reaches Augusta to get it properly assorted.

J. H. Foster has for sale a little handbook of 3000 words often mispronounced, in which the proper pronounciations are given. The school edition is sold for 35 cts. per copy; in cloth 60 cts. The work is prepared by Richard Soule and L. J. Campbell.

Miss Mabel Storer, and other juvenile members of ex-Gov. Goodwin's family, are soon to hold a fair at the Governor's residence, for the benefit of the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The young folks will be glad to receive donations in the way of fancy articles, etc., which may be left at their home.

The Pawnbrokers.

(New York World.)

One of the most certain indications of hard times is an increase in the business of pawnbrokers. These refuges of the poor and impecunious, when all other methods of raising money fail, were never busier than now. The Bowery offices of the Simpsons are thronged every day with poor people, whose appeals for more money than the clerks are willing to give upon the articles offered are piteous. Among the many callers are to be seen numbers of well dressed people, whom lack of employment has driven there, whose efforts to escape observation on entering and leaving are so palpable. At one of the Bowery offices it was stated that its business had increased nearly fourfold since the panic, and that the reports from other pawnbrokers indicated a similar increase.

The common difficulty of getting money for current use has been experienced by the pawnbrokers. The scarcity of money had forced them to reduce the usual amounts paid upon pledges. While the clerk was making this statement a little child handed up a bundle containing a frock and some under-garments, for which it begged the loan of $3. "I can't give you more than $1. 50," said the clerk, rolling up the garments and handing them back. The child begged in vain; so the poor little thing left the place sorrowfully, to carry the news to her mother, whom the clerk felt certain would send back for the $1. 50. "Some time ago," said the clerk, "I would have given $3, but now we have not the money to spare."

Soon after, taking a diamond ring, which must have cost $150, from a male customer, he offered to loan $50 upon it, "I can't get along without $75," said the man. "Can't give you more than $50," was the response. "Can't you let me have $60?" "Not a cent more than what I have said." The ring was finally left. Many similar instances were witnessed, and remarking the character of the various pledges offered, it was asked if there were not more household necessities and clothing pledged than usual. An affirmative answer was given, and it was stated that people seemed to be scraping up everything which it was possible to part with to pawn. "You can safely calculate," added the clerk, "that times were never harder, for we have abundant evidence of the fact every day."

—"Why," asked a governess of her little charge, "do we pray God to give us our daily bread?" "Why don't we ask for four days, or five days, or a week?" "We want it fresh," replied the ingenuous child.

A Cheerful Conductor.

Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.

A Nashville man had occasion to go to Memphis over the Northwestern road last week. There were but few passengers aboard, and during the night the conductor came and sat down by him. "Goin' to Memphis, are you, stranger?" he asked. "Yes, sir," said the Nashville man. "Mighty rough road, ain't it?" queried the conductor, with a yawn. "Very," was the reply. "Last time I went over this road this car we're in now was upset, and a man was killed to smash," said the communicative ticket-puncher, with another yawn. Then he added: "I've got the most reckless engineer on the road with me to-night, too; but I hope we won't have any accidents." "I certainly hope we will not," responded the passenger, with a feeling of uneasiness. "Well, I don't know as it would make much difference to you," said the conductor, cheerfully; "you'll die anyway if you're goin' to Memphis."

The Pressure for Inflation.

Unless all signs fail there will be brought to bear upon the incoming Congress a tremendous pressure for a substantial inflation of the currency, a forerunner of which is the continual presentation of this idea to the President by interested parties. Pennsylvania politicians appear prominent in this, and Judge Kelley is quickly followed by Forney, who say in his Press that he has advices from Washington, which authorizes him to make this statement concerning the President's views on the financial situation:

"The President is keeping his own counsels, but from the expressions of opinion he has hitherto given out it is reasonably certain that he will recommend some plan whereby there shall result a substantial increase in the volume of the circulating medium. The pressure from business men everywhere in favor of such relief is so irresistible that both the President and Congress would be constrained to yield to it, even if they believed that it is possible to get out of our difficulties by enduring further pinching and contraction."

—A little boy in the Bishop Scott Grammar School at Portland, Oregon, has composed the following essay on "Oxen": "Oxen is a very slow animal. They are very good to break up ground. I would rather have horses if they didn't have colic, which they say is wind collected in a bunch which makes it dangerser to keep horses than oxen. If there were no horses people would have to wheel their wood on a wheelbarrow. It would take them two or three days to wheel a cord a mile. Cows are useful to. I heard some people say that if they had to be a ox or a cow thev wood sooner be a cow, but I think when it come to be milked on a cold winter morning I think they would sooner be oxen, for oxen don't have to raise calves. If I had to be a ox or a cow I would be a heffer but if I could not be a heffer and had to be both I would be a ox.

—The St Louis Democrat says: "Our experience and the history of the past eighteen centuries incline us to the belief that no matter how well you treat a shot gun, nor how well you bring it up, it will bang the stuffing out of you the very first time it gets a chance."

—"Yes, take her and welcome," responded an Illinois farmer, when a young man asked for his daughter. "She's run away with a schoolmaster, eloped with a showman, shot a wild-cat, and whipped her mother, and the sooner you take her the better."

—"Madam, why were you not here before?" "I could not come, sir." "Were you not subpœnaed, Madam?" "Yes, sir; but I was sick." "What was the matter, Madam?" "I had an awful boil, sir." "Upon your honor, Madam?" "No, sir; upon my arm."

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new. E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL

CATARRH REMEDY.

To Messrs. Littlefield & Co., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N. H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, c okings and stranglings. I have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appe ite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

What Became of Jimmy.

Says the Denver, Colorado, News: Last spring a party of buffalo hunters, six in number, were camped at Two Buttes, about twenty miles from the present town of Granada, in Bent county. A man, known only by the name of "Jimmy," was their cook. Soon after eating breakfast on the morning in question all began to feel sick, and in a short while it became evident that the food they had eaten contained poison. They had recourse to tobacco tea, which caused them to vomit the poisoned food. "Jimmy" was suspected and watched. Recently he was seen to put some white powder, which proved to be arsenic, in the coffee. The scoundrel desired to poison the hunters to secure their outfit. The hunters made a target of "Jimmy," and when they were done with him, he wasn't of much use to himself or any one else. He was formerly a New York rough, and his bones are bleaching upon the arid plains of Southern Colorado.

—When a man milks a cow he should not attempt to smoke a cigar at the same time. A young man out in the country tried it, and got along well enough until he lowered his head and touched the cow's flank with the lighted end of his weed. The next instant himself and cigar were dreadfully "put out." The cow introduced about two tons weight into one of her hind legs, and then passed it under the milker's left jaw. When he ceased whirling around and myriads of stars had disappeared he said farming was the hardest work a man could put his hands to.

WILLIAM CRITCHLEY,
Agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for Diplomas of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-ONE (219,751) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It Increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Bos on Globe.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with it in the last three times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pile nics, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the amount of pure and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and general interest. Thus the subscriber to "THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject the publishers will select "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; each subscription must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exertion of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUSH," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

"A New Thing Under the Sun."
SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!
Never before was such an idea attempted for book illustration; everyone who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,
Woman in Sacred History,
is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scriptural, historical and legendary sources, ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the
make it one of the most unique, original and remarkable books ever offered. The pictures, if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $32; while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with sumptuous bindings of the volume, can be had for one-fifth of that amount. The best of making a tremendous sensation among the agents and salesmen, because it is absolutely NEW, and "has money in it." To get pleasant work and good pay, send for terms, circulars, &c., to J. COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no mesne will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

The Khedive.

[Washington cor. Chicago Tribune.]

The late Consul-General of the United States at Cairo, George Butler, is in Washington, and I have derived some fresh and interesting information from him. Said Pasha as described by Mr. Butler is a person of culture, speaking French with ease and English a little; fully educated at the Polytechnic School in Paris, and wearing the dress of Christian people. He is a shrewd and rich merchant, and not a soldier by propensity; and his income and the luxury of the court exceed the tales of Haroun al Raschid's splendor. He has an income of $110,000,000 per annum, or more than half as much as the whole annual expense of the United States Government, inclusive of the cost of the public debt. To keep our 50,000, or 60,000 office-holders, our army, our navy, do the public buildings, &c., requires $17,000,000 a month. And Said Pasha, who has no more subjects than there are citizens of New York State, has, by Mr. Butler's careful estimate, between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000 a month, or above $300,000 a day. He has twenty-seven palaces, all the corporate property—or that which with us would be controlled by corporations—in the country, and no laws whatever but what he can think of or will from day to day. He has four wives and a vast harem; and, being an unwise husband does not know all his own children; yet he is temperate and prudent, and still he is not happy. He wants to be a king; but the domination of Turkey sits upon his dreams like the gobbler on the full boy after Christmas dinner. Turkey is put above him by European treaty which dates back to 1840, and from the treaties of Europe—

"Whatever link you strike,
Tenth or tenth thousand, breaks the chain alike."

To neutralize Turkey, the Khedive has been for a long time conciliating Europe, and the power he sets most store by is Russia. The Consuls-General at Cairo are men of the first-class and the greatest astuteness, being really foreign Ministers without the name, as the Khedive is only Viceroy. Mr. Butler says he could have had absolute power, under this Viceroy, over the life of any American in Egypt. He was on such intimate terms with the Khedive that some of the complainers wrote to Mr. Fish that he was in that rich barbarian's pay. "But all," says Butler, "that he ever did for me was to give me steamers, yachts, a troop of horses, &c., when I wanted to entertain my visiting friends."

As an instance of Said Pasha's wealth, Mr. Butler relates that the Empress of France said to him in Paris:

"Viceroy, I should like very much to visit your Pyramids, but I cannot ride on a camel, and I suppose I cannot go there by any road."

"Your Majesty can go there either by railway or highway, as you like," said Viceroy.

When she went there, at the opening of the Suez canal, the Empress found a road made, twelve miles long, across the desert, lighted with gas, shaded all the way with transplanted trees, and half way on was a palace for her repose, with a second palace to entertain her at the Pyramids—all especially made for this one journey. And yet such is the kinship of the times, that when the Khedive attempted to renovate Cairo by taking stone from the Pyramids, he felt that the rebuke of the press and voice of Europe could not be withstood, and he ceased to disturb these useless conundrums. He is building an iron bridge across the Nile, English work, which will cost $12,000,000. The Suez canal cost him $100,000,000, and is only a partial success, as it fills up as soon as neglected, and the screw fleet to pass through it is yet small. Lesseps, its executor, Mr. Butler believes to be one of the ablest men in the world, and never with less than from half a million to a million of money lying up on deposit. The Viceroy is the owner of a narrow-gauge railroad from Cairo to Suez, seventy-six miles, and from Alexandria to Cairo, one hundred and thirty miles. He is now building up the Nile from Cairo two or three hundred miles. He has a navy, but his people are wretched sailors. He and his father have made vast sums of money in the slave trade, and his eunuchs for the harem come from the Blue Nile. Sugar, Indigo, tobacco and cotton are great staples of Egypt, and the people have no conception of the right of property, liberty or life.

"How many piastres do you pay the Khedive?" is the remark often addressed to a donkey-conductor or a mule-driver.

"So many."

"Don't you hate to let him have all that part of your wages?"

"Why," said the Egyptian, "he is our master. Why shouldn't he take it if he wants to?"

—A recent English writer says that drunkenness is an affair of climate; the people of all damp and cold countries are apt to drink more than is good for them, and a geographer might divide a map of the world into "temperate and intemperate" zones.

—A fellow in Iowa has made the best matrimonial investment of the season. His bride lately eloped with another man, and after two days returned with $700 picked from hispantaloons pocket. Husband number one is now on a spree with it.

—The Staats Zeitung used nine languages in which to summon the foreign-born population of Chicago to the polls.

The Cuban Troubles.

The trial of all prisoners taken on board the Virginius has been concluded. Only eighteen will be saved from death. Of these several are engineers or firemen, who were ignorant of the destination of the expedition. Four or five will be set at liberty, and the others will probably be condemned to the chain gang. Fifty-seven more of the captives were shot at Santiago on the 10th inst. Prompt action on the part of our government is necessary to maintain its honor and present the recurrence of such shocking tragedies. Congress will meet on the 3d of December, and there is no doubt swift retribution will be demanded. At a cabinet meeting, held Friday, the President adopted the most decided position. He informed Mr. Fish that he would not under any circumstances consent to go to Congress again, simply repeating the promises of Spain. He was sick and tired of that, and this time he must be able to report that Spain was controlling her subjects in Cuba and securing full and prompt obedience to the decrees issuing from the home government in regard to the lives and property of Americans, or he would ask Congress to authorize him to say to Spain that unless she immediately compelled obedience in Cuba to the decrees affecting the interests of Americans in the island the United States would at once take the responsibility of caring for them, and would protect them at all hazards. The President stated to the Cabinet that he had given Spain till the 27th inst. to enforce the decrees already sent. He had also prepared two paragraphs for his message, one in case Spain succeeded in enforcing her decrees, and one in case she found it impossible to obtain obedience. The latter would be accompanied with an earnest appeal to Congress to act promptly and decidedly; but he must have a clear and unambiguous answer from Spain before he closed his message to Congress. Mr. Fish finally agreed that a change in our policy was necessary in order to preserve our self-respect, and henceforth it is believed that the Secretary will stand upon the same ground as the President in regard to Cuban matters.

Secretary Robeson is well satisfied with the condition of the vessels of our navy, and prominent naval officers join with the Secretary in declaring our absolute fitness to meet, with American men-of-war and iron-clads readily available, the greatest emergency that may rise. So far as ordnance is concerned, the navy is in an efficient state, having on hand at the various navy-yards most of the ordnance which armed our vessels during the rebellion. It consists of 15, 11 and 9-inch guns, weapons of the most formidable character. While the President cannot declare war, he is determined to place the naval service of the country in such a state of efficiency that it may be ready for immediate use, should the present war-clouds assume such dimensions as to determine Congress upon making a formal declaration.

Should a rupture occur between the two governments, it will be the policy of the United States to land a sufficient force of men on the island of Cuba, which can be easily done under protection of our iron-clads and other vessels of war. It has been mentioned by prominent Cabinet officers that 10,000 men would in all probability be in excess of the number of troops required to establish, beyond a chance of failure, the authority of the United States in Cuba.

The Brooklyn and Franklin at the Charlestown navy yard, are fitting for sea. The Vandalia, being rebuilt can be launched in a month. The Plymouth is the only vessel at this station which can be got to sea in three months. The Marion will be launched in three weeks. The Kansas sailed for Santiago from Brooklyn on Friday, fully equipped. The Juniata sailed for the same port on Saturday. The Spanish frigate Arapiles is being repaired at the Brooklyn navy yard, and may be seized if war is declared with Spain. The Ossipee leaves in a few days from Newport with torpedoes for Santiago.

It is stated on official authority that while the present naval preparations do not mean war against Spain or Cuba, they are significant of the determination of this government to protect American interests at any hazard and to prevent in the future such massacres as those which followed the capture of the Virginius, and which shock the entire civilized world. Experience has shown that the Spanish government cannot enforce its own decrees in the Island of Cuba and therefore it becomes imperative on the United States to protect its citizens from Cuban ferocity.

The British government has instructed its consuls at Havana and Santiago de Cuba to watch the proceedings against the captives of the Virginius, as it has been informed that one of them is a subject of Great Britain.

The shooting of the crew and passengers of the steamship Virginius is commented on at length by the London morning journals, all of which express the hope that the executions will be avenged by the government of the United States.

—A Pensylvania lady softened the shell of an egg in vinegar, inserted the egg in a five-gallon demijohn, placed it in a hatching oven, and lo! she possesses a half-grown chicken in this curious coop. She proposes to raise an American eagle next year in a similar manner for the centennial exhibition.

—"Jury," said a western judge, "you kin go out and find a verdict. If you can't find one of your own, get the one the last jury used." The jury returned a verdict of suicide in the ninth degree.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 15.

The near approach of Congress is bringing in the advance guard. Thanksgiving will keep most of the members at home who can get here on Saturday after. It is conceded Blaine will be speaker, McPherson Clerk, Boynton Doorkeeper. Some one from the South—probably Peirce of Mississippi—Postmaster, and generally that Ordway will again be elected Sergeant-at-Arms. He is popular with the old members, and though he has two or three competitors and the Washington Ring against him, he will have an easy victory unless some new and very strong man enters the list to divide his friends. Few men could have fought the Washington Ring as persistently and boldly as he has, and have survived it, when there are so many who want a good office, and are so easily put in the field. His enemies concede he is one of the best officers in the position, and a hard subject to attempt to get out. The first thing to be looked for after the organization of the House is a struggle for the floor, to see who will get in the first motion to repeal the Salary Bill, or to take action on the complications with Spain on account of Cuban barbarities and open acts of war.

The organization of the Committees of the House is always a matter of difficulty, and more so now than ever. Its leading committees are tainted with Credit Mobilier connexion, and to remove those members is to bring some of the most experienced men in the House into concerted opposition to the Speaker; and to leave them in, is to offend the sentiment of the country, and damage the Speaker's Presidential aspirations. A majority of the House are new members, and many of them men of decided ability, for whom it will be difficult to find satisfactory places on committees without giving mortal offence to some of the old members.

The financial tornado seems now to have spent its force, and the recovery will soon begin. I venture to predict that "Money to Let" will be a drug in the market by the middle of January. Congress will be looked to for remedies. The most it can do is to take measures to provide against a recurrence of the evil. If there was only some way to take the seventy-five millions of currency now hoarded and out of circulation, out of the way, so it would not get back again into circulation it would be a great advance toward specie payments, and nobody would be harmed, for the contraction has already taken place, and all values have been shrunk to meet it. But nothing can be brought to do it soon enough. So when depositors stop their calls and Banks commence to make loans and the old stockings are opened, money will be abundant, with prices so shrunk that two-thirds the amount of money will conduct the old volume of business. Interest will go down, to induce people to borrow, speculation will start up, prices will take a start upward toward their old figures, and gold will go up in the expansion as it has come down with the contraction.

A joint Committee of the House and Senate to take into consideration all the financial schemes and report their conclusions would be much more likely to lead to something valuable, than the distraction which will come from the multitude of plans, that are considered separately if at all. A convertible and reconvertible bond, which has been so persistently advocated by your correspondent, seems growing in favor, and finds a hearty endorsement in Treasurer Spinner's report.

Economy must be the order of the next Congress and in marked contrast with the extravagance of the last. The last monthly report of the Treasury, with the ordinary payments a million and a half below the average, show an increase in the Public Debt of over $3,000,000 which will be increased $6,000,000 more the present month. This comes from the quarterly provision for paying pensions and the continued decline in customs, duties and internal Revenue Tax. The question arises, where shall retrenchment begin? Repeal of the Salary Bill would help some. Our Navy though but a fifth as large as England's in ships and men, costs half as much. The estimates for the Army are thirteen millions above last year, when it should be half that much less. A few millions more might be saved on public buildings started ahead of their necessity. The expenditures ought to be cut down twenty millions at least from last year—twenty-five would be better—and more in accord with the straightened circumstances of the people. The whole Internal Revenue force ought to be abolished, and stamps sold by agents and Postmasters and used as now, with a force of detectives under Supervisors to see that they are not omitted, and taxes evaded.

We took credit in prosperous times when the ship of State was sailing in smooth waters, and we must not shirk responsibility now when the angry waves dashing high make navigation difficult and dangerous. It is our ability to navigate in the storm that will determine our future position. It will prove our claim to stand at the helm and direct the course of the ship.

—"Do I understand the counsel for defendant," asked a very fat western judge, "to say that he is about to read his authorities as against the decision just pronounced from the bench?" "By no means," responded the council aforesaid; "I was merely going to show to your honor, by a brief passage I was about to read from the book, what an intolerable old fool Blackstone must have been." "Ay, ay," said the judge, not a little elated; and there the matter ended.

—A Westport (Conn.) man has got a Coroner's jury in a tight place. He weighed 280 pounds, and tumbled head foremost into a well, and they can't tell whether he died from drowning or butting his head against the bottom. Sad!

It is said that the Eastern Railroad Company is contemplating an arrangement with the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad, whereby direct communication is to be had with Montreal. This will necessitate the building of an independent road from Sheldon, Vt., to Montreal, twelve miles of which are already completed.

A famine prevails in Greenland, caused by the failure of the fisheries. In one village alone 150 persons have starved to death.

Captain John H. Spring of Newburyport was thrown from his carriage, Friday, his horse having taken fright from the cars, and striking upon his head his skull was fractured. He died in a short time. He was seventy-two years of age, and leaves a widow and five children.

One of the peculiarities of a peculiar set of Boston politicians is to ascertain who is likely to be chosen Mayor, and then solemnly ask his acceptance of a nomination.

It is stated that the cause of the mysterious noises in the locomotive "Pioneer" at South Manchester, Conn., has been discovered to be a turnip, attached to a string and dropped down a smoke stack. The string passes up through the roof and over into another building, where the authors of the joke amused themselves by pulling it and scaring the watchmen in the engine house.

The Chicago Times, which has abandoned the democratic party so heartily, that it hates the democratic name, speaks of the result in Wisconsin as follows: "There is not in Wisconsin an organization called the 'democratic party" or the democracy.' There are in Wisconsin no committees, no officers, no organic agencies of any kind, and no members of such an organization. There is no 'democratic' party in any sense of the word; there are no 'democrats' in Wisconsin. It is not true, therefore, that Governor Taylor is a 'democrat.'"

Kate Stanton ought to be the most popular lecturer of the season, if there is anything in a subject. She abolishes poverty in just an hour and a quarter by the clock, and does it so gracefully and entertainingly that it seems not more than a quarter of an hour. She speaks without manuscript, and finds the loss of her foolscap a gain in interest and effect. It is a pity that others would not take the hint and do likewise.

There is a report that after all, the Daily Graphic balloon did some good. Among the inmates of a private lunatic asylum at Litchfield was a man named Hemingway, from Boston, who had been there twelve years. He was formerly an active business man, but by trouble had lost both his intellect and the power of speech. Gradually his mind came back to him, and he became an industrious reader of the daily newspapers. He made himself understood by motions of his head and hands. But little hope, however, was entertained that he would ever speak again. On the day that the balloon went over Litchfield toward Canaan all sightseers were greatly excited. Some one rushed wildly to Dr. Buel's asylum and cried that the balloon was going over the town. "A balloon! a balloon! I'll go out and see it," suddenly spoke Mr. Hemingway. He went out and gazed at the thing as it sailed by, and from that moment could speak again, and as well as before his derangement, and is now at his home.

State News.

In the case of the town of Chesterfield, to recover $700 for a substitute who was a deserter, the defendant brokers have won, in the Chesire County S. J. Court. It was alleged that the substitute was warranted to be all right, while the defense claimed that the warranty did not extend beyond the acceptance of the soldier by the government. On the first trial the verdict was for the plaintiff; next the jury disagreed.

A Great Falls truant officer arrested a boy whom his father kept from school to assist him. The officer took the boy to the station and locked him in, and then went to Justice Knapp to get a warrant against him as truant, but the Justice denounced the act and ordered the boy to be released.

A New Died of a "Dead-Line."

Virginia City, in Nevada Territory, is a right lively place. Four big strong men from England, poor but honest miners, it is to be assumed, on their muscle and posted in the "manly art," went out a few miles from the city and then stopped. They peeled, that is they stripped to the conventional paucity of ring costume, and then drew an imaginary line across the road which leads to Gold Hill. These sons of Albion declared that no man should pass them, until one of their number should get fairly whipped by one man, or all of them together should be thrashed by a crowd, without regard to numbers. It soon got right lively on that Gold Hill road. It was uncommonly lively: It was about the liveliest time for two hours, steady old Virginians said, they had seen in those parts for a right smart time. In two hours there were fifty-nine fights; and fifty men were retired meekly to their domestic hearths, with all kinds of roofs, including Mansards, on them, requesting to be put within their little beds. And still the children of boxiana held the road, even as Lars Persena and his friends held the bridge. But at length Lars Bull and the other three rumpus had to throw up the sponge. Three sons of the Emerald Isle heard of the little party, and they went in against the deadliners; and after they had been in for a time the Bulls went out, and they carried with them Mansard roofs of the most lovely and approved Me Cool pattern.

The information ought to end here, but it does not. The truth of history must be vindicated. The three gentlemen from Tipperary thought they would go into the "dead-line" business and have a circus of their own. Like Richard with Lady Anne, they had it but they did not keep it long. Two gigantic Hibernians from about Mullingar heard of the dead-line, and thought they too would like to go to the party. They went, and then one of the party who held the line threw down his coat in real old Donnybrook fashion, just to make the dead-line more of a tangible fact, as it were. It was one of the most beautiful things in the record of Virginia City, which is saying a good deal. It was short, sharp and decisive. In less than a minute one of the dead-liners was lying on the Gold Hill road, within an inch of being a lovely subject for a lively wake. The two had Mansard roofs, cupolas and all the modern improvements, and were scouting for dear life over the hills toward the Bullion works. The two giants who had thus won the dead-line held it for a time, and then went quietly home and peace reigned on Gold Hill. But it was lovely while it lasted!

The Piute Brave and the Maiden.

[St. Louis Republican.]

A Piute brave loved a maiden. She was a rancher's daughter on the head waters of the river of Walker. The Piute did chores on her parent's ranche, and he walked into the susceptibilities of that Territorial female during the process of those chores, with an alacrity beautiful to behold. He told his love. She listened to believe. In the absence of her parents, engaged in the ennobling pursuits of the chase, the Piute and the maiden met frequently. Heart pulsated against heart, and then hand in hand she would lead him in and set him down before a plate of pork and beans. Such tenderness was touching! It touched the Piute in his tenderest point, and he hoisted them in. Nothing could have been more tender except the beans.

One evening, as the golden haze of the setting sun bathed the Occident in liquid light, the rancher returned from a hunt to find his child—sole daughter of his heart and log-cabin—had vamoosed the ranche—skedaddled—lit out.

Udderzook Guilty.

A singular murder case has ended in the finding of Udderzook guilty of murder in the first degree at West Chester, Pennsylvania. The theory of the prosecution was that Udderzook and Goss, brothers-in-law, entered into a conspiracy to defraud certain insurance offices of $25,000, that being the gross amount of the policies on Goss' life. Goss' laboratory, prepared for the occasion, was burned down and a body charred beyond satisfactory recognition, was found in the ruins. The insurance companies suspecting fraud, discovered that Goss was alive and in hiding. While they were on his trial, a horrible murder was discovered near Jennersville, Pennsylvania, and Udderzook was arrested for the crime. Investigation seems to have proved that the murdered man was Goss, who was done to death by Udderzook, in order that the original conspiracy, by which he was to gain some part of the insurance might be carried out. The body in the burned laboratory was probably procured from a graveyard. The jury had twelve ballots in all; and though there was a unanimous vote at last, there was one stage in the proceedings when the jury stood four for conviction and eight for acquittal. Taken altogether, it is one of the most singular criminal trials of recent times.

"Protect Me From Myself."

A sad case is thus stated in a recent number of the Brooklyn Eagle:

A very respectable woman entered Judge Walsh's Court yesterday and sat in front of the Judge. She was dressed in a black and white dress, carried a leather bag in her hand, and was of very neat and clean appearance. As soon as Judge Walsh was disengaged she stepped up and asked to be sent somewhere where she couldn't get any liquor.

"Have you any home?" asked the Judge.

"Yes, I have, but I must go somewhere where I can't get it."

"Do you want me to send you to jail?"

"Anywhere, Judge, where I shall be kept from it."

"What is your name?"

"Mary Foster."

"Have you been drinking long?"

"I have been a drinking woman for over three years."

"How long do you want me to commit you?"

"Long enough for me to get my brain clear, your Honor, and I'll make one more trial!"

"Well, Mary, I'll send you to Raymond street for ten days."

"The Universal Ayer." On my journeys over the continent—through Turkey, India, China, Japan, Peru, Chili, Paraguay, Brazil, Mexico, and the United States—in them all to some extent, and in some to a great extent, I have found the UNIVERSAL AYER represented by his family medicines, which are often held in fabulous esteem. Whether they win their marvelous reputation by their cures, I know not, but I know they have it to such a degree that it frequently gave me a distinguished importance to have come from the same country.—[Field's letters from abroad.

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of the Western Hemisphere. Boasts the most extravagant, fabrications the most preposterous, cant the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the field with that famous vegetable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general restorative, and a specific for indigestion, billious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints in which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of nascientific pretenders than the everlasting hills by the winds that run tie through their dellies.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few competitions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Centennial Religious Services.

The introduction of the doctrine of Universalism in Portsmouth was commemorated on Sunday, Nov. 16th, it being the one hundredth anniversary of the first Universalist sermon preached in this city. The exercises were conducted by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Patterson in the following order:

Morning—Anthem; Prayer; Reading of the Scripture; Singing; Historical Discourse by Rev. A. J. Patterson; Singing an original Hymn; Prayer; Benediction.

Evening—Anthem; Prayer; Scripture Reading; Singing; Historical Discourse concluded; Original Hymn (composed by Mrs. L. J. Patterson;) Prayer; Benediction.

The exercises were conducted in the usual fervent and impressive manner of these two well-known champions of Universalism, while the sermon was replete with historic facts of peculiar interest to those of the Universalist faith. It would be impossible to give such a synopsis of this discourse as would do justice to the able author, and so we refrain from alluding to any of its points, preferring to wait until it is published, as it doubtless will be, at an early day.

The church was very tastefully decorated, the altar and pulpit especially so. Two large tablets—one on each side of the speaker's desk—contained the names of the several pastors that have occupied the pulpit here during the past century, in the order of their ministrations. The one on the left of the altar contained the names of Parker, Richards, Hosea Ballou, Streeter, Turner, King, Moses Ballou, and Montgomery, while that at the right exhibited the more familiar names of Fletcher, Dillingham, Willis, Patterson, Ambler, Bicknell and Van Cise. In front of the pulpit was a large steel engraving of Rev. Mr. Murray, prettily trimmed with flowers, smilax and evergreen. In the rear of the pulpit on the wall was inserted in large letters the name of Murray and immediately beneath, the dates 1773—1873, while between the name and the figures was a large cross beautifully arranged with brilliant flowers of varied hues, the whole presenting a rare effect.

This afternoon and evening social festivities will take place in the Vestry, which will include a supper that is to be served at 6 1-2 o'clock. The pastors of the city churches have been invited.

Was It Suicide?

From a circumstance becoming known which has interest as connected with the death of Miss Nettie B. Stephenson, there is some doubt of her intention to commit suicide. An engineer reports that he saw a woman in front of his engine shortly after six o'clock, on the morning of the 12th. He pulled the whistle and the woman sprang off to the right in the darkness as the engine passed on. Her friends think this may have been Miss Stephenson, that she was not in her right mind, and being deaf did not hear the coming engine, was awakened to consciousness by the whistle, sprang into the water and her clothing impeded any efforts to save herself that she may have made.

Per contra, the Portland Advertiser says the "mother of Miss Stephenson committed suicide, and this girl had tried to do so several times unsuccessfully. A Portland physician told her friends she had brain disease and would sooner or later accomplish her object. When free from hallucination the idea of suicide was horrible."

There is likely to be an interesting contest between the Internal Revenue Bureau and the drug interests in the United States at the next session of Congress. The result of the Philadelphia Drug Exchange meeting, October 9, 1873, in deciding to urge the druggists throughout the United States to unite in influencing Congress to repeal "Schedule C," which contains the decisions of the Bureau in reference to the tax on medical preparations, has created quite a stir among the Internal Revenue officers. Mr. Kimball, who has charge of the work under that schedule, pronounces the circular of the Drug Exchange a wrong interpretation of the law, and a misrepresentation of facts. He states that the druggists will be met before Congress, or in the courts if so desired, and declares that "if whiskey and tobacco are taxed, drugs ought to be, as they are more injurious to the morals and health of the community."

Our Grandfathers' Newspapers.

No change in the manner of doing anything more strongly marks the peculiar genius of this time than the metamorphose scarcely an exaggeration to call it so—of newspapers. Looking at the old issues we see no head-lines! No special correspondence! No personals! No jokes! No reports of amusements; much less criticisms; much less puffs; much less book notices; much less market reports; much less court decisions. O! easy-going, non-news-devouring, low-pressure long ago! Of lolling, lazy, limp, luxurious, lounging ante-telegraphic days! How many exhausted editors and gorged readers sigh for your return; and long to exchange, at least for one short day (say Monday), the tame old bliss of ignorance for this overburdening load of universal intelligence. We are like bees, caught in the rain, overloaded with honey; and such honey!

Owl Russell.

Not long ago died the Col. Russell known in the Southwest as "Owl Russell," who was once Henry Clay's private secretary. He was a man of intense egotism, whose chief object in life was to be admired and notorious. Years and years ago, while in the Missouri Legislature, he got the soubriquet which clung to him all the rest of his life, and actually carried him out of his political career. It was during a violent debate in which he had shown an absurd pomposity, that one his political comrades rose and quietly told a little story. He said that one night Russell, while traveling through the woods, lost his way, and being a stranger in that part of the country, became rather nervous. While in this sorry plight he suddenly heard a voice not far away, calling out, "Who, who who are you?" The answer was loud and prompt: "I am Col. William H. Russell, for many years a prominent member of the Kentucky Legislature, was School Commissioner for the southern district of Kentucky., am now the Representative of Calloway County in the Missouri Legislature, am spoken of as the Whig candidate for next Congress, and I am lost. Who are you?" Of course the question was repeated, and the answer was again returned with all the linked dignity until the audience screamed with laughter and greeted poor Russell whenever he dared to rise with: "Who, who, who are you?" And so he got his name of "Owl Russell."

An Indiana Charivari.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

Six young ladies in the vicinity of Blackford's Grove took on the habiliments of the sterner sex and went forth to meet a bride and bridegroom with tin pans (no oil) to give a charivari serenade. The people of the house captured the lot, took them to the light and caused them to feel very much ashamed of their foolishness.

The elderly party was not a man of words. He would rather fight an Indian for a day than talk to him for ten minutes, and he got up and got. On the finest horse in all the settlement he put out after the Piute brave and the Territorial maiden, his daughter. He rode, it is said, one hundred and eighty miles in eighteen hours. He overtook them between Water Lake and the Skin of the Carson. The Piute brave would rather have seen his skin in the Carson than not. The angry parent snatched his child baldheaded from her Piute brave, and then put back for his home on the river of Walker. For the Pleute brave—what? He is doing chores in the happy hunting-grounds for the great spirit of his tribe, and no longer hankers after a white father-in-law. The Territorial maiden is still singlet but, she has periodical moments of sad remembrance of her dusky lover every time she tenderly fills the rancher's corn-cob out of his Piute-scalp tobacco-bag.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new. E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Stragglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, hookings and stragglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Hints to Bergh.

[Erie Dispatch.]

It seems to me your Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, although a good thing so far as it goes, stops short of what it might accomplish. I offer a few suggestions as to the enlargement of its sphere of usefulness.

Eight hours should be a day's work on a dog churn, the dog to be allowed one day in the week to himself. Let every dog have his day.

Life-preservers for Newfoundland dogs, to guard against sudden cramps.

A fine for imposing bogus watches on watch dogs. The watch dog's honest bark has often been raised against the swindle.

Discountenance the practice of nickNaming cats of the masculine gender Tom—they are sensitive on that point. Call them Thomas.

Easy slippers for snakes. They are manifestly uncomfortable "in boots."

Protection of nuts from their nephews and neices.

Cushion toad-stools would be highly appreciated by toads after a "hop."

Punish boys who frighten the frogs and make them jump. Sudden shocks are sometimes fatal to a nervous organization.

Encourage trout to write poetry. We have seen some very heartfull trout lines ere now.

Restrums in the ocean for whales to "spout" from. This is a want long felt, and the whales pout about it.

Abolish mosquitoes bars. They make mosquitos irregular about their meals.

Introduce the German language into our schools of fish.

Administer chlorotorm to tape-worms before removing them. No removal for purely political causes.

Pocket-handkerchiefs for crocodiles to wipe away their tears on.

A school in accounts for adders, who also multiply rapidly.

Encourage the cultivation of plum trees for the comfort of that fastidious epicure, the curculio, who can feed upon nothing else.

An inebriate asylum for "biled" owls, and others who get as drunk as——.

Badges for hawks, so we can tell one from a hernshaw.

SEWING MACHINE

DOES A GREATER VARIETY OF WORK, And is the Fastest Running and Most Perfect Shuttle Machine Made.

Parties in want of a good machine will do well to examine these before purchasing. Machines sold on installments at No. 6 Bridge street.

☞ Sewing Machines repaired at short notice.

WILLIAM CRUGHLEY, Agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest awards, Machines work at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other shuttle. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (115,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 31,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, and a need the wants of the public in veriority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines then, are desirable qualities in the singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, made from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, has so combined with it the vitalizing character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of the blood, acting as a Nutritive Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, nourishing mental sensations, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhoea, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents and inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All anxiety for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

JOHN TAGGART."

Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its great popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Gazette.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that it has kept pace with the times, and should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number adorns a fresh pleasure in its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE are most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—the finest of competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duly estimate the quality of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for THE TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cañon of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longing of a child's heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the agent attests a given bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

CANVASSERS WANTED.

The Country Gentleman.

Volume for 1874.

THE CULTIVATOR & COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, for the past forty years, has ranked, both in this country and abroad, as the STANDARD JOURNAL OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. The Editors and Proprietors, in addition to their own personal labors, are regularly assisted by a very large number of Special Correspondents and Regular Contributors, among whom are included many Leading Agriculturists, in all parts of the Country, East and West—and by over Five Hundred Occasional and Voluntary Writers, directly in the ranks of the Best Farmers and Horticulturists of nearly every State in the Union. With the co-operation of so large a corps of practical men, this Journal is intended to possess exceptional value as the chosen Medium of Intercommunication among all classes interested in the Products and Fertility of the land—those who Cultivate and those who Consume—the Grower and Shipper, as well as the first Owner of the crop—Breeders of Improved Animals and their Customers—Manufacturers of Improved Machinery and those who purchase and employ it—Nurserymen and Fruit Raisers—and, especially, to supply fuller and better data as to the progress, prospects and returns of each successive Season, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—Where to Buy and what to Sell.

TERMS.—The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is published weekly, on the following terms, when paid strictly in advance: One Copy, one year, $2.50; Four Copies, $10, and an additional copy for the year free to the person of the Club; Ten Copies, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the print-ed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!

Never before was such an idea attempted for book illustration; every one who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,

Woman in Sacred History,

is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scriptural, biblical and legendary sources, ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the

make it one of the most unique, original and remarkable books ever offered. The pictures, if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $32, while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with sumptuous bindings of the volume, can be had for one-fifth of that amount. The book is making a tremendous sensation among the agents and salesmen, because it is absolutely NEW, and "has money in it." To gentlemen of work who can pay, apply for terms, circulars, &c., to J. COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above fine coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SILLSBORO RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON

And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

Scraping an Acquaintance.

[Boston Transcript.]

Early last evening a well-known traveling theatrical manager entered the Boston & Albany Railroad station with the intention of taking the late express train for New York, and, as an hour or more was at his disposal for rest previous to the leaving of the train, he requested an official to allow him the privilege of making up for lost sleep by a quiet response on a lounge in the ladies' room, which was readily granted. He had been but a few minutes in an easy posture, with an inclination to doze, his hat, gloves and cane lying by his side, when a burly stranger entered the room and unceremoniously appropriated those indispensable articles to his own use, leaving a somewhat worn soft hat in exchange for the more genteel tile that he had placed jauntily on his head. Thus arranged, he was coolly striding toward the door, when the manager, who was completely overcome by sleep took in the situation and excitedly followed. "I believe I have the best claim to those things, sir," was his expression when he overtook the stranger, who, without being the least disconcerted, restored the property with some remark about a "mistake." The intruder disappeared after quietly replacing his own hat, but returned soon afterward with the surprising question: "Do you want to fight?" The caterer to the public amusement was by this time fairly awake, and so far from showing trepidation, rather astonished his interlocutor with an affirmative response and action suited to the word. One from the shoulder was planted on the stranger's nose in answer to a menacing gesture. He stood it well, made an ineffectual pass, and received another blow on the cheek, which staggered him a little. Before he had fairly recovered from this and while bracing himself up for another round, a third "stunner" sent him sprawling over the heater. He came up again, however, and a "settler" between the eyes reminded him of that one word which always ends a pugilistic encounter—"Enough." This was reluctantly uttered, the discomfited man gathered himself up, and with face and breast covered with blood moved out to the main hall, where he met the official before mentioned. The officer, being apprised of what had occurred within, proposed to take the fellow into custody for a breach of the peace. But "Bloody nose" was ready with an explanation. "See here, Mr. Officer," he trembingly said, "I thought I knew that man, and meant to renew my acquaintance with him by a practical joke; but I find he is somebody else." As the vanquished stranger was not intoxicated, and appeared to have a just appreciation of his laughably embarrassing position before the numerous passengers, while his new-found theatrical friend did not seem disposed to press a complaint, he was allowed to wash his bruised frontispiece in the dressing room and depart unmolested.

Man's Antiquity.

In a recent issue of Nature, Mr. Alfred Russell Wallace indulges in some speculations on the probable antiquity of the human species, which may well startle even those who have since come to the conclusion that 6000 years carry us but a small way back to the original homo. In fact, in Mr. Wallace's reckoning, 6000 years are but as a day. He begins by complaining of the timidity of scientific men when treating of this subject, andpoints out the fallacy of always preferring the lowest estimate in order to be "on the safe side." He declares that all the evidence tends to show that the safe side is probably with the large figures. He reviews the various attempts to determine the antiquity of human remains or works of art, and finds the Bronze Age in Europe to have been pretty accurately fixed at 3000 to 4000 years ago, the Stone age of the Swiss Lake dwellings at 5000 to 7000 years, "and an indefinite anterior period." The burnt brick found 60 feet deep in the Nile alluvium indicates an antiquity of 20,000 years; another fragment at 72 feet gives 50,000 years. A human skeleton found at a depth of 16 feet below four buried forests superposed upon each other, has been calculated by Dr. Dowler to have an antiquity of 50,000 years. But all these estimates pale before those which Kent's Cavern at Torquay legitimates. Here the drip of the stalagmite is the chief factor of our computations, giving us an upper floor which "divides the relics of the last two or three thousand years from a deposit full of the bones of extinct mammalia, many of which, like the reindeer, mammoth, and glutton, indicate an arctic climate." Names cut into this stalagmite more than 200 years ago are still legible; in other words, where the stalagmite is twelve feet thick and the drip still very copious, not more than a hundredth of a foot has been deposited in two centuries, a rate of five feet in 100,000 years. Below this, however, we have a thick, much older, more crystaline (i. e., more slowly formed) stalagmite, beneath which, again, "in a solid breccia, very different from the cave-earth, undoubted works of art have been found." Mr. Wallace assumes only 100,000 for the upper floor, and about 250,000 for the lower, and adds 150,000 for the intermediate cave-earth, by which he arrives at the "sum of half a million as representing the years that have probably elapsed since flints of human workmanship were buried in the lowest deposits of Kent's Cavern."

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1873.

The Cuban Troubles.

The position taken by our government is that since the Virginius carried American papers altogether regular in form, and was sailing under the American flag, it was an act of gross discourtesy, if not a positive insult, to fry all on board and proceed with their execution in such a summary manner, not only without any notice to the United States, but by so controlling the telegraph lines that no orders reversing the executions could be received. It is believed that the United States has demanded that this government shall be made a party to the trials of the prisoners still unexecuted and in passing upon the status of the Virginius, and we further insist that the conduct of those ordering executions shall be immediately investigated by the Spanish government.

It is generally conceded that unless the Madrid government consents to joint intervention in order to restore tranquillity in Cuba and punish the perpetrators of the recent outrages, war with Spain is inevitable. The London Times says if England is called upon to act in consequence of the execution of any of her own subjects, there is no reason why she should not acknowledge the independence of Cuba, especially if the act would check such outrages. It recommends the adoption of that line of policy by the United States.

The Daily Telegraph contains articles similar in tone to that of the Times. Both journals concur in the opinion that Spain is powerless to enforce reparation, and that the United States may possibly be compelled to interfere, even though reluctant to do so.

The work on the Spanish iron-clad Arapiles has been suspended by order of the Navy Department. The navy yard officials have also received orders to prevent her crew from visiting New York or Brooklyn. They are to be kept within the yard.

The Boston Journal's Monday evening Washington dispatch says: The war feeling is intense. Officers of the army and navy are very eager for a declaration of hostilities. Gen. Sherman, however, says that it is absurd to talk of going to war on this question. He maintained that the military force is inadequate for our present domestic purposes, and in this the Attorney General coincides. The latter declares it is impossible to obtain soldiers enough to assist marshals and district attorneys in executing the laws in unsettled districts.

The Traveller's dispatch says that Consul General Hall telegraphs Secretary Fish that out of 23 citizens of Great Britain captured on the Virginius, 17 have been executed, and the other six will probably suffer the same fate. Despatches confirming the report of the executions of the 10th have also been received, the number being placed at 57.

The shooting of British subjects has created much excitement in Washington among English residents, and Thornton has been in constant communication with the British Consul-General at Havana and his home government.

It is quite probable that there will be concerted action between Great Britain and the United States authorities in punishing Spanish officials in Cuba, who have disregarded not only the laws of nations but humanity itself.

In case the Spanish government does not make full and satisfactory reparation the shooting of British subjects will, it is maintained, make more difficult the settlement of the questions without resorting to war.

The Spanish Republicans

Are placed at a disadvantage in being just now the controlling influence in the home government. Castelar, the dictator, is on friendly terms with the United States and much was hoped from his administration. Being unable to control the action of the Cuban government, Castelar cannot grant the demands of President Grant for redress. It is evident that the Spanish people, arrogant and self-sufficient, will espouse the cause of the monarchists should the latter demand war rather than do justice to our government's claims. The republic of Spain needs all the encouragement possible to maintain itself at home and among nations. Unless Castelar puts himself in concord with the Spanish people his downfall is likely to be speedy. Should he succumb to their views to save his administration, he cannot expect the United States to befriend the Republic in opposition to its own interests. To punish the authorities guilty of the barbarities of a week ago at Santiago, the United States may find it necessary to ignore the Spanish home government. Naturally, recognition of Cuban belligerency would ensue; following that might come a declaration of war by Spain, whose navy would prey on American commerce while the American army and navy take possession of Cuba—thus furnishing the sad example of two governments in sympathy with each other, drives to war on each other's interests by the cruelty of the Spanish commandant at Santiago.

—An exchange says: If it were not for the conductor who enlivens the trip along the Hook by his remarkable performances, it is probable that an infuriated public would tear the ——— Railroad Company limb from limb. I am certain that I have see this conductor taking tickets one minute and distributing prize candy packages the next. He rushes through the cars screwing up the brakes, and then skips into the engine-cab to see if the steam-gauge is all right, and to put a little more coal under the boiler; then he come through the cars again with his arms full of illustrated papers, and finally when the train arrives at a station, there he is smashing up baggage with the easy grace of an accomplished professional!"

Old Time Chronicles, No. 94.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

One of the Senators from New Hampshire in the first Congress after the adoption of the Constitution in 1789, was Paine Wingate. He had the short term, four years. He was born in Amesbury, Mass., in 1739, graduated at Harvard College in 1759, ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Hampton Falls in 1765 and dismissed in 1771. Some years later he moved to Stratham. He served as Representative and Senator in the State Legislature and was one of the Judges of the Superior Court about ten years, was also Representative in Congress two years after being Senator. He died in Stratham, March 7, 1838, aged 88 years.

The other Senator was John Langdon. He had the long term, six years, at the expiration of which by re-election he served six years longer. He was much in office. Among the places he filled while New Hampshire was a Province, he was repeatedly a Representative and Speaker of the of the Assembly, also a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. After the State Constitution was adopted he several years served as Representative in the Legislature and Speaker of the House. He was also a Senator in the Legislature. He was Governor of the State six years. He died in Portsmouth Sept. 18, 1819, aged 79 years.

We now pass to the Representative from this State in the first Congress, Samuel Livermore. He was born in Waltham, Mass., graduated at the College of New Jersey in 1752, studied law, practiced in Londonderry then in Portsmouth where he married a daughter of Rev. Arthur Brown, minister of what is now St. John's church. He was a delegate in the Continental Congress; after the war, State Attorney General. After serving Representative in the first Congress, he was chosen Senator, where he served in all about eight years. He died May, 1803, aged 71. His home in his last years was Holderness.

Abiel Foster was a native of Andover, Mass., graduated at Harvard College, 1756. He was settled as the first minister in Canterbury in 1761 and continued till 1779. He was a delegate to Congress three years under the old Confederation. He was Representative in the State Legislature, also Senator, and President of that body. He was Representative in the first Congress, also in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh, in all ten years. He died in Canterbury, Feb. 6, 1806, aged 71.

Nicholas Gilman was son of Nicholas Gilman, who, besides other offices, held for many years that of State Treasurer. Another son of the State Treasurer was John T. Gilman, for 14 years Governor of the State. Mr. Gilman, the Representative in Congress, was born in Exeter, Aug. 3, 1755. He was an officer in the army of the Revolution and for some time a member of Gen. Washington's military family. He was a delegate to the Continental Congress, a member of the Convention that formed the United States Constitution, and after that was adopted, Representative in the first Congress and was continued eight years. Then he was elected to the United States Senate, where he was in office eight years, when he died in Philadelphia, then the seat of government, May 3, 1814, aged 60. In one branch of Congress or the other he served through the administration of Washington, that of Adams, Jefferson and a part of Madison's. The common account is that on one of his journeys to the seat of government, he went by way of Saratoga, N. Y., gave attention to one of the springs there, tested its properties, and that it afterwards took the name of Congress Spring, which it bears to this day.

In this part of this paper, the special object was to notice the delegation in the lower House in the first Congress, but two of the delegation were afterwards promoted to the Senate, Messrs. Livermore and Gilman were the first to die from the State while members of the Senate. The next was Mr. Atherton in 1853, and the last Mr. Norris in 1855.

San Francisco Correspondence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5th, 1873.

Dear Chronicle and Gazette: Your welcome sheet comes to me, much enlarged, and well filled with interesting reading matter, and it is with pleasure I con its items of home news. The texture of the new dress, both in fabric and print, are excellent, and it does great credit to its publishers. No son of Portsmouth, need be ashamed to spread its ample folio before his family circle, for in its columns there is a fund of entertainment, suitable to all. It is well for a distance from their nativity, to have such a good family paper, coming regularly to their firesides, to cheer and enlighten them with the news from home. I was much interested in your report of the "Sons' return," and to me it gave ample evidence of the utility of such social reunions. The period of recurrence should be ten years, for then more could avail themselves of its inestimable blessings.

I regret to note the stringency of the times has had the effect to check the operations of your manufacturing corporations, but hope that the financial causes will soon correct themselves, and thus set the spinning wheels flying and filling the thousands of idle hands with the needful currency, to warm and feed the hungry the coming winter. As yet, we have not felt the monetary earthquake, and we expect no tidal wave of it to reach this sunny shore, for most all kinds of business is very lively here just now. For we are having some of the welcome rain, and we now expect an early season, to prepare the way for abundant harvests. Our population is steadily on the increase, and they are coming to this "El Dorado," to seek homes, as well as fortunes, and may God speed those of muscle, for we want laborers to till the soil, as well as those whose brain and capital can develope the hidden resources of mother earth. Our lands are prolific because they are virgin valley lands, never having been tilled; they yield prodigeously when the rains and sunsuine follow the footsteps of the husbandman; and the frugal, industrious farmer is bound to succeed here, if anywhere on this terra firma.

The monetary interests of California are in a healthy condition; loans are made by our savings banks at 9 per cent. in the city, and from 10 to 12 per cent. in the country. Under this state of things, building has been stimulated, and capital is being lavishly employed in the improvement of real estate; hundreds of houses of all classes are going up in all parts of the city. The Central Pacific Railroad have completed their large brick building, three stories, for official business, and it is an ornament to that part of the city. The new Mint Building, some 200 feet square, is nearly completed. It is built of free stone, granite and iron, with extra foundations of cemented concrete, underlying the whole, capable (it is supposed) of resisting ordinary earthquake shocks. It is two stories high, with an ample basement for storage. There are two lofty chimnies rising from the melting department, capable of carrying off the gases generated there, and of arresting the flight of any particles of fine gold, that may be forced from the furnaces, but they are not supposed to check abstracts, from drafts through the treasury of Uncle Samuel. Then there is the new city hall, law courts, and hall of records, some two blocks in length. These buildings form a triangle, terminating with the circular building of the hall of records. From a concrete foundation, the basement story rises of brick, then two stories blended with stone, iron and stucco covered brick, terminating in mansard roof, surmounted with turrets, pinnacles, and an immense dome. The ornamentations on the base or front of a triangle, are columns with fretted capitals, cornices with brackets, medalions, entablatures with figures and statues. It is thought that as it is now ready for the first story, that it will take two or three years to complete it, and it will cost over three million dollars. We are to have one of the finest parks in the United States, called the "Golden Gate Park." It progresses slowly, but surely and as fast as the needed appropriations are made. They have been at work on it some two years, and now they have completed a drive of some five miles, within the outer rim of the enclosure. A mile or so passes along the beach of the Pacific ocean and one can look out over its placid waters and see the steamers and other sailing crafts moving on the bosom of the great blue sea. As yet, you can see parterres of flowers, scattered along its walks; basins are forming for lakes and ponds surmounted by miniature hills, planted with trees of every clime. Near the centre, there is to be an artificial mountain, from which beautiful views of land and ocean may be seen. On its sides the "Lequoia gigantea," (or trees of the big tree variety,) have been set out, and future generations may walk beneath their giant shadows. It will take several years to complete this park, but when done, it will be one of those beauty spots on which we shall delight to gaze, and where the young and old, the invalid or convalescent may drive and breathe the fresh air of the ocean, perfumed by a thousand flowers. Yours, J. R. W. C.

Horse Talk From Virginia.

LEESBURG, VA., Nov. 13.

Having heard of the merits of Loudon County, Va., for farming purposes, I was tempted to visit its State Fair held in the sleepy old town of Leesburg, about forty miles from Washington, (fifty by rail) and three miles from the Potomac at Ball's Bluff where Gen. Baker fell early in the war. The importance of the town comes from its being the county seat, where are situated the court house and jail, and around which on monthly court days are gathered all those who have cattle, horses or mules to trade, and where it is always in order and expected in political times somebody will be present to orate. These court days bring a monthly gathering of county lawyers and traffickers and curiosity seekers. I once saw auctions of bulls, poor mules and blind horses, and two political meetings all going on around one court house, while law and justice were occupied inside. All around Leghorn and stretching fifteen miles west to the Blue Ridge, and for an indefinite distance southerly the country is admirably well adapted for fruit stock, dairy, or general farm crops; abundantly supplied with springs, and well wooded and timbered. The fair was held on the 6th of November and a fine day and the presence of the President and his Cabinet, with other public functionaries, drew a crowd of five or six thousand people to attend the fair and pay their fifty cents for admittance. I am within bounds in saying there were a thousand horses under the saddle and as many more in harness picketed around the fair grounds and outside in the adjoining fields and woods. They were mostly stout, heavy farm horses, fed with a few ears of corn on the cob (all corn is here fed on the cob) while those they brought were partaking in picnic style from a well filled basket.

The horse stalls and cattle pens were very well arranged and comfortable. The show of Durhams fine and Aldereys fair. The breeds show lack of good care. But one yoke of oxen on the grounds, in a miserable yoke with iron bows made of 7-8 inch round iron. A Durham steer which attracted much attention, was a hundred pounds more than half the weight of Chester Pike's biggest yoke at the State fair at Manchester. A fair lot of Chester, Berkshire and Essex hogs with a few South Down and Catswold sheep. The bulk of the horses on exhibition were for farm purposes. There were some Percherons among them. I saw but two blooded colts. There are quite a number of Morgan horses in this section of Virginia, and further on in the valley. Two of the finest horses ridden by the marshals, from their form, color and action were Morgans. Stockbridge Chief, a proud son of old Black Hawk, was on the ground gay and game as ever, but stone blind. The farm implements on exhibition were few and inferior except mowers and reapers, and one of Blanchard's churns from Concord. In the hall were ordinary specimens of butter, a fine display of bread, cake, jellies, preserves, domestic wines, apples and pears, with the inevitable patch work bed spread and accompaniments. The show of vegetables was good but small, and the samples of wheat and corn as good as to be found anywhere. I saw corn said to be from a field of forty acres which averaged eighty bushels to the acre. The farmers are using large quantities of commercial fertilizers, while but few give any attention to saving and making manure upon the farm. The best thing in that way I have seen was a farmer feeding his stock in a twenty acre field. He hauled his corn fodder from the shock and each day distributed it over a new place in the field. He then fed out his corn on the cob to the cattle, and after they had eaten what they could get, the hogs were let in at night to hunt for the scattered kernels and what was passed undigested.

There were two purses for trotting and one good trotter entered for each purse. I could get up but little interest in a race where one horse could distance the other in a half mile, upon a track up hill on the back stretch and down hill on the home stretch, two-fifths of a mile long. It was hardly as exciting as a Baltimore running race, where a field of eight three year olds came in, in a mile and and a half race, so close together that a seaside parlor hotel carpet would cover them all, and where the hind horse at the start won by only a neck. One of the trotters made 2.57, which was fast time for the track. Speaking of runners, I saw Harry Bassett in his last race where he was doubly distanced in the last mile of a four mile race by True Blue, another son of Lexington, before leaving for California to enter the trot with Thad Stevens, McDaniels, and Hubbard for the $20,000 four mile purse. They were both magnificent looking horses. Harry a chestnut with star in forehead, with white hind feet and True Blue a bronze bay with black pants. The great racers are larger than I expected to see them,—strong deep shoulders, short broad backs, long broad hips and stout thighs, with fine legs, a little long, in appearance from training. Many of them would tip eleven hundred in the condition of a saleable carriage horse. It is no wonder in striding as they do from twenty-three to twenty-six feet, at four years old, the muscles of legs give way, and they go to the stud farms. They are forced in their growth, begin running at two and give out early, but few six years old are now on the track. Boston was nine year old when he ran with Fashion. EXE.

"The Universal Ayer." On my journeys over the continent—through Turkey, India, China, Japan, Peru, Chili, Paraguay, Brazil, Mexico, and the United States—in them all to some extent, and in some to a great extent, I have found the UNIVERSAL AYER represented by his family medicines, which are often held in fabulous esteem. Whether they win their marvelous reputation by their cures, I know not, but I know they have it to such a degree that frequently gave me a distinguished importance to have come from the same country.—[Field's letters from abroad.

Personal. DR. HERMOLD TO THE FRONT AGAIN. We are glad to see that during the Doctor's temporary residence in Europe, the supply of his genuine, Extract Buchu—the only known specific for urinary, disorders and obscure complaints in either sex—has been supplied from his formula and apparatus by his representative here. The genuine article bears the Doctor's signature, and is probably the best known and most valuable remedy of the kind in the world. John F. Henry, New York, sole agent. Sold by all druggists. eod&w

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of the Western Hemisphere. Boasts the most extravagant, fabrications the most preposterous, and the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the field with that famous vegetable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general restorative, and a specific for indigestion, bilious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints in which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of unscientific pretenders than the everlasting hills by the winds that run to their feet.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary merits. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well deserved, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Local Matters.

Unprepared.

There are not wanting men who go about the streets and desire to fight Spain, are ready, in fact, to leave their firesides for a raid on Cuba. If Portsmouth thus goes to war with Spain, who knows but that Spain will go to war with Portsmouth? A Spanish armada may annoy the Isles of Shoals to Spain, pass without resistance into Portsmouth harbor and bombard the city, render Kittery defenceless by reducing the navy yard to ashes, and frighten Dover people so that the new bridge at the Point will be burned to prevent olive-complexioned warriors of Europe from more devastation over the line of the P. & D. R. R. What is to prevent? Not an earth-work finished at Gerrish's Island or Jaffrey's Point! Not a defensible fort in the harbor! Not a torpedo, neither a monitor to smash an enemy with! Our defences are in a bad way. Portsmouth would do well to declare herself in a state of neutrality—in case of war, having a precedent in the case of Kentucky (in 1861), which remarkable State would not allow, as it were, any Union or confederate army to tread its sacred soil.

That Boat Race.

The correspondence between members of the Lelap boat crew of this city and the Exeter Academy club concludes rather unfavorably for the Exeter students, who, while they declare there was no race between the Lelaps and their boat's crew, state that the Lelaps were ahead when they started—a statement that is untrue. If there was no race, why was the start made? The reply to the communication of the Lelaps in the Exeter News-Letter is so exceedingly thin that the Lelaps deem it unnecessary for further reply, their only desire being to establish the fact that they have not deceived their Portsmouth friends by stating that they won the race with the Exeter crew. Not one of the Lelap crew would make a mis-statement in the matter, and their original statement is confirmed by several bargemen belonging in Exeter, who saw the race and have stated in Portsmouth that it was fairly won by the Lelaps.

Flocks of geese were observed flying in a southerly direction over Portsmouth on Monday.

The light of the fire at Haverhill, Mass., was plainly seen by the city watchmen here, early Sunday morning.

The Boston papers, particularly the Transcript and Advertiser, spread themselves on the Universalist centennial.

A salute was fired at the navy yard on Monday, the occasion being the arrival of Commodore Reynolds, chief of bureau of equipment and recruiting.

Just as our new pen was in good running order to chronicle skating accidents, a merciful Providence covered the ponds with a half-foot of snow. "The best-laid schemes of mice and men aft gang aglee!"

The Times thinks it fortunate that George Washington visited Portsmouth nearly a hundred years ago instead of at present. He would undoubtedly have been followed by a crowd of democratic patriots anxious to sel their votes for a job.

Changes will be noticed in the Eastern Railroad time-table. The first train to this city now leaves Boston at 7.20; the 10 A. M. train from that city is discontinued; the 3.15 P. M. train is changed to 3, and arrives here at 5.30; and the 3.15 P. M. train from this city is discontinued.

An Intelligent Cat.

[Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise.]

We hear many stories of canine intelligence, but the stories of feline smartness are less numerous. Policeman Hayton, of this city, however, has a cat which yesterday gave evidence of more than ordinary cat sense. This cat is of the Thomas persuasion. Yesterday this cat came to its master and by scratching at his legs and "yowing" intimated there was something up. Thinking that this behaviour in his cat indicated that he desired something to eat, Mr. Hayton gave the cat a slice of beef, when the animal at once ran away with it. In about a minute he reappeared and again began begging. Mr. Hayton thought it strange that the cat was so hungry, but cut another slice of beef. This the cat took in his mouth and again took himself off. Mr. Hayton followed him, and was somewhat astonished to see him go out upon the sidewalk and drop the meat through a knot hole. On going to the place and looking through the knot hole Mr. Hayton found under the walk three small kittens, so young that their eyes were scarcely open. No mother cat was near, nor was there a place anywhere in the vicinity where a cat could have found a hole through which to have crawled under the walk. It would seem that in his rambles Mr. Hayton's "Thomas" had found the kittens, and, surmising or understand from their cries that they were hungry, had set about providing for their wants in the manner related above.

—The other day a railway accident evoked this bit of evidence:

"Having put my great-coat inside the carriage, I got upon the step to go inside myself."

We have heard people described as being "self-contained," and this epithet we fancy is the right one to apply to a person who is able to go inside himself.

Readables.

The great California race for $20,000 on Saturday was won by Thad Stevens. True Blue broke a leg.

The largest fire ever known in Haverhill, Mass., occurred Sunday. Forty thousand feet of territory in the best built portion of the city were burned over; eighteen buildings were destroyed, among them one of the best manufacturing buildings in the city; 35 firms, mostly shoe manufacturers, were burned out. Amos George and Amos C. Heath were killed and several other persons were injured. The loss is estimated at between $175,000 and $180,000, and the insurance about $140,000. The fire was discovered in a shoe factory owned by George Green. While Messrs. George and Heath were in Gilman's building, saving their goods, a barrel of shoemaker's cement exploded in an adjoining building throwing down a wall in the Gilman building. Both men were burned beyond recognition.

—A very prudent man in Danbury provides himself with an extra hat for the month of November. He carries it in his coat-tail pocket, and when the wind lifts the one from his head he straightway jams on the other, and then puts after the first and thus not only saves much chaffing from the unregenerate, but actually gets credit as a philanthropist—the general impression being that he is in pursuit of somebody else's hat.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-leaf style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new. E. DE Q. NORTON.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

D. H. MONTGOMERY.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL

CATARRH REMEDY.

To Messrs. Littlefield & Co., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Hunkler, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 13 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save my life from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over now. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Snuffs and Lotions are only temporary relief. The CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY strikes at the root, builds up the constitution, makes it new, and drives away Catarrh and all diseases of the mucous membranes and their attendant pains and aches, pertaining to head, back, shoulders, kidneys, and throat.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

The Mystery of Hard Times.

A Dayton, Ohio, journal endeavors to clear up this mystery a little by publishing some statistics that ought to be impressive. It shows that in that city of thirty thousand inhabitants there are 540 bar-rooms, which consume daily nine barrels of common whiskey, 400 kegs of lager beer and as many of ale, to say nothing of the finer kinds of wines and liquors, which are used to a considerable extent. Besides the above, the local consumption of tobacco amounts to 15,000 cigars, 200 pounds of smoking and 120 pounds of chewing tobacco daily. The editor, after a careful study of the figures, ciphers out that a bar-keeper, at ten cents a drink gets $300 for a barrel of whiskey that costs forty. This does not mean hard times for Ass, certainly, whatever may be the case with those who gave him the profit of $260 per barrel. The expenditure of Dayton for whiskey, malt liquors and tobacco is more than five times what it lays out for bread. The figures of our foreign trade balances are not so important as these, to a great many people at least.

—The man who ran against Abby Gifford for school superintendent in Iowa, and received eight votes, concludes that this an off year in politics.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

WILLIAM CRITCHLEY,
Agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, more by one out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron in Water, seems to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It improves the quantity of blood, is a Tonic, Invigorating Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

CARRIAGE WORK,

[Would solicit a continuance of patronage.]

"Unquestionably the best sustained work of the kind in the World."

Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved taste.—Boston Globe.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture thus far in its career, if it be kept up to the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public patronage. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals on similar chase, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—also utterly without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel photos," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of fine art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure picture, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longing of her heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

CANVASSERS WANTED.

Any person wishing to act permanently as a local canvasser will receive full and prompt information by applying to

The Country Gentleman.

Volume for 1874.

THE CULTIVATOR & COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, for the past forty years, has ranked, both in this country and abroad, as the STANDARD JOURNAL OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. The Editors and Proprietors, in addition to their own personal labors, are regularly assisted by a very large number of Special Correspondents and Regular Contributors, among whom are included many Leading Agriculturists, in all parts of the Country, East and West—and by over Five Hundred Occasional and Voluntary Writers, directly in the ranks of the Best Farmers and Horticulturists of nearly every State in the Union. With the co-operation of so large a corps of practical men, this Journal is intended to possess exceptional value as the chosen Medium of Intercommunication among all classes interested in the Products and Fertility of the land—those who Cultivate and those who Consume—the Buyer and Shipper, as well as the first Owner of the crop—Breeders of Improved Animals and their Customers—Manufacturers of Improved Machinery and those who purchase and employ it—Nurserymen and Fruit Raisers—and, especially, to supply fuller and better data as to the progress, prospects and returns of each successive Season, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and when to Sell.

TERMS.—The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is published weekly, on the following terms, to be paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; FOUR COPIES, $10, and one additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

"A New Thing Under the Sun."
SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!
Never before was such an idea attempted for book illustration; every one who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,
Woman in Sacred History,
is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scriptural, historical and legendary sources, ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the
make it one of the most unique, original and remarkable books ever offered. The sale of the Pictures if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $32; while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with sumptuous bindings of the same volume, can be had for one-fifth of that amount. A Hot Moon.

Prof. Proctor has been delivering a series of interesting lectures before the Lowell Institute, Boston. On Friday evening he devoted an hour to a description of the moon. He said that he had lately read the results of an investigation of the perturbation of Uranus by Neptune, which had been recently made by Professor Newton, and which seemed to dispose of this discussion. The conclusion arrived at seems to him to prove that there are no planets existing outside of Neptune, certainly none which influence Uranus. In this place he thought it proper to call attention to a fact which he had noticed with American writers, and that was that they did not give Adams full credit. He wanted it to be fully understood that Adams had obtained his results some time before Le Verrier, and his being prevented by others from putting them to the test ought not to militate against him. Then Mr. Proctor proceeded to his subject. There is so much known about the moon, he said, that it would be sufficient to occupy twelve lectures in speaking of it alone. He proposed to leave untouched as much as possible those things so easily found in the text-books, to speak only of the more interesting matter; hence this must not be considered a complete treatment of it. We must not look upon the moon as designed for our satellite alone. We regard it as circling about the earth; but if we saw its orbit from another planet, it would appear like our earth's. We must consider it as a fifth planet. Its diameter is 2160 miles, its surface is one-thirteenth, its volume one-forty-ninth and its mass one-eighty-first of the earth's. The service it does the earth is varied. It forms the light of our nights for only a portion of the time. La Place has questioned whether a moon could not have been constructed so as to give light always. But this does not seem its chief work. By its motion it renders its greatest service, as the measurer of time. There would be no marking of the months, no minor division of the time, if the moon was arranged as La Place's speculation suggested. The moon, too, is the chief cause of the tide, and its power here is greater than the sun's. If we represent the moon's power by 5 the sun's would be represented by 2. If they acted together the force would be the sum of the two, and if oppositely the result would be the difference of the two. We have thus a constant variation which is of value in many ways; whereas by La Place's method we should have tides of constant height. We shall briefly consider the telescopic appearances of the moon which are to be illustrated in a later lecture by Rutherford photographic views shown by the oxy-hydrogen light. So soon as we look at it with a telescope of moderate power, we are struck by the varied appearance of the hills and valleys, the mountains and craters; the latter are present in large numbers, being counted by thousands, and their peculiarities are well marked. We are able to measure the height of the mountains by the length of the shadows they cast. Everywhere we see traces of volcanic action which is far wider spread than on the earth. As craters are regarded as the safety-valves by which gaseous matter escapes from the interior of a globe, we are led to inquire why so many craters were wanted. They appear to overlap one another; and some one of them is large enough to allow what gas might be contained in the moon to escape.

Professor Proctor had thought that these marks which appeared like craters might be really due to impressions made by meteors which had fallen upon the moon when it was in a plastic condition. He did not ask us to accept the theory, it was only a fancy of his; but it takes a very startling theory to account for so many craters. It has been suggested that they might be due to bubbles forming and breaking when the moon was plastic, just as bubbles form and break when carbonate of soda is fused; and he should show by the calcium light, pictures of such a fused mass which might be mistaken for the moon. He thought it impossible that a bubble half a mile in diameter could be formed, for the substance would not cohere. It is a well-known but very significant fact that the moon never presents but one side to us. It turns once on its axis in its revolutions about the earth. This must have been the relation at the starting. His theory for the formation of the moon was that it was in a nebulous condition while the earth was forming, and that the nebulous matter of the earth extended out beyond it and enclosed it. That as it began to form its rotation was more and more retarded by the matter of the earth, and it came almost to a stand-still. The material of the earth then receded, and the moon, being left outside, cooled rapidly. The earth then acted as a sun to it, gave it warmth; and it was then, if ever, in a condition to support life. We say that it revolves at a regular rate, but as a matter of fact its time of revolution is changing and becoming slightly accelerated. It might be thought, then, that we might see, at some time, the other side of it; but the fact is, the earth has a retarding effect which prevents this.

We next move to the question of the moon's atmosphere. There is no doubt as to the absence of water. We never see any change in the moon's appearance, nor any clouds. But we are not so sure as to the atmosphere. We find by a comparison of the mass and surface of the moon, that atmosphere, if it exists, must be one-sixth of what exists on the earth; and that, consequently, as its gravity is one-sixth of the earth, the pressure at its lowest point must be one-thirty-sixth of our atmosphere at the sea-level. Some of the facts which led us to believe that there is no atmosphere are that, when a star passes behind the moon, it disappears instantaneously, not gradually; if it is a double star, one is lost completely, while the other is visible. The spectra of a star give the same result. Day and night, too, is very sharply marked. We pass immediately from the brightest light to the blackest shadow. Since there is no water, we can suppose no life. Some say that the flat plains are old ocean beds. If so, where has the water gone? The lecturer proposed a theory some eight years ago, that the water and the atmosphere were frozen solid; but when we consider the intensity of the sun's heat this must be abandoned. Then it was held that a comet had caused the flood, and that another was coming to destroy the earth; and that some comet in passing by the moon had brushed off its waters. This was when comets were supposed to play all sorts of tricks; but this is now seen to be absurd. Another theory supposed that large caverns were formed by the cooling into which the ocean and air had found their way; but this would require an enormous cavity. The most important theory is connected with the moon's motion, and was based on the statement of Hansen, that the centre of gravity was on one side. It was thought then that the water and air were on the opposite side from us. A discovery made soon after seemed to confirm this; but it really confuted it, for it showed that an extra quantity of water was on the side toward us. The lecturer then diverged a little to sketch the history of the Moon Hoax. We next, he afterward said, came to the supply of heat of the moon. It is exposed to the full heat of sun for 14 3-4 days, and it becomes heated very highly. Lord Rosse has finally succeeded, by the aid of mirrors, in proving that it gives not only reflected but radiant heat. There must be great changes on its surface, for during the 14 days it is exposed to the sun, it acquires a temperature above the boiling point of water, and during the other 14 days the temperature sinks to 100 degrees below 0.

The lecturer then showed some pictures of the sky as it would appear from the moon. As there is no atmosphere we should see from its surface, when the sun was below the horizon, the earth brightly illuminated, displaying the conformation of its continents and oceans, and each marked by their distinctive colors. When the sun was above the horizon we should see the body of it with its oceans and protuberances and the zodiacal light. The stars would be visible at the same time, and the heavens would present a glorious appearance. The earth would appear 13 times as bright as the moon does to us. The lecturer illustrated by drawing the relative positions of the earth and moon as they would appear from one of the other planets, and explained from this drawing how eclipses occur. The next lecture will be upon the evolution of the solar system.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1873.

President Grant

Is a man of few words and moderate views. Sympathizing always with the Cubans, he has nevertheless withheld action in aid of their cause, that Spain might not feel unduly aggrieved. The recognition of belligerency to the insurgents would have led to immediate war, and though the President is the man in the right place in such a contingency, he is none the less inclined for peace when peace can be maintained without the loss of national honor. His course since the reception of the news of the cruel butchery at Santiago de Cuba has been especially satisfactory. It is understood that the Cabinet supports the demands he has made on Spain. To be at peace a nation should be prepared for war. No person better understands the advantage of preparation than President Grant. The demand on Spain having been made, no answer can be expected before the 27th. It is not the province of the Executive to declare war. Diplomatic usage and courtesy prevent at this time a publicity of the correspondence between the United States and Spain, but the preparations being made at the naval stations show that great importance is attached to the reply of Senor Castelar.

Congress will be in session in two weeks, and being the war-making power will first be acquainted with the answer of Spain through the President's message. Government is engaged in collecting facts in regard to the capture of the Virginius and particulars of the execution of her crew and passengers, being careful not to act upon assumption or unconfirmed reports. President Grant shares with the public their denunciation of the capture on the high seas of a vessel sailing with a regular clearance under the United States flag, and the startling events which so quickly followed. Spain never having considered the island of Cuba in a state of war, and there being no proclamation by the United States according belligerent rights to the insurgents, the Virginius, if regularly cleared for the island of Cuba, had a right to enter Havana or any other open port of the Spanish possessions. This government did not recognize any right on the part of Spain in the present state of affairs to interfere in any manner with our merchant ships upon the seas, except in the usual right in her own ports, or within one marine league of the coast of any of her dominions. As a matter of course it is the determination to protect our citizens in all their rights and to compel respect to the flag. The present naval preparations were with this view; not to initiate war, but to be prepared for all possible contingencies. The situation is full of interest. The Executive and the people are in accord and await the assembling of Congress with impatience.

Grave Complications.

A Washington special to the Advertiser says: While our authorities have no formal answer from Spain to the demand made in connection with the Virginius affair, it has information which renders the situation more grave than had been expected. From the first there has been no doubt entertained but that the Castelar government would co-operate in a friendly and energetic manner in righting whatever wrong has been done us in Cuba. Information to-day, however, leads to a fear that feeling is running so high in Spain as to compel the government to act very coolly toward the United States in order to maintain itself, and that it will even be obliged to declare war against us the moment our government makes a move toward enforcing its demands in Cuban affairs. The intimation received is that in spite of the friendly feelings of Castelar he will not be able to make such a response to the demands of the United States as was expected, and as he would like to make. On our own part the matter seems to have progressed too far for modification, and so altogether the position is regarded as quite by our authorities as extremely grave.

It is admitted by all public men here that if hostilities should be determined upon it would be necessary to increase taxation largely, and that the effect upon the national finances would be of a most depressing character. At the Treasury it is maintained that even if military movements should begin with the absolute certainty that they would continue a very few months, still the expenditures which would become necessary simply to inaugurate a show of hostilities would go far toward wiping out the reduction of the debt of last year.

The Chronicle is supposed to state the views of the administration in the following extract: We have no real cause of quarrel with Spain, for she is evidently unable longer to control Cuba. The latter has outgrown her pupilage. She has, in fact, thrown off Spanish authority and is acting herself. Her recognition of Spanish authority is merely nominal and is no longer real. The time has therefore come requiring our government to deal directly with the people of Cuba. We can no longer with self-respect permit Cuba to wear the semblance of subordination to Spain as a cloak for her bloody and cruel wrongs. As she refuses longer to obey just and reasonable commands of the parent government and assumes the right to act for herself, we are justified in regarding her no longer as a minor, but of lawful age and in holding her directly responsible for her own conduct.

An Indignation Meeting

Of Cuban and American citizens was held Monday night in New York. Hon. William M. Evarts presided. He said this government had a complete understanding with Spain to the effect that every citizen of our country taken by them for any act, should have a trial before the proper tribunal and have competent legal defenders. If there was peace between these countries no matter of what crimes these men were guilty, under the law of nations they should have been called to account by the country to which they belonged. The laws of piracy allowed any nation that wished to punish the offenders, but there was no evidence to show that the Virginius was a pirate. Still, if she was a pirate we held that the law could not be carried out in her case without trial, condemnation or conviction. Away then with the idea that our citizens are to be dealt with as though they were engaged in marauding. Do not fear but the President of the United States is imbued with the same feeling as pervades this meeting. We dealt with Cuba as a community, and we intend to have redress for these outrages (loud and prolonged cheers) and security, perfect and absolute security, that no such disgraceful butcheries should ever again be repeated. (Renewed applause)

Hon. Samuel S. Cox next spoke. He said that a ship equipped under our flag was a portion of our territory; that the flag of a country covered and protected both the crew and cargo of a vessel, and stamped it as the property of the country to which the vessel belonged. Was there any grace to be shown to Spain because she was pushing for republicanism, or any to Castelar, who wielded the power over the blood hounds at Cuba. Spain had always been the butcher of the hemisphere. Her flag showed it, having a river of blood with a margin of gold emblazoned upon it. Her power was lessening in this country, but as she was leaving it her skirts were bedraggled with blood. Since 1869 she had sent 107,000 soldiers to that island with armaments of war to subdue its one million and a half of inhabitants and yet she says there is no war in that island. During all that period of war Spain took no prisoners because she brutally murdered them in cold blood. The speaker had there a book which he called the book of blood, giving the names and residences of 2000 of their victims, and 2500 have been banished into exile. We might have been well prepared for these executions at Santiago, unheard of in the history of any nation. What was the remedy? [Cries of "war; war."] At the same time he did not wish to embarrass the government of General Grant. We had been protesting against the tyrannous conduct of Spain but now was the time for action. We wanted no alliance with England in this business, as had been made in Europe, when Greece was wrested from the Turk; but if England did not interfere for her citizens who were slaughtered he was very much mistaken in old John Bull. He had repeatedly urged that the independence of Cuba should be recognized by these northern States, as she had already been recognized as a free country by Peru, Chili and the southern States.

Hon. William A. Darling spoke briefly and thought that Congress, next month, should give the President leave to act as he desired, and a million of men would spring at once to arms and avenge the insult offered to our country.

Letters were read from Henry Wilson, Vice-President of the United States, Governor John A. Dix of New York, Governor Joel Parker of New Jersey, Governor Charles R. Ingersoll of Connecticut, Governor Hendricks of Indiana, Henry Ward Beecher, John W. Forney of Philadelphia, and Hon. Gerritt Smith.

A War with Spain

Would postpone indefinitely the payment of the public debt and necessarily increase taxation. Following a stagnation in business would come an irresistible demand for inflation of our currency. With the issue of more currency, we will be subject to a rise and values of stocks in trade fluctuate. To offset this, trade would find new channels and an artificial demand for labor, born of the necessity of strengthening the national navy by building war vessels and manufacturing ordnance, would be created. No real prosperity to the people can come through war long continued. To act with promptness, and should fighting ensue make it short, sharp and decisive, would be government's safest course. A few speculators, contractors and officials might desire the prolongation of hostilities, but the masses would lose rather than gain by such a course.

Heath was about forty-five, and leaves a wife and three children. Daniel Daniels, Alpheus Currier and Deacon Snow narrowly escaped a horrible death. The same wall which buried George and Heath fell upon these three also, completely covering them. Before the dust had cleared away, police officer Nolan sprang upon the pile of rubbish, and seizing a large beam which was lying near where he had seen the men just before the fall, he succeeded in raising it with the mass of brick and laths. He was fortunately in just the right place, for immediately the head of Mr. Daniels, who was not visible before, appeared, and he was assisted out. Mr. Currier and Deacon Smith followed through the same hole. In five minutes more the entire heap was a mass of flames. Mr. George was burned to a crisp, little remaining but his trunk. Mr. Heath was not so badly disfigured.

Strength of the Spanish and American Navies.

The Navy Register of the present year affords timely statistics regarding the strength of the United States Navy. Ranking as first-rate, we possess five screw vessels, carrying 197 guns. Under second rate we have twenty-nine screw vessels and two paddle, mounting 532 guns. As third-rate, we have ninetteen screw and three paddle, mounting 123 guns. As fourth-rate, we have four paddle and one screw, carrying 76 guns. In sailing vessels as second-rate, we have twenty-five, carrying 365 guns; as fourth-rate we have four, carrying 15 guns. The iron-clad navy numbers fifty-one vessels, carrying 127 guns. Forty-five vessels are now on duty in the various squadrons.

The Spanish Navy contains nine iron clads, mounting 236 guns; ten first class wooden frigates, mounting 421 guns; twenty-six second-class wooden frigates, carrying 104 guns; eleven third-class wooden frigates, carrying 61 guns, and seven gunboats, carrying 20 guns.

Caleb—A Life Sketch.

[Laertes" in Washington cor. N. Y. Graphic.]

If you do not know Caleb Cushing you can have no acquaintance with Hamilton Fish, Mr. Sumner, or anybody of that sort. Since the beginning of this Government, Caleb has brought it up by hand. He turned William Pitt over across his knee and revised the Jay Treaty. Elbridge Gerry would run around the corner when he saw him coming. He flew kites with Benjamin Franklin, and used to birch both Metternich and Talleyrand. This miscreant, Sir Alexander Cockburn, whom he flayed in a recent book for making faces at him in Geneva, was compelled to see Caleb "Cushing" get up and say:

"I know you, sirrah! Your mother seems to have been a French lady by the name of Yoland Vinegar. Sir George, your uncle, has left some unpleasant traces or memories in the United States. You were in a Creed Mobilier with David Pacifico, and, yet, with the devotion of a Palestry, you place your lance at the service of a chief regardless of the merits of the cause."

Cockburn asked whether there was anybody by the name of "Bill Parr" in the Commission, and went off and got drunk. His friends, however, said that Cushing had only drawn a mental picture of himself, and was Dedeyed from crown to toe. Caleb represents all the governments of the world but the United States, and whenever there is a contest between an American citizen and any other citizen he is forninst the American. However, he makes it all up by proving to the State Department and a large part of the press—for which he writes anonymously—that the American citizen can never be right, because all the precedents were made before his time.

He has just composed a new book, with Bancroft Davis for a literary apprentice. They put all the treaties we ever made in a hopper and reduced them to sausage, which was afterwards subjected to hydrostatic pressure and compressed into covers. No accident has yet befallen this book like that which overtook their previous literary venture. "The American Case," which they were so proud of that they had it translated into all dead and contemporary languages—Cochin-China, Feejee, Indiana, and Greek—and sent off to the libraries and book reviewers. In this way the English got it first and raised a howl. Mr. Fish was indignant.

"How did this Case get out in advance of my permission!" he said.

"I don't know," said Bancroft. "Do you, Cushing; you know everything?"

"Oh! yes," said Caleb, with perfect sincerity, "old Billy Hunter, who is getting childish, dropped it out of his pocket. Ned Thornton ran out and picked it up. Seeing that it was past recovery, I wrote all the English diatribes myself to prevent the mercenary foreign journalists from making anything."

Mr. Cushing is a beautiful man with an unknown age, the whole of which he has passed in bachelorhood, saving his intellect for the State Department. He has a Websterian stature, a large head scarcely gray, a complexion like a silver milled dollar which has the ambition to become a gold one, no beard, and a trading eye. He has three prime qualities in equal degree—memory, business, and disinterestedness. He contemplates celebrating his eventual life by an act of liberality as remarkable as his career. He offers the accumulations of his life in the services of every government to build a library and endow it with 2,401,002 books which he has read, and all the titles of which he remembers, on a satisfactory answer being given to the following questions: "Have I any convictions? If so, how many? If so many, what of it?"

Business Notices.

"The Universal Ayer." On my journeys over the continent—through Turkey, India, China, Japan, Peru, Chili, Paraguay, Brazil, Mexico, and the United States—in them all to some extent, and in some to a great extent, I have found the UNIVERSAL AYER represented by his family medicines, which are often held in fabulous esteem. Whether they win their marvelous reputation by their cures, I know not, but I know they have it to such a degree that it frequently gave me a distinguished importance to have come from the same country.—[Field's letters from abroad.

Medical Bubbles.

Columns would be required to enumerate the medical bubbles that have risen to the surface and burst since Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of the Western Hemisphere. Beside the most extravagant fabrications the most preposterous, cant the most sickening, have in turn been employed to bolster up the worthless preparations that have from time to time been introduced, in the hope of dividing the gold without giving equitable remedy. Signal failure has been the lot of each and all. The reputation of the Bitters as a preventive of epidemics, a stomachic, an invigorant, a general restorative, and a specific for indigestion, billious affections, rheumatism, nervous debility, constitutional weakness, paroxysmal fevers, and all complaints to which the more sensitive sex are exclusively liable, is established upon the sound basis of more than twenty years' experience, and can no more be shaken by the clap-trap nostrums of unscientific pretenders than the overlasting hills by the winds that rustle through their dells.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by whom countless series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Local Matters.

S. J. Court.

The jury in the Deerfield case of girdling trees disagreed on Tuesday, after being out sixteen hours.

The suit of heirs of Robert Norton vs. Eastern Railroad was then put on trial.

As Mr. William A. Peirce entered the Court room, Tuesday, he was astonished by hearing his name called in a loud tone by Deputy Sheriff Lougee. Eleven jurymen had been obtained and a twelfth was wanted, therefore Mr. Peirce was informed that he would just fill the bill. He was appointed foreman of the jury.

Police Court.

Rumney Sullivan, a laborer on the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, was brought before Judge Bufford on Tuesday on a charge of forgery. He had worked seven days for the road and received in payment an order on Mr. John H. Wells, which he altered to seventeen days and received pay for. He was held in the sum of $300 to appear at the April term of the S. J. Court.

Laconics.

Robert Porter, the eleventh juror in the Stokes case, is arraigned for bribery.

U. S. Steamer Ada is reported lost with all on board.

It is reported that the Kearsarge mills will shortly suspend work for three weeks.

Several hundred crows passed over this city, Tuesday, following their fellow insects, the geese, in a southerly direction. A flock of mosquitoes is expected to-day.

An unknown vessel has been wrecked off Nahant. All on board probably perished, Schooner Mary Remick, on York beach has, gone to pieces. Schooner Excelsior is reported sunk at Marblehead.

It is said that the Boston and Maine Railroad is considering the feasibility of running a branch road from Exeter to Hampton and Rye Beaches, terminating in Portsmouth, probably at the South End.

The train due here from Portland at 5.06 P. M., Monday, struck a man named Ferris who was walking on the track and sat down in the snow when the engine whistled, near Kennebunk. He was badly hurt about the head.

The frigate Franklin, launched at this naval station in 1864, carries 39 guns and registers 3173 tonnage. She has a new set of boilers, and needs only work upon her batteries. The Franklin and Brooklyn are being fitted for sea at Charlestown and will be ready in six weeks.

Panic never decreases the death-rate, and so while other business languishes, the marble workers continue. Mr. John S. Treat is so over-run with contracts that his whole force is working extra hours. We observed at his marble-works, on Monday, a tablet preparing for the last resting place of the late Samuel Cleaves, the design representing a sheaf of wheat surmounted by a sickle. The workmanship is fine. Mr. Treat is also engaged in getting out a massive monument for the lot of Mr. George Bilbruck. It will be seventeen feet high, have a granite base and be surmounted by a figure of "Hope."

The storm which commenced here on Sunday is one of the most severe that has visited the New England States in November since 1848. Monday night, snow commenced falling again and the wind blew furiously. Tuesday morning there was a foot of damp snow on the ground and a drenching rain set in. The barometer in the store of Mr. H. H. Ham shew a lower temperature than he had ever noticed before. On Monday, a cyclone centred near Cape Hatteras and was advancing in a north-easterly course. It may not reach this vicinity but the barometer indicates a high wind. The morning Boston train arrived Tuesday nearly on time, but the up-trains were two hours late, as also was the down train from Concord.

Railroad Connections.

A Boston paper stated recently that the Eastern Railroad was contemplating an arrangement with the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad, whereby direct communication was to be had with Montreal. This would necessitate the building an independent road from Sheldon, Vt., to Montreal, twelve miles of which are completed. It seems that the Central Vermont, the Passumpsic, and the Boston, Concord and Montreal railroads all wanted to make a connection between the western division of the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad in Vermont, and a line of road held under two charters from the Dominion Government, extending from the Province line to Montreal, that would insure an independent through line by ownership of contract to the seaboard at Portland or Boston. The directors of the Eastern Railroad went to Montreal, conferred with the managers of the Canadian line, and upon their return made an offer of aid in the shape of a traffic guarantee if the several sections of the road would tie themselves together irrevocably, and agree by contract with the Eastern Company that the business bound for Boston should not be switched off of their line at its connection with the Boston, Concord and Montreal and other roads above named, but should come through as far as North Conway. The points where this business might pass off of the through line are at Swanton and Essex Junction (Vt.) to the Central Vermont, at St. Johnsbury, Vt., to the Passumpsic, and at Whitefield, N. H., to the Boston, Concord and Montreal road. If this arrangement is perfected a large business is assured to pass over the whole consolidated line from Montreal to North Conway, besides resulting in a connection at Montreal that will insure the transportation of the freight destined to Eastern Maine, to the lower provinces and to most of the foreign steamers that take their freight from Portland. This whole matter is now under consideration, but no contract or arrangement has yet been agreed upon.

The Boston & Maine Railroad Report.

The directors of the Boston & Maine Railroad have submitted to the stockholders the following report, exhibiting the result of the operations of the road for the year ending September 30, 1873:—

The gross receipts for the year ending September 30, 1873, were	$3,300,993 68
The operating expenses were	1,727,825 00
Net earnings for the year	$1,573,168 68

Being a little more than eight per cent. upon the whole capital authorized.

The gross earnings of the twelve months ending September 30, 1872, were	$3,046,142 39
And the expenses for the same were	1,821,201 60
Showing an increase in the receipts of the present year over the previous year	$225,951 49
And in the expenses	185,720 00
The net income for the year ending September 30, 1872, was	$1,224,940 79
Showing an increase in the net income of the present year over the previous year of	68,192 49

The passenger and freight business of the past year, as compared with that of the year previous, stands as follows:—

1873.
Passengers carried	4,133,469
Passengers carried one mile	97,217,473
Tons of freight carried	1,000,728
Tons of freight carried one mile	20,760,207
1872.
Passengers	3,908,674
one mile	91,726,426
Tons of freight carried	972,604
Tons of freight carried one mile	20,917,703

Showing a net gain of 372,605 passengers; and for one mile, 4,512,981; and in freight a gain of 21,282 tons; and for one mile of 158,457 tons.

During the year they have added to the equipment 18 new passenger cars, including 3 parlor cars; 1 long baggage car, besides 177 freight cars; 1 long freight buggy car, and 1 snow plough. They have also added two first-class passenger and four first-class switching engines. They have now 120 passenger cars, including 8 parlor cars; 1400 freight cars, and 69 locomotives.

The whole length of road constructed by this corporation is 126 1-2 miles. The whole length now operated, including the Danvers, Newburyport, Dover and Winnipesaukee and West Amesbury Branch railroads is 192 1-4 miles.

The New York Election.

For Secretary of State, Thayer, republican, 293,095; Willers, democrat, 298,558; democratic majority, 5463. For Controller, Hopkins, republican, 297,333; Nichols, democrat, 291,199; republican majority, 5834. For Inspector of State Prisons, Platt, republican, 295,967; Millspaugh, democrat, 291,861; republican majority, 4106. The vote of the State is 163,678 less than in 1871.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that, in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs, may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC FORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost it can be replaced at small cost, and the time lost by the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible travelling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will find to be a decided improvement. Orders left out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part exchange. Pianos, $5 to $10.

As my business requires my whole attention at the present time, I do not solicit the patronage of those who would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Strangings, Pains in the Head, Back, Eyes, Nose, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL

CATARRH REMEDY.

TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N. H.:

I reside at Manchester N. H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in my stomach, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or coughs. My whole system is made over new. I know it is the medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work, and bear the greatest exposure, and feel like a person who say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MISS E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1872.

I am now 35 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered in your description with running at the nose, dropping in the throat, choking and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I procured your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

MISS M. J. CARRUTT,

No. 17 Manchester Corporation.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 27, 1872.

Too above lady is my mother. I am a painter by trade, and a member of the City Council of Manchester. Every word that my mother states is true.

JACOB J. ABBOTT.

Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Snuffs and Lotions are only temporary relief. '73 REUNION.

THE HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873, to be just published. It contains 96 pages octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th,

High School Reunion, 5th,

The Praise Meeting, 6th;

with continuing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of the work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at the Chronicle Office, J. H. Foster's Bookstore, and at Wm. H. Preston's.

A Valuable Invention.

A new and useful invention has just been introduced and is another contribution to the world of useful inventions, and comes from the West. It is a steam boiler detector gauge, to indicate too high pressure, low water, or the condition called foaming. The invention is so simple that it seems almost foolish. It consists mainly in a large copper ball attached to a pipe, which ends in the water of the boiler. The pressure of the steam keeps the ball full of water, and as soon as the water sinks below the bottom of the pipe the water in the ball discharges and of course relieves the shank of the ball of all weight, which rises immediately and allows of the opening of a valve which the weight of the water kept closed, and steam immediately passes through the attached whistle, sounding a most piercing warning. There is no necessity to pay any attention to the patent; it adjusts itself and never fails to warn of approaching danger. A company is soon to be formed for the purpose of introducing the invention to the manufacturers of New England.

—This is the sort of thing that the New York World could do every day in the week if it wanted to: "The democratic party stands, like the storm-beaten peak of Mount Washington, rock-rooted in the crust of the earth and buttressed with eternal hills, still lifting its hoary summit into the sky after clouds have hidden it for many days. The war clouds and the political storms which have obscured the democracy for a long period could no more annihilate its principles than concealing thick weather could drive away the mountains which tower in everlasting grandeur and whose foundations are as deep as the world. Democracy is the permanent creed of Americans."

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It remains the favorite article for dressing the hair, and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their natural vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it, "I consider it the best preparation for the intended purpose."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray to any natural undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and thoroughly produces a permanent color, which will not rub off nor wash off.

WILLIAM CRITCHLEY,
Agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The medals received all the final awards made to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other machine obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim enormous exaggerations for the Diplomas of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being the SINGER. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machine, which are thus appreciated by the public: superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these valuable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of international Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, in so combined a form as to have the character of an aliment, so easily digested and assimilated with the blood, the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Nothing Wearing Away Health and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out the secret cause, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Hip Disease, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Foundation.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, nervous, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has a PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents executed on reasonable terms with despatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are dispensed with by my agency.

NOTICES OF TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as among the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDWARD DUstarbuck BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we things into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has noticed the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white, although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to "THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send, "Daughters of Rome," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, or, instead, a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; each subscription must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the subscriber except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

The Country Gentleman.

Volume for 1874.

THE CULTIVATOR & COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, for the past forty-years, has ranked, both in this country and abroad, as the STANDARD JOURNAL OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. The Editors and Proprietors, in addition to their own personal labors, are ably assisted by a very large number of Special Correspondents and Regular Contributors, among whom are included many Leading Agriculturists, in all parts of the Country, East and West—and by over Five Hundred Practical and Eminent Writers, directly in the ranks of the Best Farmers and Horticulturists of nearly every State in the Union. With the co-operation of so large a corps of practitioners, this Journal is intended to possess exceptional value as the chosen Medium of Free Communication among all classes interested in the Products and Fertility of the Land—those who Cultivate, and those who Consume—the Buyer and Shipper, as well as the first Owner of the crop—Breeders of Improved Animals and their Customers—Manufacturers of Improved Machinery and those who purchase and employ it—Nurserymen and Fruit Raisers—and, especially, to supply fuller and better data as to the progress, prospects and returns of each successive Season, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and when to Sell.

TERMS.—The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is published weekly, on the following terms, when paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; TWO Copies, $4; and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club; TEN Copies, $25, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

"A New Thing Under the Sun."
SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!
Never before was such an idea attempted for book-illustration, every one who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,
Woman in Sacred History,
is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scriptural, historical, and legendary sources, ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the
make it one of the most unique, original and remarkable books ever offered. The pictures, if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $32, while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with sumptuous bindings of the volume, can be had for one-fifth of that amount. The book is making a tremendous excitement among the agents and salesmen, because it is absolutely NEW, and "has money in it." To get pleasant work and good pay, send for terms, circulars, &c., to J. B. FORD & CO., N. Y., Boston, Chicago, San Francisco or Cincinnati. tdl2

COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

The Death of Mrs. Crie.

An investigation of the cause of the death of Mrs. Crie has been held at Boston. Dr. Charles Eastman, the dentist under whose care the lady was at the time of her death, said he had been practising dentistry since 1840, and had used anæsthetics since they were first introduced; never had an accident till the present; Mrs. Crie had been his patient for twelve or fourteen years, and he has previously administered chloroform and gas to her, both severally and combined. He then related minutely all the circumstances attending the final administration. He said that Mrs. Crie came into his office on Monday week, about half-past eleven. He was just getting ready to extract a tooth for a Mrs. Sawyer, and while preparing the gas, this lady endeavored to persuade Mrs. Crie to take gas also, but she refused. He extracted Mrs. Sawyer's tooth, and she returning in four or five minutes, again urged Mrs. Crie to take gas. But the latter insisted on the ether, so they went into the operating room. At this point in answer to the coroner's inquiry, he said that he never measured the different parts; but, being so accustomed to handle the substances, he could guess correctly at the proportions. He continued his testimony as follows: in administering ether he always began gradually, holding the sponge some distance from the nose at first and then moving it nearer. Mrs. Crie said to him: "Give me enough this time, sure," and repeated it three times; but yet he didn't fully etherize her. After she had breathed it two or three minutes, he said to her that he was going to take the tooth out. She shook her head as much as to say she was not ready, but he proceeded. When he took hold of it she straightened back, groaning and screaming a little, as if in pain. After he had pulled the tooth she fell back into a rigid state, a sort of spasm; her lips were not much pallid, but her eyes were fixed and glassy; did not try the pulse, but seized a sponge and splashed cold water in her face. She seemed to revive a little, and sat up; then applied ammonia to her nose; but another change came rapidly over her, and he called for Mrs. Sawyer, who unloosed her corsets and at his request called the other doctors and sent a porter after a physician; Dr. Osgood rubbed her spine and applied very strong ammonia; they finally removed her to the large room, and tried to get up an artificial respiration, and then they sent for a battery which they tried; they worked over her till they were all obliged to come to the conclusion that she was past recovery; a coroner and an undertaker were sent for. In answer to inquiries the witness further said: Think about fifteen minutes elapsed after the tooth was extracted before she ceased to breathe; when the flush came over her face, thought she had recovered; it lasted about two minutes; as soon as she went back, called for help. In administering these anæsthetics, the witness said, being questioned on the point, two familiar shades are observed. There is one shade of faintness, and one from sickness to the stomach. These are perfectly distinct. Any one familiar with ether, chloroform or gas will observe the distinct shade passing over the face, and I have been so long familiar with the business that I know exactly, when I see them, whether it is sickness or a faint. Hers was a pallor from faintness. I had administered nitrous oxide gas to her once before, and several times the mixture of ether and chloroform, and also separately. Have no objection to using chloroform, and do not consider that there is any danger if it is properly applied; considering Mrs. Crie to be a person lacking somewhat in vitality, and, therefore, didn't choose to put her fully under the influence of ether; I don't think the dentists in this city are in the habit of using chloroform, and the majority of them will not use anything; can tell by the looks of a person whether it would be safe to administer anæsthetics; where they have any doubts, do not advise them to take it; suppose chloroform to be perhaps, the most dangerous anæsthetic, for it would decompose the blood quicker than ether, but the danger is in the administration of it, I think. I attribute my successful treatments and my patients number hundreds, to the fact that I always allow plenty of fresh air, never placing anything over the person's nose; have never used but one kind of chloroform. Squibbs; buy it in pound packages; keep it in a dark closet; don't know any difference in the quality of ether; always use Power and Weightman's; make about a couple of ounces of mixture at once; the chloroform is less than half, by volume; don't generally keep the mixture long; if I do I always add more ether; that which I gave to Mrs. Crie had been standing about a week. My reason for adding chloroform to the ether is that is safer; ether is a great stimulant, and when you add a little chloroform the patient is not so noisy and excited; that has been my reason, not that I had fear of one or the other. Could not tell how much chloroform I gave at this time, because I did not measure it. In case amputation was to be performed, I had as soon use chloroform as ether. Never heard of a person's dying from the effects of ether administered by a dentist. I consider the safest anæsthetic for a dentist's use to be ether, and this and chloroform combined, in my idea is much better to ether alone; never feel any anxiety when administering an anæsthetic.

The Virginius has been taken to Havana Hon. Isaiah Hanscom states that the Dictator, now at New London, will be ready for sea in ten days, and that in three weeks a fleet of fifteen or eighteen vessels will be ready to sail for Cuban waters. President Grant's ultimatum to Spain, in case reparation is refused, it is said will be the recognition of the republic of Cuba or its annexation to the United States. Spain is delaying the answer to the President's demands, it being thought that Castelar is willing to grant reparation but cannot do so at present. In case our government acts promptly without allowing further delay, the authorities at Washington have been informed that Castelar may be obliged to declare war. Arbitration is talked of as probable.

The evidence already at hand in the matter of the Virginius has confirmed the opinion of some of the officers of the Government that the Virginius must be conceded to have been a filibuster, and that our flag could not protect her within the marine league of Cuba.

Buster as a Civil Engineer.

[Columbus State Journal.]

Buster, an ingenious youth of four, went out to look at the street contractor one day last week. The man set up boulders in the gutter, and sprinkled sand over them, then another man took his driver and pounded them down solid. Buster reflected on that with some solemnity. You may remember that it rained on Saturday. Buster was confined to the house. He was driven to distraction nearly, by his labors in keeping his maternal parent out of mischief, during the day. Towards evening the maternal parent went to take a little nap, leaving Buster at liberty. That rising young engineer then went to the storeroom, with his father's best beaver, and gathered up six or seven dozen eggs. He set these all up nicely on the parlor carpet, as he had seen the man do with the boulders, making a tolerably straight gutter from the left foreleg of the piano, along the edge of the rug, though the curiosities and knick-knacks which had been piled up by the maid when she dusted in the morning. Buster then went back and filled the hat with corn-meal, which he sprinkled over the eggs, as the man sprinkled sand over the boulders. Then he pulled off his velvet jacket and laid it down on the edge of the gutter, and looked around for something that would do for a driver. His business like glance fell upon a roll of valuable pictures, brought from Europe on a substantial wooden roller, which seemed to be about the thing desired. Probably there never was another job of such civil engineering seen, as Buster made of that amateur gutter in about three minutes.

That night there were two things wanted by the house of Buster. Firstly, Mrs. Buster wanted to hear of some preparation that would remove battered egg and corn meal from carpet rugs, piano legs, velvet clothes, pictures, shell works, Japanese toys, Indian curiosities, mosaics, wood carvings from Nuremberg, Interlaken, and a thousand or two other articles of bigotry and virtue. Secondly, Master Buster would like to know what will remove or mollify the effects of sudden and violent percussion, rapidly and pertinaciously developed in that direction which General Scott left unprotected when he went to Mexico.

—"Do try and talk a little common sense!" exclaimed a sarcastic young lady to a visitor. "Oh!" was the reply, "but wouldn't that be taking an unfair advantage of you?"

—The old maxim that "man proposes" is flatly contradicted by Massachusetts spinsters, who only wish he did.

A Glance at the Enemy's Camp.

[Manchester Mirror.]

Alone among the Democratic editors of this State Foster, of the Dover Democrat represents the Democratic masses as against the Democratic managers, wire-pullers and fuglers, and consequently when we want to find out just what the democratic party won't do we consult Foster to see what he advocates. This year, as usual, he tells us openly and squarely what his party ought to do, what its honest voters would be pleased to have it do, and what its managers won't allow it to do. He has caught the hay-seed fever, and in discussing the coming Democratic convention says:

"There is a strong feeling abroad and increasing in intensity and force of volume every day, that we must go outside of the politicians for a candidate this time. We want a sound, able, honest and practical man now, whose life is a guaranty of fidelity to principle and to trust, whose name is the synonym of strict and unbending integrity so that people can feel the utmost confidence in a just and righteous administration of State affairs and the maintenance of the public honor in every emergency that may arise. He should come from amongst the working classes and be a successful and independent man, made such by his own energencies, and good financial judgment and skill.

He should be a farmer and the true representative of that majority class of our people, whose interests have been ignored or treated as of inferior importance in legislation and in almost every other respect for a long series of years, but whose claims must now come to the front and should be regarded as of primary and fundamental importance."

In conclusion, he suggests Hiram B. Roberts of Rollinsford as the man to fill the bill. If Judge Roberts is such a man as the Democrat represents him, it is safe to say that no democratic convention will ever nominate him for Governor.

For the past twenty-five years there hasn't been a democratic convention that wasn't cut and dried beforehand by less than a score of men—whom no motives of honesty or expediency could ever induce to forego the pleasure of managing the unterrified in their annual gatherings—and, though they have "managed" the party to death, they are alive and will continue to have things so nicely arranged that Brother Foster's visionary scheme of going "outside of the politicians for a candidate," stands no chance for adoption.

Indeed, a democratic convention which is not managed by Sinclair and Bingham and others of like stamp, in which Gen. Hunt or some other satellite don't make the motion, and which don't nominate candidates wholly inside the politicians, is so far beyond the range of possibilities, that only a man in the wildest deliriums of hay-seed fever could ever have conceived it, and we are surprised that Foster, with his lively imagination, can so far forget the way in which Bingham chalked the backs of the brethren, and led them up to vote like dumb beasts in the summer of '71, as to suggest such a thing.

Thus assured of what our opponents won't do, we come to inquire what they will, and to find out we consult the "organs," and first the Portsmouth Times, which, under the instruction of its masters, has got democracy narrowed down to anti-prohibition. It talks in this way:

"It is not probable that there are three Democrats in this city who will not most emphatically demand that the Democratic party, in its next State convention, place itself squarely upon a license law platform. They will do this because they believe the cause of temperance will be promoted by the enactment of such a law. It is no argument against such a law, that the liquor dealers favor it. Many of the dealers are as good temperance men as the most rabid and intolerant prohibitionist."

"This means for governor Albert R. Hatch. Hatch is a good lawyer, who was born hankering to be a governor, and who, in his uncessing struggle for the place, has tried every other available diet until he seems now to have got down to pure Rum. He is also in good and regular standing with the managers, who appreciate the self-sacrificing grace with which he has stood back these many years, and, if there were not half a dozen others who have been equally accommodating, and are equally willing to be managed, he would undoubtedly be nominated.

The Nashua Gazette will doubtless have a candidate when the time comes, but at present it is busy discussing the question whether the Democratic party ought to support Greeley.

Coming to our own city, the "organ" here is, as usual, devoting itself to digging out with a toothpick the boulders with which the war filled up the wells where Jeff used to water his horses, confidently expecting to find in them the springs of perpetual political life. It believes Weston to be the greatest northern statesman since Pierce, because under Weston it did the State printing; but it is the child of destiny as decreed by the ring, and will swallow any pill prepared for it with the same easy grace with which it changed managers during the war and supported Greeley last fall. It will know itself after Sinclair tells it.

At Concord, the People is for anybody to beat Stearns and Lyon. Its political faith is thirty-six miles long (from Concord to Nashua) and as wide as the Concord Railroad. The Patriot is silently biding its time, waiting for the succession when Bailey shall become eligible. Unless it makes a mistake, it won't say anything which will rise up against it or its owner in time to come.

The Newport Argus thrusts an unoffending Charlestown citizen by the name of Metcalf into an unenviable notoriety, by saying he would make a good Democratic candidate, and the Littleton Republic thinks Joseph Powers or Jeremiah Blodgett might be successfully pushed as "direct representatives of the hard working yeomanry of the State;" but, as the mouthpiece of friend Bingham, it is moved to say that Mr. Hatch would reflect great honor upon the Governor's chair.

John Proctor of Andover has left upon his family monument room for an inscription stating that the deceased was once Governor of New Hampshire, and is willing to pay any reasonable sum to have the blank filled. He has also been a devoted attendant upon all Agricultural Fairs in his section this fall, and at one time had such an attack of hay-seed fever that it took a two days' visitation by three political doctors to cure him. Wheeler of Keene will also think there has been a great mistake if he is not nominated, and there are ambitious Democrats in this Congressional District who would be pleased to see an end put to Sam. N. Bell by putting him at the head of the ticket.

Then there are others who have not deemed it advisable that their claims should be presented thus early, but who are sure to come up in good time.

Meantime the managers, certain that when they wish they can snuff out these innocent aspirants at a single sitting, allow them to nurse their ambition and to air their qualifications as a sort of a salve to the wounds which they must receive hereafter. By and by the order will go forth, and whether it be Hatch and License or Hatch and Prohibition, Proctor and Hay-seed, or Bell and the First Families, or something else, the convention will enact it with all the unanimity and enthusiasm of the arm-in-arm love-feast which nominated the Greeley ticket in this State last fall. The press will commend and the faithful will wonder how any other man than the nominee could possibly have been thought of.

We therefore feel warranted in advising our Democratic readers to give themselves no uneasiness about the matter, but to rest assured that in their own good time the men under whose direction they have cursed and worshipped Greeley will fix things all right. But, until this is done, it is absolutely unsafe for any Democrat to harbor an opinion as to whether he believes in license or prohibition, or as to who ought to be Governor. Such efforts are not only sure to be labor lost, but are liable to ripen into the rankest heresies.

A Mutton Millionaire.

The Kansas City Times has interviewed Senator P. C. Armijo, of the great sheep and wool raising firm of Armijo & Baca, of Albuquerque, New Mexico. Mr. Armijo is a young man, the son of the head of he house. The family have been engaged n the raising of sheep and wool for exportation East for several generations past. They are unable to estimate their herds accurately, but a rough guess aggregates the actual number as something over a half million. Years ago, when Kansas City was a shipping and trading point between New Mexico and the East, Mr. Armijo, Sr., used to ship his thousands of fleeces from Kansas City by river to St. Louis. It seems incredible for people living east of the great plains to realize the vast extent and innumerable herds of sheep raised yearly in the mild, dry climate of New Mexico. The family claims nearly 2,000,000 head of sheep, which are scattered over a range of country more than 300 miles square. In reply to a question whether the Indians troubled their immense herds, Mr. A. replied: We are not troubled by depredations to any serious extent. The Indians are troublesome at times, but we scarcely ever miss those they drive off or slaughter. They seldom kill our flocks wantonly, and only take for food when they pass one of our herds. He related an incident, in 1825, when the Apaches and Navajoes drove off $5,000 head at one raid, and thought that not less than 30,000 head been stolen by Indians since then. The Indians drove off about half the number between 1861 and 1865. "But," said Mr. Armijo, "we hardly miss them."

The Mexican sheep-raiser generally handles his herds in flocks of about three thousand head. Each of these herds is under the personal superintendence of a major domo or overseer, who is assisted by shepherds, for whom the sheep have a fond affection. At night these immense flocks collect close together around their shepherds and sleep peacefully, guarded by the well-trained dogs. The shepherds are paid from $10 to $15 per month the year round; the overseer about $25 per month. The herds roam at will over the boundless dry plains of New Mexico, without shelter the year through. They require no feeding, the nutritious gramma grass, peculiar to New Mexico, affording good pasturage in winter and summer. The Mexican sheep is smaller than American sheep, but are more healthy and hardy. They clip about two pounds of wool to the fleece; their wool is short and fine, and from all that can be ascertained by tradition handed down through several generations, were pure Spanish merinoes brought from Spain by Cortez's expedition. These great sheep raisers are now engaged in shipping large herds of sheep to Colorado. Mr. Armijo last season drove about twelve thousand head to Denver, and signifies his intention of doubling his drove next season. He says that with proper care and attention, sheep in sufficient numbers may hereafter be raised upon the plains of Kansas and Colorado to supply the entire world with mutton and wool.

During the conversation he related an incident of a man who, three years ago, purchased 3,500 head of sheep from Armijo and Baca at the low price of $2 each. To-day that man has 20,000 sheep, worth $50,000, to say nothing of the enormous profit accruing from the sale of wool during that time. And again he demonstrated the profits accruing from the purchase of 5,000 head. A man buys this number, and in six months he finds himself possessed of 10,000 sheep, one-half of the 5,000 increase being ewes, and the other wethers. Here is an increase of 100 per cent. in six months. The fleece on the 5,000 lambs can be sheared in the Fall, yielding two pounds each. The increase of sheep is more than compound interest twenty times compounded. Mr. Armijo says that, allowing for losses, there is nothing in the world to prevent a man from getting rich at sheep raising in five years.

Worn to a Shadow.

Flesh, muscle and mind alike deteriorate when the stomach falters in its duty and the bowels do not perform their part as scavengers of the system regularly and naturally. In such cases dyspepsia the body is usually emaciated, and the muscular fibre loose and flabby, and the brain incapable of prolonged or vigorous exertion. Every organ, every member, even the immortal mind itself, is to a certain extent dependent upon the stomach for support. Strengthen and regulate this central system with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, when it fails to perform its functions properly. A good appetite, an increased flow of the gastric juice, and perfect digestion and assimilation will assurredly be the result. The manner in which the great tonic and alterative effects a cure of dyspepsia is direct and simple. It stimulates the digestive organs, cleanses without convulsing the bowels, regulates the flow of bile and determines it into the right channels, and exercises a tranquillizing influence over the nerves.

On my journeys over the continent—through Turkey, India, China, Japan, Peru, Chili, Paraguay, Brazil, Mexico, and the United States—in them all to some extent, and in some to a great extent, I have found the UNIVERSAL AYER represented by his family medicines, which are often held in fabulous esteem. Whether they win their marvelous reputation by their cures, I know not; but I know they have it to such a degree that it frequently gave me a distinguished importance to have come from the same country.—[Field's letters from abroad.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Local Matters.

Fire.

The denizens of State street were startled about half-past five o'clock, Wednesday morning, by the cry of "fire." The Chroniclers, who were working off the regular morning edition, joined in the alarm and the fire department soon got their engines into the streets. The storm had left the streets in bad condition and the slippery sidewalks were resorted to. Sagamore Two's company got their hose-carriage into the middle of Court street, could not pull it, and shouldered the hose, marching down to the fire. The burning building proved to be the cooper shop of Mr. Ausel H. Harlow, and it was nearly down before the engines could arrive. The fire had communicated to the adjoining building, which was used as a store-house for lumber, lime and coal. Both buildings were owned by the Portsmouth Pier Co. The store-house was saved after a serious scorching. Mr. Harlow's loss is fully covered by insurance. The total loss is several hundred dollars. The fire was doubtless the work of an incendiary—but whether set by boys or by persons who did not like Mr. Harlow's activity in urging the enforcement of the liquor law is unknown. At the invitation of Mr. J. Albert Walker, the fire department partook of a bountiful breakfast at the National Hotel and Franklin House.

S. J. Court.

The jurors on the trial of the indictment against the Eastern Railroad are as follows: William A. Pierce, Portsmouth, Foreman; Elbridge G. Webster, East Kingston; Robert C. Sides, Alfred J. Hill, Edward Smith, Portsmouth; Henry Knowlton, Northwood; James C. Crombie, Auburn; Elisha Quimby, Danville; William J. Holmes, Rye; John Dame, Nottingham; Edward Sleeper, Chester; Joseph Emerson, Epping.

The case was given to the jury at 4 P. M. and at 4:45 they returned with a verdict of "guilty."

Howard M. Curtis, Esq., of Newcastle, arrived home on Wednesday with the long expected and anxiously looked for records which were stolen from the town in the time of George the Third.

Mattie Jones, of Arkansas.

[Missouri Republican.]

South Haven, Arkansas, has a progressive and dangerous woman—Miss Mattie Jones. This young girl was lately turned out of a school-house where an entertainment was in progress, and was heard to say as she left that she would burn the shanty over their heads. In a few minutes the school-house was on fire according to promise, and the entertainment came to a "lame and impotent conclusion." While the extraordinary spirit of the young woman was under discussion, another passage of her life was laid open. Her mother had died suddenly and mysteriously about six months before, and was gathered to the great family of Joneses. Now Mattie Jones has a brother—a fourteen-years-old boy—who overheard his mother and sister planning his father's death when he should return home from a short trip he was making into the wilds of Arkansas. They arranged to season his food with the spice of futurity, as they were both tired of seeing him round. Jones was expected home on a certain day, and on that day Mattie was away and Mrs. Jones was delirious with ague, and the boy was with his mother. Mrs. Jones asked her son to give her some coffee, forgetting in her delirium that she had made it specially for her husband She drank thereof and did die, the boy not knowing that it contained the dose. Mr. Jones returned to find his wife dead, and the boy told him of the conspiracy. After Mattie's attempt to burn the school-house the father and boy told the people what kind of a woman Mattie is. And Mattie Jones is still running loose in Arkansas.

About a Green Kid-Glove.

[Hartford Post.]

A few days ago a Hartford patent-lawyer, who is as good-looking as he is polite and as polite as he is good-looking, was on board the inward bound morning train over the Connecticut Western road. On board the same train was a pretty young lady, whose destination was Tariffville. The patent-lawyer was acquainted with the young lady, and conversed with her during the journey, and when she reached Tariffville (as she had a travelling-bag, etc.) politely assisted her from the train. Re-entering the car, he noticed lying in the aisle, close to the seat which, according to his impression, the young lady had occupied, a lady's kid glove, color green. It at once flashed upon him that his pretty acquaintance had dropped it; and, the train having started, he sprang to the window, raised it, looked out, caught the eye of the young lady on the depot platform, and waved the glove at her. The young lady nodded and smiled, and the patent-lawyer, naturally thinking the nod and smile tokens of proprietorship and gratitude, dropped the glove to the ground, and closed the window. But as he settled back in his seat, thinking what a good thing he had done, and congratulating himself upon his quick comprehension of and mastery over the situation, his eye fell upon a young lady in the opposite seat who had on one hand a kid-glove, color green, and who was looking anxiously about for its mate. And then that wretched young patent-lawyer arose and betook himself to the smoking-car to smoke and tear his hair and bewail his folly. And those two young ladies have each an odd glove from which to cut the fingers if they are so unfortunate as to have a felon.

The Crippled Navy.

It is a little unfortunate at this juncture that the request of the Secretary of the Navy for a larger appropriation, made in his last report, was not heeded. But as Admiral Porter says, the people urge economy in times of peace, and when war comes, upbraid the government for being ill-prepared. The American navy stands low in the national list, and of the name of vessels which make a show in the register, a great number are dismantled and laid up at the various yards. While England has 5000 guns afloat, the United States has only 1300, nominally, while the vessels actually in service are scattered all over the globe. Happily, the day for wooden vessels has not gone by.

Carry the News to Hiram.

[Nashua Telegraph.]

Democratic candidates for governor, of the hay-seed pattern, are being brought out with rather confusing rapidity. Down in Strafford county we are told that Hon. Hiram R. Roberts is just the yeoman for the emergency. Up in Grafton we are offered a choice between Joseph Powers of Haverhill and Jeremiah Blodgett of Wentworth. In spite of these names, and more to come, of hardshelled democrats who could fill the executive chair, the Manchester Union still insists that New Hampshire is "exhausted of men." Tell that to the marines.

As an indication of the good time coming the head-line of the Alodo Democratic Banner, published in Mercer county, Illinois, are significant. Under a defiant rooster, with head and tail erect, occur the following startling announcements: "The Whole Anti-Monopoly Ticket Elected;" "Cornstalks Will Make Sugar;" Miss Walker Defeated by Thirty-one Votes;" "Miss Frazier Elected;" "A Certain Bachelor Happy." This tells the story eloquently, and leaves the reader at liberty to imagine the joy of Miss Frazier and the "certain bachelor," and the corresponding discomfiture of Miss Walker and the "other feller."

—At one of the Detroit hotels was a family traveling West from Vermont. The wife was continually badgering the husband for his method of doing this and that, evidently supposing that everybody else was noticing his unaristocratic ways. At the table she passed him the potatoes, and he took off a small mountain, and in three minutes held his plate for more. She winked at him, but he was determined, and he shouted: "Elizabeth Jones, you may wink and blink all day, but I'm going to have some more tater or bust the bank!" He got some.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street, I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that there can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be fine superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended to with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tunings, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Strangling, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

To Messrs. Littlefield & Co., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to have myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, choklings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

How should a Lady Fasten Her Stockings?
[Charlton (Mo.) Brunswicker.]

How shall a woman fasten her stockings so as not to interfere with the circulation of blood, or spoil the le—that is, what measure shall be taken to prevent shrinkage and warpage of the le—let us see—of the—Honi soit qui mal y pense? After the most careful research, as far as our limited facilities would allow, we arise from our explorations, and humbly tender the following suggestions:

Wear them short, and let the top bubble over the shoe in a form of lace, a la beer-mug.

If you will have them long, put mucilage inside and stick 'em to you.

Have them long enough to tie about your waist, using the knot for a pannier.

Edge the tops with steel, and fasten a loadstone to your corset.

Fasten a strap to each stocking, extend them gracefully up each side of the body, and attach, with blue ribbons, to the ear-rings.

Pin them to some other article of clothing in their immediate vicinity.

[Hold still now; we are doing this for your good].

Fasten them to a gail and go barefooted.

Attach a small balloon to each stocking.

Make them out of material that will draw up.

If you are thirty-five and unmarried make a hole near the top of each stocking and button it to your knee-cap.

These are all the methods that suggest themselves to us at present, and of the number some one or more may be deemed worthy of adoption. We have taken a sudden and lively interest in this matter, and shall not rest until the needed reform is brought about. Woman's limbs shall not be hampered, and knotted, and deformed, if we have enough inventive faculty to bring to light new and healthful ways of wearing stockings, and we think we have. We shall continue our investigations into this subject, even at the hazard of getting our neck into the matrimonial noose. What the women of this country most need is not suffrage, but symmetry; not rights, but rationality; not a place in our legislative halls, but a place to fasten their stockings. Let all true-hearted men join with us in a search for that place.

—Somebody has found time to count up the number of churches in New York city. There are 350 in all, valued at something over $46,000,000. This count does not include several church buildings now in process of erection, and among them the Roman Catholic Cathedral.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

WILLIAM CRITCHLEY,
Agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards of Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other exhibitant. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the mother's milk. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States, also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Invention, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.

The character which this MAGAZINE possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with it in both matter and times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The MAGAZINE has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Art Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of the paper and engravings in any other shade or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14×20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For the CHROMOS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

The Country Gentleman.

Volume for 1874.

THE CULTIVATOR & COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, for the past forty years, has ranked, both in this country and abroad, as the STANDARD JOURNAL OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. The Editors and Proprietors, in addition to their own personal labors, are regularly assisted by a very large number of Special Correspondents and Regular Contributors, among whom are included many Leading Agriculturists, in all parts of the Country, East and West—and by over Five Hundred Occasional and Voluntary Writers, directly in the ranks of the Best Farmers and Horticulturists of nearly every State in the Union. With the co-operation of so large a corps of practical men, this Journal is intended to possess exceptional value as the chosen Medium of Intercommunication among all classes interested in the Products and Fertility of the land—those who Cultivate and those who Consume—the Buyer and Shipper, as well as the first Owner of the crop—Breeders of Improved Animals and their Customers—Manufacturers of Improved Machinery and those who purchase and employ it—Nurserymen and Fruit Raisers—and, especially, to supply fuller and better data as to the progress, prospects and returns of each successive Season, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and when to Sell.

TERMS—The Country Gentleman is published weekly, on the following terms, when paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; FOUR COPIES, $10, and an additional copy to the Club for one to the sender of the Club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it cleans and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam is put on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

"A New Thing Under the Sun."
SIXTEEN OIL PAINTINGS IN A BOOK!
Never before was such an idea attempted for book illustration; every one who has seen it pronounces it superb. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work,
Woman in Sacred History,
is a series of narrative sketches, drawn from Scriptural, historical and legendary sources, ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTEEN CHOICE OIL CHROMOS, after paintings by the most celebrated artists in the world, giving a rich and magnificent variety of Oriental costume and beauty. Mrs. Stowe, in her charming style, has written a book full of interest, and without a dull page in it, which even if not illustrated would sell rapidly; but the
make it one of the most unique, original and remarkable books ever offered. The pictures, if published separately, would readily sell for $2 each, or $32, while the entire book, with the sixteen pictures, together with numerous bindings of the volume, can be had for one-fifth of that amount. The book is making a tremendous sensation among the agents and salesmen, because it is absolutely new, and "has money in it." To get pleasant work and good pay, send for terms, circulars, &c., to J. H. FORD & CO., N. Y., Boston, Chicago, San Francisco or Cincinnati. tdl3

Daily Chronicle.

A BROKEN BRIDGE.

[Chambers' Journal.]

I reached the little Welsh town of Abermaw one boisterous afternoon in autumn at about four o'clock, after a long tramp over the mountains. Abermaw, as its name implies, is situated at the mouth of the river Maw, which here forms an estuary about a mile broad. The town itself faces the open sea; the harbor lies about half a mile up the estuary; whilst between the town and the harbor was the outline of a huge bridge then in course of construction. Abermaw is a little bit of a place, consisting of a hotel, a few shops, a church, a chapel of ease, and half-a-dozen lodging-houses, which are built on a platform of sand, the work of the sea and river in concert or in conflict. The old fishing village is perched upon the rocks above, tier upon tier, the lintel-stone of one house looking down the chimney of the house below, and is reached by rude rocky steps, where the children of the village swarm up and down, and yet rarely contrive to break their necks.

The further shore of the estuary was a triangular spit of sand, across which was a track that joined the high-road at a point where it commenced to mount the shoulder of a wave-beaten cliff on the fence of which it was terraced; for on the further or southern side of the estuary the sea washed up to the very base of the rocks that formed the rugged fringe of this iron-bound coast. There was a ferry from the Abermaw side to the spit of sand, and thence, by a detour of several miles you could make your way along the southern bank of the river to the town of Dolbadarn. As the crow flies, Dolbadarn was not more than seven miles distant from Abermaw, but it could not be reached by any practicable track in less than from ten to eleven miles; for the river took a wide sweep to the north, and, in addition to the detour thus caused, the first bridge where the road crossed the river was at a point a good way wide of Dolbadarn, so that, altogether, the distance was lengthened to that above mentioned. On the other hand, if you crossed the ferry, and made your way across the sand to the highway, the distance was much the same, and this latter route was of course only practicable to foot-passengers.

Although I had reached Abermaw in the guise of a free and independent pedestrian, yet my liberty was of a restricted nature. My wife and children had gone by the regular coach-route to Dolbadarn, and I had crossed the mountains by a wild foot-track, promising to join them that night at Dolbadarn in time for dinner; for I had intended to take the coach at Abermaw, which would have brought me to the end of my journey in good time. This coach, however, I had missed by just five minutes. My walk that day had been a long one, and I was rather fagged, and should probably have hired a conveyance for the remainder of the distance; but the manner of the landlord of the hotel was so abrupt, and, as I thought, offensive, in answer to my inquiries, that I resolved, come what might, he should not be a sixpence the richer for me.

I walked on till I came to a little public house at the further end of the town, close to the rough quay that bordered the estuary, and turned in there for a glass of beer and a crust of bread and cheese, as well as for the purpose of making a few inquiries as to my route.

"Well, indeed," said Evan Rowlands, the landlord, "there's no possible way to get to Dolbadarn to-night, not unless you take a car from Mr. Jones's."

"I shan't have a car from Mr. Jones's," I said. "Can't I hire one anywhere else?"

Evan shook his head; there was no horse or car in Abermaw except the horses and cars owned by Mr. Jones.

"Very well, then," I said, I would walk.

"Not possible," said Evan; "it's more than ten miles."

"I wouldn't mind the distance, only I've walked five-and-twenty miles already."

"Dear me!" said Evan; "you're very strong!"

"Can't I get a boat part of the way?" I suggested.

Evan put his head out at the door. "No!" he cried; "the tide has just turned; it is running down very strong."

"Then there is nothing for it but walking," I said; "I must go round by Llanfair Bridge." But I didn't like the idea of this ten miles, walk through the mist and gathering gloom.

"Stop!" said Evan. "Why shouldn't you go over the bridge—the railway bridge?"

"Is the bridge passable then? Can you get across?"

"O dear, yes. The gentlemen from the railway come over very often and to-day Hugh Pugh and David Morris did come over from the Dolbrith Quarry."

"And what distance will that save me?"

"Four or five miles; yes, sure."

"And the bridge is quite safe?"

"Oh, it is very strong and safe, indeed; or how should Hugh Pugh and David Morris come over, and the railway gentlemen, too; yes, sure."

"And the railway people won't object to my going over?"

"They've all knocked off work for the day, and there won't be a soul near the bridge but yourself."

"Then of course I'll go over it."

But I found that there were certain difficulties in the way. The railway bridge crossed the estuary at a point about a quarter of a mile from the little inn that formed the extremity of the town, at a spot where its channel was narrowed to a distance of about three-quarters of a mile. The unfinished bridge was constructed of piles firmly driven into the bed of the river, from which rose huge piers of timber to the height of about forty feet. Along these were massive balks, destined to support the platform of the bridge, whilst each pier was strengthened and supported by its neighbor by an arrangement of cross-beams and ties.

When I reached the bank of the river with my guide, Evan Rowlands, I found that there was a considerable hiatus between the shore and the nearest pier—about a hundred yards. Evan, however, was prepared with a plan for reaching it. A friend of his was the master of the little sloop, the Ann Jones, which was lying in the tiny brook above. He and his mate were now on board her, and they had got their little dingy with them. Evan would borrow the boat, and drop down with the stream, and deposit me at the foot of the nearest pier.

"But why not ferry me right over the river?" I asked.

"Not possible," said Evan. There were shallows and quicksands at the other side which at this time of the tide were very dangerous.

So we made our way along the road which overlooks the estuary, till we came to the little harbor. Evan had no difficulty in borrowing the dingy, and we were soon afloat, shooting quickly down the stream.

It was almost dark now, for although the sun was not yet down, the storm that was gathering up on the horizon obscured hist light. Great volumes of cloud and vapor were driving up before the wind, which howled and moaned intermittingly, as blast succeeded blast, and died away again. The wind and the tide in opposition made the water pretty rough, and our boat danced up and down in a very lively way. Presently the black skeleton of the bridge loomed up as through the mist, and Evan dexterously brought up his boat in the little eddy that was formed by the abutments of the pier, and then he called to me to jump from the stern of the dingy on to a crosspiece that formed a sort of platform a foot or so from the water's edge.

I jumped, and landed safely on the balk, and then I found my way upwards was by climbing the nearest pier, across which were nailed rough, irregular staves, which constituted what is called a workman's ladder. I had no intention of undertaking any acrobatic feats, and the idea of climbing up to that giddy height by such rough, unreliable supports was distasteful enough. I would'nt try it. I would go back in the boat to dry land once more. But the boat had spun away on the tide, and was now far out of earshot, or indeed eyeshot either. There I stood, then, in the midst of a rushing, raging sea, upon a balk of timber, embracing a huge black pier, the head of which was lost in the gloom and mist overhead. I couldn't stay here: I must get across the bridge at all hazards, and my only way was upwards.

Up I went slowly, step by step, testing each frail splinter's stave ere I trusted my weight to it. More than one broke away in my hands, and fell into the sea below. But when I reached the top, I thought, then all this danger would be over. I should find a rope for the hand.

When I came to the top of the pier, I saw stretched out before me a beam, suspended, as it seemed, in mid-air, a narrow beam—more like a rope, it seemed to me—stretched over this wild abyss of raging waves—that and nothing else. There were footprints in the narrow ridge of timber. It was not more than two feet wide at the broadest—and the sight of them gave me courage. Men had passed over here before me; I would pass too. And so, without giving myself a moment more to think, I stepped; and the moment when letting go with my hands, I stood upon that topmost round of the ladder, and balanced myself for an instant, as I placed my foot upon the plank—that moment in which I seemed to quiver, and sway to and fro, high up on this giddy perch, beyond the ken of any human eye—that moment of dizzy terror, of strange whirling thoughts, of instincts to cast myself headlong into the sea, was in sensation as any ordinary week of placid being; and yet it came and went like any other moment, and I stood erect upon the beam, and began my perilous way.

I heard the wind far off, bellowing among the breakers, on the bar; I heard it screeching and howling over the flats. I felt a moment's calm, the strange, unnatural hush, and then the rush and leap of the storm, as it hurried by me. Dashing the salt spray into my eyes, it came seizing all the loose corners of my apparel, and cracking them like whip-lashes, carrying away my feeble breath in its wild course, but leaving me—yes, thank God—leaving me still balanced on my plank.

The gusts had cleared the mists for a space, and I could now see before me, though indistinctly enough, but I could see that there was only another length of unprotected balk; beyond that was a broad, safe platform of timber, stretched from pier to pier. Oh, to feel that platform safe under my feet! I traversed the balk almost at a run. I must reach safety before there came another gust of that fierce wind.

I heard it coming now, but I was almost home—yes, home, for that rough, unsheltered platform, on this rude night, seemed like a home to me. I was stepping firmly and quickly along. Suddenly a chasm seemed to open under my feet—a horrible chasm. The beam on which I stood came suddenly to an end. For some eight feet it had been cut away, and there was nothing to help me over the dreadful gap. Without wings, it was impossible to pass.

All hope left me. I knew that to retrace my steps was impossible to me. Even if I reached the end from which I had started, I should be no better off than here, and the hopelessness of the position awakened my every nerve. Once more I heard the wind rising and hurling along toward me. I would cling to life as long as I could. I knelt down on the wet, slippery balk, clasped it with my arms, sat astride it. The gust came up fierce and strong, passed over me once more—once more spared me.

But I felt that I could not survive another such attack; I should be blown away like a leaf. And yet there was no hope of escape—none. It was only a question of moments how long, with stiffening limbs, I could cling to this rough beam: then a plunge into darkness.

Still I had time to think. What were my thoughts! A helpless sense of cruelty, of the horrible unfeelingness and malignity of this hurling wind, of these raging waves. A sad mortification, too, and sense of injustice, that I should lose my life for nothing; a pleasant ramble turned to such an evil end. Of the past I thought nothing; it was nothing to me now—a tale that was told; that was all. Of the future, nothing either, except a dim and awful wonder. But plainly, vividly before my eyes I saw the figure of my wife, sitting at work by the fire, waiting and watching for me—for me, who never should come. That was the bitterness of it.

And yet withal I was not unconscious of a certain vague sense of the ludicrous—of scorn of myself, that I should be thus stuck up astride a beam, like some lad at play, a sport for the buffetings of the elements. With this, too, an unspeakable rage; a kind of crushed defiance, a revolt against the doom which was imminent, a revolt which felt itself hopeless and useless from its beginning.

Whilst all this storm of conflicting thoughts was whirling through my brain, the turmoil outside was diminishing. The wind had hushed for awhile, and across my face there came for a moment a sort of ruddy glow, the last beams of the sun settling rapidly into the sea. The vapors divided for a moment, the huge dark mass of a mountain frowned down upon me—for a moment only—then the clouds encompassed me once more—the glow died away—the awful gloomy gray of night began to gather in upon me like a net.

Should I drop into the sea, and end it all? To die in the dark would be more horrible than anything else. Even on the quietest, most resigned death-bed, the loss of light is the most disquieting trouble to the departing soul. Light! more light! is the last cry of the spirit in extremity. And now it seemed as though nature had determined to spare me no pang of all the gathering horrors of my doom. Darkness and despair were settling down upon my soul.

Then came the storm once more with a rush of gathered rain, a howl, a shout, a roar of triumph, as the shrill wind trumpeted past, precursor of a more furious blast. I could bear no more. A sapless, nerveless form I was, swept from the beam like a withered leaf from a branch, and I fell—catching at some cross-beams as I fell, but losing my hold in a moment, and dropping helplessly down.

Once more consciousness returned. A vague silvery light was diffused about me, above were stars shining, huge balks of timber glimmered overhead. I was stretched upon a bed of wet sand, lying on my back, looking up into the sky.

I was not dead, then. No! Was I maimed, crushed? I drew up one limb after another, fearing lest a sudden shout of agony should betray some grievous hurt. But no! I was sound in limb; and as I raised myself and looked about, I felt that, except for dizziness and a wonderful ringing that was ceaselessly going on in my head, I was unhurt. And I was saved? That was as might happen.

When I rose and stood upon my feet, I looked around me, and found that I had fallen upon a little island, a narrow spit of sand that had formed in the eddy caused by the pile of the bridge. On each side of it ran a strong and rapid current.

All this I saw by the light of the moon, sometimes bright, sometimes obscured, as she parted her way among the fast driving clouds.

Distantly across the waters shone the lights of the little town. It had its gas lamps, which sparkled brilliantly in the night; and from out of the black rocks which showed against the sky-line, here and there the soft light of a candle in a cottage window gleamed like a fairy lamp.

On the other side of the estuary there were no lights; but the straining eye might discern the gloom of high hills, that seemed, indeed, only like darksome chasms in the sky; but as I watched, I saw a tiny star that was gliding among the rocks. Now seen now lost, I followed it with longing eyes; and listening intently, I heard the clatter of horses' hoofs, and the murmur of wheels rising and falling, as the road wound in and out among the rocks further or nearer. It was some carriage rolling rapidly towards home—towards my home, and here was I a castaway.

I shouted, but my voice seemed lost in the great space. The wind carried it up the river, blew it away into stifled fragments. It was useless to cry. No one would hear me. How long should I have to live? Was there any chance that I might yet escape? I could not swim; the channel on either side was, therefore, an unpassable barrier. Even had I been an excellent swimmer I doubt if in my enfeebled state I could have won the further bank of the channel, where the current was running the least swiftly. How long would my island remain uncovered by the sea?

Six or eight feet above my head tangled masses of sea-weed hanging in the interstices of the woodwork showed the highest reach of the tide. The ebb had commenced an hour before I started from Abermaw. Allowing an hour for my subsequent adventures, the ebb would still have three hours to run; then another three hour's flood would elapse before the tide would once more reach me. I remembered that I had a flask of metal in my pocket which still contained a dram of brandy, and that I had a few fragments of biscuit in my pocket, remaining of some that my wife had packed up for my use a couple of days before. I drank the brandy and munched the biscuits, and felt again hopeful. Six hours! Why, in that time help might come. Death was no longer imminent.

But I was entirely wrong. The strong southwesterly gales had piled up the waters about the mouth of the estuary, so that the ebb was checked, and the flood increased, and the tide ran out only some three hours. I must have been longer lying on the sand, too, than I had calculated, for, as I watched the waters hurrying down on each side of me, I noticed that the current seemed to slacken all of a sudden; then it stopped, so that a fragment of bleached wood that was floating downward came to a rest, then moved slowly once more upwards. The tide had turned.

In a very short time the vast expanse of waters before me, that had just now seemed a broad river outlet, scored and marked with sand-banks, assumed the appearance of an agitated sea. Short waves hurried along, their white crests gleaming in the moonlight; they came in serried lines, tier over tier; the hoarse roar of the advancing tide reverberated in the air, mingling in my brain with the strange rattle as of bells that never ceased to jingle therein.

How remorseless they seemed, those waves, hurrying up, like hounds who view their prey! And yet it was a solemn scene; and what there was of dignity and grandeur in the sight half reconciled me to the thought that my life would be swallowed up ere long in these advancing battalions of serried waves; for now the bitterness of death was past; its terrors had vanished; I felt a profound sadness—that was all.

How far could I climb up the slimy, slippery posts and buttresses, that seemed to mock me with their lying proffers of safety? A couple of crossbeams or ties which bound together the lower ends of the piers afforded at their intersection a sort of angular resting-place, where I could, for a time, perhaps, find a refuge from the waves. This was far below high-water mark, so that to reach it would only give me a short respite from my final agony; but, for all that, I determined to attempt it. As soon as the water covered the little island on which I stood I would try to climb this slippery beam, that rose from the sand, in which it was partly buried, at an angle of about forty-five degrees.

With the tide rose the wind; with the wind came rain and fog. The moon, blurred and indistinct, shone faintly for a while, and then vanished altogether, although her diffused light still made everything darkly visible. Soon the waves were dashing at my feet, the sand a pulp beneath. Now was the time to make my last effort for a little more life. But I found that I had over-rated my own powers. I crawled a few feet up the slippery timber; then I fell back. Again I tried, and again; but it was of no use. Strength does not come of eager desire to be strong. All that I could do was to clasp my arms round the beam and stand upright, awaiting the coming of the waters.

The water rose, not gradually, but in pulses. Smaller waves came and went, and left no change of level; but every now and then some heavier, fiercer billow would come in with a devouring sweep, covering me with its foam and spray, receding again, but at each recession leaving a greater depth of swaying life-like water. These attacks, like buffets from the hand of some skilled boxer, left me weaker and weaker at every blow. And it was so treacherous, too, the water. It would draw away for a time, leaving me free almost to my knees; and then, as if driven by some sudden impulse, it would gather itself up, and return in a great seething swathe of water that would swallow me up from head to foot.

The end was fast coming now. I had ceased to feel anything. Only a dogged determination to stick to life to the last kept me clinging to my beam.

But, what was that sound? A long and piercing scream, a roar, and a rumble, and a rattle—it was an engine!

An engine coming along the completed part of the bridge, shrieking and screaming and dashing out great wafts of white steam into the stormy air. The sound gave me fresh life and vigor. Human creatures were within reach, at all events. If I could make them hear me I might yet be saved.

The engine came slowly along, and I heard the voices of men shouting to one another. Why, then, should they not hear me? I tried, too, to shout, but my voice stuck in my throat. I couldn't make a sound louder than a whisper; no, not with all the good-will I had to shout like an arch-angel.

The engine came so near at last that I could see the glow of her fires through the interstices of the flooring of the bridge. And now there were men standing with lanterns at the very extremity of the bridge; and still I could not make them hear.

For an instant the glad thought had struck me that I had been missed, and that these men had come to look for me; but the next moment I saw the folly of the idea. Days might elapse before my fate was known. I was not even yet beyond the time I had fixed for reaching home. No; the men were railway workmen, perhaps going to do a night's shift of work on the bridge; and I couldn't make them hear.

Suddenly I heard a sharp, quick bark, and then a growl as of anger or inquiry, and was conscious that there was a dog with the men above. The dog's faculties were keener than the men's; perhaps it was possible I might make him hear; so I barked a shrill snapping bark, with which I had often deceived my own terrrier Jock. The dog acknowledged the challenge and replied furiously. Then I heard the voice of a man shouting to the dog to be quiet; but the dog barked furiously, standing at the very verge of the platform, as though it would throw itself over. Then some men came to the edge of the platform, too, and peeped over, and then in my extremity I gave a cry—a wild, despairing cry. Then a huge hoarse wave dashed over me.

If it had not been for the consciousness that help was near, I could not have held on against that furious rush of water; but I did hold on, at least I think so; and when the wave receded, a bright dazzling light shone into my eyes, a light from the bridge where some one was holding what seemed to be a portable sun, but that was actually a piece of burning magnesium wire. Then everything disappeared in the blackest darkness.

"Did you see anything?" cried a voice.

"I'm not sure; I thought I saw something move."

A couple of lamps from the engine were now brought, and placed at the edge of the platform; they lit up the beams and rafters of the bridge, but the light seemed to be lost in the dark waters! Ah! they would never see me!

Once more I had strength to cry.

"Ah! it's a man down there," I heard somebody shout.

A long plank was run over the gap in the bridge; then another; along the two a portable windlass was quickly wheeled; a bucket descended, in it a man with a lantern.

"Holloa, mate?" he cried, as he caught sight of my white face in the focus of his lamp; "what the deuce are you doing here?"

In another moment I was standing in safety on the further side of the bridge. I owed my rescue to the unexpected visit of the chief-engineer of the line, who had come down to see with his own eyes the manner in which the bridge behaved in a heavy gale, and driven with the engine to the farthest accessible point of the platform.

What a comfortable glass of brandy-and-water that was of which I partook by the warmth of the engine furnace, and how exhilarating the run homewards on the swift shrieking engine!

I was at Dolbadarn in time for dinner, after all. As I sat down to the cheerful meal with friends who were discussing the light ordinary topics of the day, I looked about me, wondering if I were really here in actual corporeal presence, or if my life had ended in that last rush of water, and I were only dreaming, "for in that sleep of death what dreams may come!"

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1873.

Death of John P. Hale.

After a lingering and painful illness Hon. John P. Hale died at his residence in Dover at about 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening. He had been confined to his house since the middle of last July, just before which time he met with two accidents, from the effects of which his death was at that time daily expected. He was injured in the first place by being thrown from a carriage, and again, shortly after, by falling down stairs in his own house. He sustained a fracture of the hip, and having been in infirm health for a number of years, the result which has now been sadly realized was immediately feared.

Mr. Hale was born in Rochester, March 31, 1806, and was consequently 67 years old. He was graduated at Bowdoin College in 1827, was admitted to the bar in 1830, and almost immediately became prominent in politics. In 1832 he was a member of the State legislature; from 1834 until 1842 he was district-attorney for the State, then for three years member of Congress, afterwards in the legislature again, and speaker of the house one term, during which he was elected to the United States Senate. At the close of his first term, in 1853, he failed of re-election, but was chosen again two years afterwards and retained his seat for ten years, making a total service of sixteen years, during an eventful period of our history. He left the Senate in 1865 to accept the position of minister to Spain, where he remained until 1869. In 1851 he was counsel for the defendant in the famous Shadrach rescue trial in Boston, and in 1852 the candidate of the free-soil party for the presidency, receiving 157,680 votes.

Mr. Hale was one of the foremost of the anti-slavery pioneers, the faithful associate of Chase, Giddings, Lovejoy and others whose earnest labors first awoke the public conscience to the horrors of slavery. His career has been one that New Hampshire may point to with pride.

The Spanish Imbroglio.

The situation has undergone no material change in the last twenty-four hours. It is understood in Washington that Spain is ready to admit that when the officers capturing the Virginius found that she had regular American papers, and was flying our flag, that—whatever her crew and cargo were believed to be—it was the duty of the Spanish authorities in Cuba to have notified the United States officials, and to have refrained from summary proceedings. For the insult implied in the violation of this duty, it is believed that Spain is quite ready to make amends. Whether she will go further and disown the action of the officers who made the capture, and order the trial of those officials who were responsible for the wholesale executions, is now regarded as quite doubtful, owing to the belief that the Castelar government will not be able to maintain itself with the people it it exhibits too much friendship for the United States. Spain virtually admits that her decrees are openly ignored in Cuba, and that she has not thus far been able to enforce those which concern the property of Americans. In the present case it may be considered as well-nigh certain that if Spain cannot enforce whatever orders for redress she may give, the President will recommend that our forces take immediate possession of Havana and one or two other ports, and hold them until indemnity has been secured for the past, and a recurrence of the difficulties is rendered impossible. In case our government interferes at all, it will take occasion to settle several questions not involved in the Virginius trouble, even if the steps do not proceed so far as annexation. These are, an insisting upon the observation of the decree of emancipation and the adoption of fair and just commercial relations between the two countries. There is no desire on the part of the administration to stir up a war with Spain, and the belief is growing that hostilities will be avoided unless the Castelar government is restrained from cordial action by the necessity of yielding to the opinions of the opposition for the sake of saving itself.

Silly Billy as Sir Forcible Feeble.

[Foster's Democrat.]

A paper printed down at Portsmouth is setting forth in Sir Forcible Feeble's best style, what it calls the demand of the democrats of that city in relation to the cause of temperance. This demand is, as it alleges, "that the democratic party, in its next State Convention, place itself squarely upon a license-law platform." It is perhaps a great pity that those democrats, whoever they may be, represented by that organ, cannot have their demands answered. A demand is something imperative, and when made, should always be by a party or power having authority to make it, otherwise it must be simply ridiculous. Now, as the democrats of Portsmouth are noted for their modesty and gentleness of bearing, especially in democratic conventions, and were never known to assume any imperious attitude amongst their fellows, we are forced to believe that the young man of the organ is striking just a little bit wild. He should strive to tame his ambition and not become overmuch fructified by applying too liberally of narrow local inspirations. Inordinate expansions are highly improper in these panicky times, and are frequently followed by very bad results. We have great respect for the democracy of Portsmouth. They deserve to be truly represented on all occasions. We presume they will be represented in the State Convention. If so, there will be no demands, but, with the representatives from other portions of the State, they will join in consultation and in the adoption of measures and policies believed to be for the best good of all the people.

But it is amusing to see how this young man down on Strawberry Bank elucidates himself. He says "spirituous and malt liquors, etc., etc., will continue to be made and the attempt to prohibit their use is sheer folly;" also, "if it were practicable, it would be a crime to do so." So we are reduced to this sad fix—it is a crime to prevent people from getting drunk, but we should legalize the business, which is charitable to drunkards, and probably intended as at least a partial offset to the execution of that law emanating from almost as good authority as this set up at Portsmouth, which declares that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. We cannot help admiring the simple assurance that it is a crime to prohibit people from getting drunk. It is moreover a happy thought that this mandate repeals the Divine law.

Of course, we must bow to the same authority when it decrees us to be "narrow minded and illiberal," and "willfully blind to truth and the teachings of experience." But we may perhaps be permitted to humbly inquire upon what sort of meat doth this Portsmouth Cæsar feed that he should grow so great? We naturally feel our insignificance in such a presence.

But again he says: "Any statute law that is inoperative becomes for that very reason odious to all law-abiding citizens." From which we infer that the alleged "inoperative" character of the prohibitory law is the only thing that makes it "odious." The most natural remedy for this "odiousness" would seem to be to make the law thoroughly operative where it is not so already. This is in fact the only possible way to test the the real character of any law. But this argument against the law applies with equal force to many other laws. The law against larceny is inoperative to prevent theft. The law against licentiousness is inoperative to prevent libidinous wretches from plying their vile practices. The laws against arson and murder are inoperative in the prevention of house burning and human butchery. Now let us follow out the argument. Repeal all these laws and license stealing, licentiousness, arson and murder, in order to relieve the people and the State from the odiousness of their inoperative character, and thus instal the millennium of glory straightway.

We have the right to pursue this line of argument because this Portsmouth oracle claims to be temperance par excellence, and demands a license law to promote the cause of temperance. True, no mortal man can imagine a greater inconsistency. Promote the cause of temperance by licensing the traffic which causes all the intemperance in the land! This is on that queer system of the empirics that the bite of a dog may be cured by applying the hair of the same beast.

Let us hope that wisdom may gain upon the young man as he grows riper in years.

The Man of Enterprise creates; the weak imitator tries to copy him. Does any sensible man suppose that legions of "Buchus" so-called, that infest the drug stores, possess the real merit of Dr. Helmbold's Genuine Extract? Any sufferer from Kidney Complaint, Dropsy, Diabetes, or other urinary diseases, in male or female, will detect the difference at once by the result. Helmbold's cures: the others fail. The genuine bears Dr. Helmbold's signature. For sale by all druggists.

Worn to a Shadow.

Flesh, muscle and mind alike deteriorate when the stomach falters in its duty and the bowels do not perform their part as scavengers of the system regularly and naturally. In chronic dyspepsia the body is usually emaciated, and the muscular fibre loose and flabby, and the brain incapable of prolonged or vigorous exertion. Every organ, every member, even the immortal mind itself, is to a certain extent dependent upon the stomach for support. Strengthen and regulate this feeder of the system with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, when it fails to perform its functions properly. A good appetite, an increased flow of the gastric juice, and perfect digestion and assimilation will assuredly be the result. The manner in which the great tonic and alterative effects a cure of dyspepsia is direct and simple. It stimulates the digestive organs, cleanses without convulsing the bowels, regulates the flow of bile and determines it into the right channels, and exercises a tranquilizing influence over the nerves.

On my journeys over the continent—through Turkey, India, China, Japan, Peru, Chili, Paraguay, Brazil, Mexico, and the United States—in them all to some extent, and in some to a great extent, I have found the UNIVERSAL AYER represented by his family medicines, which are often held in fabulous esteem. Whether they win their marvelous reputation by their cures, I know not, but I know they have it to such a degree that it frequently gave me a distinguished importance to have come from the same country.—[Field's letters from abroad.

Town Hall Dedication.

Rye's new town hall underwent the process of dedication in due style and with appropriate ceremonies on Wednesday evening. The building was the old Methodist church, which the combined skill of architect and workmen has transmogrified into a neat and attractive hall, handsomely fitted up, and amply spacious for the purposes to which it will hereafter be devoted. The ceremonies of dedication consisted of an opening address by G. B. Philbrick, chairman of the building committee; the singing of the Star Spangled Banner, with music by Harlow's naval band; prayer by Rev. Mr. Morrill; the delivery of the keys by Mr. Philbrick to the chairman of the selectmen, with appropriate remarks, the cost of the work being stated at $2640, and the contractor, Oliver L. Locke, being complimented on the faithful performance of his work. The remaining exercises consisted of interesting historical addresses by Rev. Mr. Aldern Rev. Mr. Mousel, and Mr. J. H. James, which were interspersed with music. After this part of the programme had been gone through with to the satisfaction of all present, the dedication was clinched by the young people with a joyous dance. And thus closed one of the most interesting occasions our sister town has ever known.

Steam Fire Alarms.

Messrs Editors: Within the past few years steam whistles have been successfully used in other cities, and partially so here. But at this season of the year, when the bells are so deadened by the storms and severity of the weather, it seems to us that some more effective method should be resorted to in the more compact part of the city to arouse the people in these localities. The steam gongs at the breweries, and the shrill whistles of the locomotives are a great improvement, in connection with the bells. But both are located so far from the centre of our city that it seems as if some method should be resorted to whereby a general and effective alarm could be sounded. We would suggest to the city government and the public in general that one or two more of these steam alarms be placed within the city; what better place could there be than the Kearsarge mills for one, and another on Harris' brewery? These, in connection with the others now used, would undoubtedly, be worth two or more bells, and be more effective in a longer range. No doubt half the delay of our fire department in getting to the scene of action is partially due to not hearing the alarm. We hope this matter will be carefully considered. T.

Laconics.

The case of Jeff. C. Rowe vs. Eastern Railroad Co. has been postponed to the January term of the S. J. Court.

A man by the name of Thompson stole a valuable coat from the house of Mr. Frank Martin, who lives on the corner of High and Hanover streets, Thursday. The fellow has escaped arrest.

Schooner Charles Upton, Capt. Belatty, from Ellsworth for this port, went ashore on the Eastern Sisters at half-past two o'clock, Thursday morning. After remaining ashore five or six hours, she floated off, striking again on the Western Sisters. The tug Clara Bateman went to her assistance, towing her off and taking her into Newcastle. The schooner is probably ruined beyond repair. Part of her deck-load was lost.

The Kearsarge mills close operations on Saturday night. It is hoped and expected that the suspension will be but temporary, the proprietors having already announced that work will be resumed Dec. 15th. Owing to the depression in the markets, they have a large amount of goods on hand, which at present cannot be disposed of without loss. The opportunity will be taken to make necessary repairs to the machinery of the mills.

State News.

Sensible New Hampshire farmers have concluded rather to bear the hills they have, than fly to others that they know not of.

The Belknap quarterly meeting of Free-will Baptists, held in Alton a day or two ago, resolved that such games as "grab-bag," "fish-pond," "ring-cake" and "love among the roses" are contrary to the law of the land, the Free-will Baptist treatise, and the Bible.

A farmers' mass meeting is to be held in Manchester, Dec. 2d, to discuss the present position of the farming interest of the State. The call, which is endorsed by the board of agriculture and most of the agricultural societies of the State, says "no long-winded orators have been engaged for the occasion but good speakers will open the discussions, and farmers will have an opportunity to express their opinions with perfect freedom.

The town of Brentwood has not raised any money for town expenses for two years, the interest on the State bonds owned by the town, together with the five per cent. raised by taxation over the amount required to be raised by the State, being sufficient for all the expenses. There is neither grog-shop nor pauper in town.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MR. EDWARD DE Q. NORTON, formerly of Boston, late of Chicago, would inform the musical public that in the future orders for tuning, regulating and repairing Pianos and Organs may be left at MONTGOMERY'S MUSIC STORE, Market street. I should be happy to show the musical public that, with all the materials for work, and a thorough practical knowledge, both of music and mechanics, instruments neglected or pronounced by tuners desiring to get large jobs, difficult or costly to be repaired, that they can be scientifically, and with comparatively little cost, made nearly as good as new by the judicious outlay of material and labor. I have duplicates of all parts of the principal makes of instruments, so that if any part is broken or lost, it can be replaced at a small outlay, and be far superior to the jack-knife style of work so often done by irresponsible traveling tuners. I have opened rooms for the special purpose of Repairing, and being a resident tuner, offer advantages which I believe the public will not be slow to appreciate. Orders from out of town attended with promptness. Old instruments bought and sold, or taken in part pay for new.

As my business requires my whole attention at the store, I am obliged to relinquish tuning, and would recommend my customers to Mr. E. De Q. Norton, a competent and faithful tuner, who will attend promptly to all orders.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Clackings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & Co., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and have suffered all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, clackings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

An open Bible is a great blessing; of that we are sufficiently persuaded, but if the book of Daniel and the Apocalypse had remained under lock and key, whatever the world might have lost, the several thousand sets of brains that have become addled over the "beasts" and the "horns" and the "vials" would have been saved to healthier uses.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most efficacious cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded, to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other exhibitant. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.
